MOSCOW (AUG. 24) - The Russian Federation will respect the Soviet Union's trade commitments to foreign partners, Russian Deputy Prime Minister Gennady Fishin said Thursday, announcing a policy reversal.

"The process of redefining the duties and competence exercised by the republican and federal governments does not concern the international accords of the country," Fishin was quoted by the non-official Interfax agency as saying.

Russia will "fulfil its obligations towards foreign partners, including those recently contracted by the Soviet government without consulting the Russian government," Fishin added.

The announcement overturned decrees by the presidium of the largest republic in the Soviet Union, which a month ago "banned" the Soviet Union from exporting Russia's gold, precious stones and "strategic resources".

The ban had particularly concerned "the diamond trade with the Swiss subsidiary of the South African firm De Beers, which gave the company exclusive rights to sell Soviet diamonds for five years," Fishin said.

Russian Foreign Trade Minister Viktor Yaroshenko, meanwhile, Thursday said that Russia "bears 80 percent of the debt burden of the country, and there should be no doubt about Russia's ability to pay".

The republic had already obtained commitments from several foreign governments towards a new loan of five billion dollars to be used for debt service in 1991, Yaroshenko said, according to Interfax.

He did not name the countries concerned.

MATSUE, JAPAN (AUG. 24) - Japan's first parent-to-child liver transplant patient, 21-month-old Yuya Sugimoto, died of a multiple malfunction of his internal organs Friday, doctors said.

Prof. Yoshihiro Kosaka, who led the surgical team that conducted the liver transplant at the state-run Shimane Medical College on November 13, 1989, told a press conference that Yuya died early Friday due to complications resulting from the surgery.

The baby boy, the son of an Iwakuni couple in Yamaguchi Prefecture, in western Japan, was operated on for more than 15 hours to receive a part of his 26-year-old father Akihiro's liver.

Yuya, the first person in Japan to receive a liver transplant from a living donor, had been in hospital since the operation 285 days ago.

Prof. Kosaka said his team had done all it could to avoid the complications that proved fatal, adding that without the surgery, Yuya would have lived for only about three days.

Two more parent-to-child liver transplants have been carried out since -- at the Kyoto and Shinshu university medical colleges in June -- and both recipients, a seven-year-old girl and a nine-year-old boy, are reported in good condition.

TOKYO (AUG. 24) - Japan's vehicle output in July rose 10.1 percent from a year earlier to 1,211,253 units, a record for the month, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers' Association said Friday.

Association officials attributed the two-digit rise to an 8.3-percent increase in domestic shipments and an estimated three percent rise in exports in July.

Of the July output, cars accounted for 894,463 units, up 15.3 percent over a year ago.

But truck production fell 2.3 percent to 313,245 units and bus output was down 15.5 percent at 3,545 units.

Motorcycle output totalled 232,894 units, up only 30 units from 232,864 in July 1989.

Meanwhile Japan's two biggest carmakers Friday announced increased production in July, but while exports by Toyota Motor Corp. also rose during the month, exports by Nissan Motor Co. fell for the 11th month in a row.

Toyota said its worlwide ouput climbed 19.4 percent from a year earlier to 382,055 vehicles in July, a new record for the month, with production abroad jumping 39.8 percent to 56,374 units.

Exports rose 10.2 percent to 146,089 vehicles, while domestic sales were 6.7 percent higher at 245,929 units, it said.

Nissan said its production grew 4.5 percent to 263,905 vehicles, with overseas output rising 3.6 percent to 45,844.

Exports fell 11 percent to 77,302 units, while sales in Japan climbed 2.2 percent to 146,107, Nissan said.

MOSCOW (AUG. 24) - The central Asian republic of Turkmenia has proclaimed itself a sovereign national state with full authority over its entire territory, Tass news agency reported here Friday.

The local parliament voted unanimously in favor of the declaration at Thursday's session, the agency said.

The parliamentary session also mapped out guidelines for cooperation with other Soviet central Asian republics, discussed the draft convention on economic sovereignty and other documents on passage to a market economy, Tass said.

Kirghizia and Tadzhikistan are the only two Soviet republics which have yet to adopt sovereignty declarations.

Meanwhile, Moscow and most Soviet republics, with the exception of the Baltic states which want full independence, are engaged in discussions on a new union treaty.

JOHANNESBURG (AUG. 24) - Anglo American Industrial Corporation (AMIC), an associate company of Anglo and De Beers, has posted an unexpectedly sharp drop in interim earnings, latest figures show.

Earnings a share for the first six months of 1990 plunged 19.6 percent to 451 cents (174 U.S. cents). The interim dividend a share of 110 cents (42.6 U.S. cents) was maintained at the expense of dividend cover, which fell from 5.1 to 4.1.

The company, whose interests range from explosives and chemicals to food and textiles, blamed the poorer results on less-than-satisfactory half-year performances of some of its key profit contributors.

These include chemical group AECI and steelferro-alloy producer Highveld Steel and Vanadium.

AMIC's combined earnings from operations and share of earnings from associate companies fell 35.7 percent to 453 million rands (176.5 million dollars).

The company also brought to account extraordinary charges of 19.2 million rands (7.44 million dollars). This, coupled with a more than threefold jump in the interest bill, saw earnings attributable to ordinary shareholders fall 19.6 percent to 243 million rands (94.3 million dollars).

BEIJING (AUG. 24) - Iran has signed a deal to buy 40 million dollars worth of cable from China and is considering the purchase of telephones and other telecommunications equipment, the official China Daily said Friday.

The contract was concluded August 18 in Beijing by the telecommunications ministers of the two countries, the paper said, adding that Teheran planned to increase its purchases of Chinese postal and communications equipment to 100 million dollars a year.

The main commerce between the two countries has been sales of Chinese weapons to Iran, but the Middle Eastern country bought a first batch of 14 million dollars worth of cable from China in 1989.

Iran was also considering the purchase of telephones from Shanghai Bell, a Sino-U.S. joint venture, as well as Chinese teletext and facsimile machines, microwave transmission equipment and satellite stations, the paper said.

"If we are competitive enough in terms of price, big deals are possible," an unidentified Chinese official was quoted as saying.

The two sides also signed a memorandum of understanding on technology transfer, personnel training and the opening of new businesses, the newspaper said without elaborating.

AMRITSAR, INDIA (AUG. 24) - Heavily-armed paramilitary troops and police Thursday raided the Golden Temple, the Sikhs' holiest shrine, following reports that wanted militants were hiding in the complex, officials said Friday.

Some 100 paramilitary Central Reserve Police Force troopers and Punjab state police stormed a guest house inside the marble complex around 10:00 p.m. local time (1630 GMT) to arrest the militants, police said.

The raiders crashed through several rooms, meant for Sikh pilgrims, of Guru Ram Dass Sarai, but found no "unauthorised person" hiding inside, Amritsar city police chief Sanjiv Gupta said.

Thursday's raid on the 400-year-old shrine is the first since May 1988, when army commandos laid a 10-day seige to the Golden Temple in an operation codenamed "Black Thunder" to flush out militants.

Some 36 hardcore militants had died in the 1988 raid during which separatists and troops fired at least 60,000 rounds in a marathon gunbattle.

Intelligence sources in Amritsar, the hub of a Sikh separatist campaign, said Friday that the police called off its raid Thursday night after the suspected militants turned out to be police spies posted there by the security forces.

"We had specific information of the presence of terrorists in the guest house," Mr. Gupta said, adding that they must have escaped before the raid.

But the Sikh Gurdwaara Managing Committee (SGPC) -- the administrators of the Golden Temple -- claimed the troopers took away at least three people from one of the rooms of the shrine. They did not elaborate.

SGPC Secretary Manjit Singh Calcutta said neither he nor any other temple officials were informed in advance of the police action.

He described the operation as a "deliberate atempt to defame the shrine."

"There is no question of an intrusion by suspected militants in the temple as all the entry points to the shrine are guarded by security forces and even Sikh devotees are frisked before they are allowed to enter," Mr. Calcutta said.

The raid "could have a tempering effect, especially at a time when the temple has re-started attracting large number of devotees after lapse of many years," he said.

The SGPC would lodge a protest with the government over what he termed "an attempt to hurt the feeling of the Sikhs," Mr. Calcutta said.

Indian army soldiers backed by tanks and mortars had also attacked the Golden Temple in June 1984 to flush out militant leaders in an operation codenamed "Blkue Star" in which 650 people, including firebrand Sikh separatist leader Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, were killed.

At least 1,524 people have died so far this year in a Sikh militant campaign for a homeland in Punjab, where thousands of troops have been deployed to crush the movement which gained momentum after 1984.

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA (AUG. 23) - African National Congress military commander Siphiwe Nyanda, arrested last month on charges of trying to overthrow the South African government, has been refused bail in the magistrate's court here.

Magistrate W. van Zyl said that Mr. Nyanda faced serious charges carrying a jail term of up to 30 years, and was likely to "disappear" if released on bail.

Mr. Nyanda is one of an estimated 40 members of the ANC's military wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe, who allegedly infiltrated South Africa in July to boost the black nationalist organization's underground structures.

Police claimed the infiltration was orchestrated by the South African Communist Party (SACP) which, police said, was planning a coup under cover of talks towards constitutional negotiations with the white minority government.

SACP politburo official and ANC National Executive Committee Mac Maharaj is among those being held in connection with the alleged plot.

The ANC has lodged strong protests against the detentions and on Friday 40 ANC leaders were arrested in Cape Town after staging a demonstration calling for the release of their colleagues.

MOSCOW (AUG. 24) - An outbreak of diphteria has killed nine people in Moscow, while 164 cases of the disease have been officially registered in the city, a spokesman for the capital's epidemiologic station told AFP Friday.

Moskovskaya Pravda newspaper, quoting another employee at the station, Nikolai Filatov, said the epidemic was due to people's reluctance to be given preventive injections because of the poor quality of vaccines and the lack of disposable syringes.

In the first half of the year, Moscow medical institutions received only 11 million syringes instead of the required 47 million, he said.

Diphteria is a grave infectious disease affecting the membranes of the throat and air passages.

PARIS (AUG. 24) - France's foreign trade deficit jumped five-fold in July to a provisional 4.635 billion francs (880 million dollars), according to figures released here Friday by the customs directorate.

The figure, corrected for seasonal variations, was sharply higher than the previous month's revised deficit of 877 million francs (166 million dollars).

For the first seven months of the year, the seasonally-corrected trade deficit was 17.674 billion francs (3.34 billion dollars) compared to a corresponding 24.725 billion franc (4.67 billion dollars) deficit for the same period in 1989.

Mainly responsible for the expanding deficit in July was industrial trade, which recorded a deficit of 8.004 billion francs (1.5 billion dollars), up from a corresponding 3.678 billion francs (690 million dollars) in June.

Also higher was France's trade deficit with its European Economic Community partners, up from 1.923 billion to 3.657 billion francs, and with the United States, up from 2.387 billion to 3.795 billion francs (710 million dollars).

But the deficit with Japan dropped from 2.098 billion to 1.986 billion francs (378 million dollars).

MANILA (AUG. 24) - Philippine stock prices corrected a two-day free-fall Friday, inching up slightly at the end of the week's trading.

The Manila Stock Exchange index gained 13.18 points or 1.9 percent to close at 696.76, but it was still below the psychological level of 700 points and nowhere near recovering the 103.55 points it lost on Wednesday and Thursday.

The Makati Stock Exchange index was up by 14.34 points or 2.1 percent to close at 705.99.

Bourse officials attributed the slight rise to a normal end-of-week correction.

The markets had plunged amid the Gulf conflict and fears of a fresh coup attempt against President Corazon Aquino.

Mrs. Aquino issued a statement earlier Friday saying "all this talk of an imminent declaration of martial law and of an impending coup is completely without basis."

TOKYO (AUG. 24) - Japan's output of four-wheeled motor vehicles reached a new record for July of 1,211,253 units, up 10.1 percent from a year earlier, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association (Jama) said Friday.

Passenger car output rose 15.3 percent to 894,463 units, showing a gain for 17 consecutive months. However, the number of trucks made fell 2.3 percent to 313,245 units and bus output dipped 15.5 percent to 3,545 units.

Meanwhile, Toyota Motor and Nissan Motor, Japan's two largest carmakers, announced that their domestic automobile sales had each notched up new records for the month.

Toyota's domestic sales rose 6.7 percent to 245,929 units while Nissan's edged up 2.2 percent to 146,107 units. Toyota's production increased 19.4 percent to 382,055 units and Nissan's grew 4.7 percent to 218,061 units.

NEW DELHI (AUG. 24) - Police fired tear gas here Friday as students campaigning against government plans to slash jobs for members of high castes tried to reach parliament, eye-witnesses said.

Police fired tear gas shells into throngs of students and chased them with sticks a few hundred metres (yards) from parliament as the protestors jumped over barricades in a bid to reach the complex, they said.

Blinding tear gas fumes covered the area where some 3,000 Delhi University students gathered to form what they have described a "human chain" to protest New Delhi's decision to grant a hefty job concession for the disadvantaged.

It was not known immediately whether any protestors were hurt in the police action, but several sudents picked up tear gas shells and hurled them back at the police, the witnesses said.

The police, numbering 200, were unable to manage the crowd of students, and a police control room official said that reinforcements were on the way to parliament, which was in session.

Angry teenage students chanted anti-government slogans and asked the government to scrap its plans to hike job quotas for the lower castes by 27 percent, the witnesses said.

The students Friday called off their roadblocks in New Delhi and instead marched to parliament to lodge their protests, but the police had earlier banned the march saying the complex was a prohibited area.

Students, desperate for jobs, argue that employment should be given on merit or reserved for only poor people who are denied expensive schooling.

Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh on August 7 reserved 27 percent of government and public sector jobs for the underprivileged after a caste committee recommended the benefit for 3,700 socially backward classes.

The latest concessions hiked to 49.5 percent the portion of state jobs that are reserved. New Delhi had earlier set aside 7.5 percent of jobs for tribespeople and 15 percent for scheduled castes or lower caste Hindus.

Before independence in 1947, India was controlled by Hindu Brahmins and Rajput princes. The lower castes were barred from white-collar jobs and from attending temples, but progressive legislation later outlawed some practices.

The anti-reservation campaign, now steered by students, has spread in India's five largest states and New Delhi where the protestors have begun boycotting colleges and schools.

MANILA (AUG. 24) - The Philippine government dismissed rumors of martial law or an imminent coup attempt Friday as suspected rebel soldiers continued a bombing campaign against political targets.

President Corazon Aquino said in a written reply to press inquiries that "our reading is that these elements cannot mount another coup attempt."

But she added that "it is good to take every precaution to assure the continued safety of our democracitc institutions."

A presidential palace statement signed by press undersecretary Horacio Paredes said talk of a coup is without basis.

"The limited capabilities of the forces of destabilization are already stretched out. The most they can do is to resort to terrorism," it said.

"If they try to mount a coup, the military will surely repulse them," it said, adding that the current situation was just a "state of limited anxiety."

The statement was the strongest issued by the palace since bombings began last week, spawning fears of a new effort to overthrow Mrs. Aquino, who has survived six coup attempts, the most recent in December.

It was issued hours after another bomb went off, this time at the Cosmos Bottling Corp., a soft drinks plant owned by the family of Trade and Industry Secretary Jose Concepcion, injuring three people.

Government offices and private firms identified with Mr. Concepcion have borne the brunt of the bombing campaign. A senator said this week that Mr. Concepcion was at the top of a "hit list" compiled by rebel soldiers.

Mr. Concepcion, who has been under pressure to resign and is being investigated for alleged anomalies and conflicts of interest, told journalists Friday that he would not be intimidated by the bombings.

"I am a fighter and ... I am going to continue fighting," said Mr. Concepcion, one of the most durable members of the Aquino cabinet, which has undergone frequent revamps in the last four years.

"I am determined to make sure that this government remains in power and all of those forces who are trying to bring down this governmnent will not be able to succeed because the people are for good government," he added.

Mr. Concepcion said Mrs. Aquino had provided him with additional bodyguards.

The capital has also been awash with rumors of a coup by a third force, possibly led by Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos and senior generals.

Mr. Ramos denied Thursday that he was involved in a plot to seize power from Mrs. Aquino, and vowed to crush any new military coup attempt.

Mr. Ramos, long reputed to be eyeing the presidency after Mrs. Aquino's term ends in 1992, admitted that rebel officers tried to enlist him in the past.

He recalled the November 1986 incident in which rebel officers asked him to join a plot, called "God Save the Queen," to seize power and turn Mrs. Aquino into a figurehead while she was on a state visit to Japan.

The plot was called off after Mr. Ramos, then the armed forces chief of staff, warned the rebels he would fight them if they tried to carry it out.

Meanwhile, a leading Manila columnist, Mrs. Aquino's former press secretary Teodoro Benigno, wrote in the Philippine Star newspaper that she should stage a "palace coup" in alliance with Mr. Ramos.

"Let's say out loud what many people are saying under their breath: the Philippines needs an authoritarian government," he said.

He suggested that Mrs. Aquino could form a revolutionary "government of national salvation" that would include the military, the church, business, labor and other significant social sectors.

Another alternative would be a junta, with Mr. Ramos, who has outscored Mrs. Aquino in popularity polls, as "the other dominant figure."

"This could very well be the combination that could save the Republic," Mr. Benigno said.

ISLAMABAD (AUG. 24) - Pakistan's interim government said Friday it would create 11 special courts to look into the conduct of the government of former premier Benazir Bhutto, who was dismissed from office on August 6.

Official documents published Friday said six of the tribunals would be headed by high court judges named by President Gulam Ishaq Khan and would be authorized to "disqualify" people found guilty of corruption from general elections scheduled for October 24.

Those found guilty could either be barred from taking part in the polls, or have their mandate invalidated if elected, they said.

The duty of the other five courts -- also headed by high court judges, but named by the interim government of Gulam Mustafa Jatoi -- would be to dispense punishment of elected officials found guilty of misconduct, the documents said.

Ms. Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party (PPP) was quick to criticize the decision, saying legislation allowing such "disqualifications" dated from 1977 and was the "brainchild of General (Muhammad) Zia-ul-Haq."

It is "a draconian law passed by a military dictator ... in violation of all the accepted and civilised norms of justice," the PPP said in a statement released in the northeastern city of Lahore.

Gen. Zia in 1977 toppled Ms. Bhutto's father, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto -- who was later executed -- and ruled Pakistan with an iron hand until his death in a mysterious 1988 plane crash.

The interim government set up after Mr. Ishaq Khan dismissed Ms. Bhutto and her cabinet includes a number of former Zia aides.

Ms. Bhutto has already said neither she nor her husband, businessman Asif Zardari, would appear before the special tribunals.

"There are courts of law in this country," she said, accusing the military of being behind her sacking and calling members of the interim government "thieves ... given power through the back door."

KUALA LUMPUR (AUG. 24) - Malaysian Airlines System (Mas) said Friday it was planning to divert flights from Dubai to other nearby ports following increased tension in the Gulf area.

''We are studying and exploring all possible stopovers and are likely to divert our flights to Istanbul.'' an Mas spokesman told the German Press Agency dpa.

''We will take immediate steps because the cost of air fuel is too high,'' the spokesman said, adding that it was not true that Mas intended to make stop overs at Madras, New Delhi and Karachi.

Mas managing Director Tan Sri Aziz Abdul Rahman said Mas also planned to increase fares on domestic and international flights to counter the rising cost of jet fuel.

He said he would attend an emergency meeting of the International Air Transport Association (Iata) from Aug 29 to 31 in Geneva to help work out a unified strategy on rising fuel costs and world air fares.

''Jet fuel makes up 15 per cent of our operating costs and in addition to this we now have to pay war premiums at Dubai which makes things too costly,'' Aziz Abdul Rahman said.

In neighbouring Singapore, Singapore International Airlines (Sia) Friday announced that it would suspend flights to the Saudi Arabian city of Dhahran from next week ''because of uncertainties in the northern Gulf region.'' The last Sia flight from Singapore to Dhahran will be on Sunday, said a spokesman.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (AUG. 24) - Comments by Treasurer Paul Keating likening Australia's economic problems to those of South American countries sent the Australian dollar down by more than one U.S. cent Friday, dealers said.

The dollar, seen as a stable currency in a turbulent financial landscape, had soared from about 79 cents a week previously to 84.60 cents just before his speech to a Melbourne football club luncheon.

It fell to 83.50 U.S. cents immediately after the speech and closed at 83.90 U.S. cents.

Mr. Keating, who delivered his eighth budget on Tuesday, told his audience Australia was facing similar problems to those faced by South American countries in the 1940s and 1950s.

Discipline was required if Australia was to keep control of its affairs, he warned. "Now ... we will see really how good and how committed the Australian people are to resolving their problems because these problems face other countries," he said.

South American countries had had the chance to deal with their problems, but in the end lacked discipline, "and now they can't deal with them," he said.

"We have the chance. We can keep control of our affairs, we can get off this dependency on commodities and back on to secondary products and higher value-added products and services.

But he warned it would mean a period "of the sort of discipline that Australia had not had to subject itself to because every time it looked like it had there was always another boom in the terms of trade.

Mr. Keating's comments reminded analysts of his remark in May 1986 warning that Australia was heading for "banana republic" status, sending the dollar to under 60 U.S. cents.

The remark was believed to have been deliberate and intended to force industry and commerce to take a hard look at where Australia was heading, which in fact happened.

NEW YORK (AUG. 24) - All eyes will be on defending champions Boris Becker and Steffi Graf when this year's U.S. Open tennis tournament gets under way in Flushing Meadow on Monday.

The two West Germans have moved into top gear after a string of uneven performances and are the players to beat in the 6.3 million dollar grand slam event.

Becker, buoyed by his victory in Indianapolis last week, is looking to repeat his performance here in 1989 when he beat Ivan Lendl to win his first grand slam final outside Wimbledon.

''It's going to be difficult, but I've got enough match practice behind me, and I know that my concentration is back,'' said the 22-year-old second seed.

Becker's main rivals will be top seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden, the reigning Wimbledon champion, and the third-ranked Lendl, who has been in every final of the U.S. Open since 1982.

Lendl, who has slipped back to third in the world ratings, is determined to make amends for his disappointing show in Wimbledon. ''The pressure's not on me this time, its on the others,'' he said.

Becker's opening match pits him against clay specialst Juan Aguilera of Spain, who beat him in the final of the German Open in Hamburg earlier this year.

If Becker overcomes this hurdle, he will need to beat rising star Goran Ivanisevic of Yugoslavia to reach the quarter-finals. Ivanisevic eliminated Becker in the first round of this year's French Open.

Steffi Graf, the world number one, has an easier draw than Becker. Her first real test will be against U.S. teenager Jennifer Capriati for a berth in the quarter-finals.

Graf appears to have shaken off the uncertainty in her play caused by a scandal involving a paternity claim by a pinup model against her father and manager, Peter Graf.

She won her last tournament after playing below form in previous matches, and is optimistic that she will justify her top seeding title at Flushing Meadow and retain her women's singles titles.

Apart from Capriati, Graf's main worries will be Martina Navratilova, last year's beaten finalist, and Monica Seles, who has lost only one of her last 42 matches.

Regardless of the sporting outcome, things will certainly be a lot quieter at the Louis Armstrong Stadium in the New York borough of Queens, where the tournament will be played.

Officials at the nearby La Guardia airport, pressured by Mayor David Dinkins, have promised to use another runway for take-offs so that fewer planes will roar over the stadium.

MAEBASHI, JAPAN (AUG. 24) - New sprint champion Michael Hubner of East Germany made it two at the world cycling championships here Friday by winning an incident-marred professional keirin final.

Australian Stephen Pate, who won the pro sprint bronze on Wednesday, overtook Hubner on the home stretch to finish first but was disqualified for forcing into a line occupied by Frenchman Patrick Da Rocha behind him.

The jury ruled that the move caused Da Rocha to crash and pull down Marcello Alexandre of Argentina with him.

Belgium's Michael Vaarten was placed second one length behind, and defending champion Claudio Gollinei of Italy third.

The jury rejected a protest from the Australian team.

EMANCE, FRANCE (AUG. 24) - A series of burglaries at a refugee centre outside Paris has highlighted the integration problems of Albanians who fled their isolated communist-ruled country six weeks ago dreaming of a new life in the United States.

Among the incidents since last weekend, a group of Albanians among the 80 single males here ran up a 15,000 franc (2,850 dollar) telephone bill in two days after breaking into apartments of centre officials to call home.

The refugees broke the locks on 20 rooms at the centre, searching for provisions and clothes in preparation for their hoped-for departure to America. A package of tinned food was found stocked in the surrounding woods, according to Bruno Boiteux, the director of the centre which is normally reserved for juvenile delinquents.

Others helped themselves to the horse of a wealthy local resident, who "must have been surprised to see his prize stallion being ridden bareback along the road", as one frequent visitor to the centre put it.

And on Thursday, the distraught proprietor of a hotel in nearby Versailles was on the phone to the centre to complain about an attempted rape by Albanian youths.

Mr. Boiteux attributed the integration problems to the fact that the Albanians, largely from rural areas, find it difficult to make the necessary cultural adjustments to the different rules in a consumer-oriented society.

"They just don't understand such things like to save money, you have to make telephone calls after 10.30 p.m.," he said.

The Albanians, living two-to-a-room in brick bungalows in the centre's wooded glades, receive some 100 francs (19 dollars) per week, plus a 40-franc (eight dollar) telephone credit card and supplies of cigarettes, from the state.

It also took a visit to the centre last Saturday from an Albanian living in the United States to convince the refugees that they could not simply obtain a visa for the United States by turning up at the U.S. Embassy.

"They finally understood that French and Germans also have to fill out forms, and that they have to have a close relative to be able to emigrate to the United States," said centre official Yvon Camus.

Mr. Boiteux explained that the decision to house 80 youths, aged 18 to 30, at the same centre pending a decision on their permanent settlement, was also inviting trouble.

"It would be the same with a group of French youths, what do you expect," he said. But he added that the sudden influx of 543 Albanians arriving by boat in Marseilles on July 15 had forced French authorities to hastily group the refugees in such a way.

A 19-year-old in a purple track-suit, speaking through an interpreter, said that the United States was better than France, "not for the life-style, but because there is a big Albanian community there. We want to go there to help liberate our country".

He and other Albanians at the centre, who scrambled over the railings of the French Embassy in Tirana in the absence of a U.S. mission there, refused to give their names, saying they feared their relatives at home could be persecuted by the hardline authorities.

A U.S. Embassy official said Friday that emigration rules had been eased for the Albanians, who could receive a positive answer not only if they had immediate family but also grandparents or cousins in the United States.

LONDON (AUG. 24) - British hostage Alex Barnett has been allowed to leave Iraq and is now in Amman waiting to return to Britain, British Airways said here Friday.

The Foreign Office confirmed the report and a spokesman said: "Obviously we are pleased that he's going to be able to return home."

A spokesman for British Airways said Alex, 15, was safe and well and was being cared for by BA staff in the Jordanian capital.

"We are making arrangements to fly him home on the first available flight to be reunited with his family," the spokesman said.

The release comes after Radio Baghdad announced earlier Friday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had decided to let the boy go after learning that he was alone in the Gulf without his parents.

The Foreign Office said Alex's parents in the Scottish town of Hamilton, near Glasgow, had been informed of his reported release.

Alex had been aboard a BA flight trapped in Kuwait during the invasion on August 2.

DIYARBAKIR, TURKEY (AUG. 24P) - Thirty-six Swedish nationals from Kuwait were flown out of this town near the Turkish border with Iraq Friday on their way to Stockholm after a harrowing three days trying to cross the frontier from Iraq.

The 36, along with six Finns, were allowed across the border by the Iraqi authorities, who kept back about 50 Swedes who had travelled with the group from Kuwait, Swedish authorities said here.

Exhausted by a three-day ordeal travelling from Kuwait to Baghdad and the border, they were met at the Turkish border town of Habur by Swedish officials who had been preparing to evacuate them since Wednesday.

After being given a medical examination, a rest and a shower at Silopi, near the border, the Swedes were brought here, 250 kilometres (155 miles) away, and boarded a Swedish jet which had been waiting for them since Wednesday.

The group included many children and women, some of them pregnant. They were mainly dependents of Swedes working in Kuwait, notably for the Swedish firm Eriksson. The six Finns were still waiting at Silopi to be repatriated.

Swedish foreign ministry spokesman Bo Heineback said about 50 Swedes, part of the group which had left Iraqi-occupied Kuwait on Tuesday, were being detained in Iraq because authorities claimed their papers were not in order.

CAIRO (AUG. 24) - Egypt announced Friday that it had increased the price of its oil by four dollars a barrel on Thursday, in the fifth hike since Iraq invaded Kuwait.

The new prices are as follows:

Gulf crude: 30.80 dollars a barrel

Suez crude: 30.50

Balaim: 29.65

Ras Badran: 28.50

Ras Ghareb: 28.20

Egypt's pricing committee has been in permanent session since the August 2 invasion.

Oil Minister Abdel Hadi Kandil said his government opposed an increase in production because it could lower the level of reserves.

Egypt, which is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), produces about a million barrels per day and sells it on the free market, setting its prices according to the spot market levels while also following OPEC directives.

KUALA LUMPUR (AUG. 24) - Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said Friday Malaysia would rush troops to Saudi Arabia only if the holy cities of Mecca and Medina were attacked.

Perturbed over the possibility of the outbreak of war in the Middle East,

Mahathir said if the holy cities were safely guarded, but the Gulf crises worsened, ''the government will not hesitate to despatch Malaysian servicemen to Saudi Arabia only upon the request and approval of the United Nations.''

Malaysia, a Moslem nation, has condemned Iraqi's invasion of Kuwait and has demanded an unconditional withdrawal of all Iraqi troops from Kuwait. It has also upheld all United Nations resolutions, including trade sanctions against Iraq.

''We will rush troops if Mecca or Medina are attacked and will abide by all United Nations decisions,'' Mahathir told reporters after attending a national function.

Mahathir expressed regret over Saudi Arabia's ''hasty decision'' for having sought military assistance from the United States and not from other Moslem nations in facing the crisis following Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait.

''Although I am aware of the Saudi predicament, the United Nations could not act fast as it had to get the consensus of member nations first,'' he said.

''Saudi Arabia's predicament was because it lacked a strong military and could not defend the country on its own,'' Mahathir added.

KARACHI (AUG. 24) - Dismissed prime minister Benazir Bhutto's Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) condemned Friday the arrest of dozens of its activists accused of involvement in two shooting incidents that left 29 people dead.

Twenty-nine people were killed here and more than 60 injured this week when unidentified gunmen attacked camps set up by the Mohajir Qaumi Movement (MQM).

The MQM is associated with parties making up the interim government installed after Ms. Bhutto's dismissal on August 6.

It was preparing to welcome the return of its leader Altaf Hussain to Karachi on Thursday after a kidney operation in London.

Federal Interior Minister Zahid Sarfraz said at a news conference Thursday in Islamabad that the majority of the 32 suspects arrested in connection with the attacks belonged either to the PPP or one of its student branches.

A PPP leader and former chief minister of southern Sindh province Aftab Shaban Mirani, denounced in a statement here the "arrest and victimisation of innocent PPP workers by falsely implicating them in cases of condemnable killing of innocent citizens of Karachi."

Mr. Mirani said the interim government was playing a "dangerous game" and trying to hold onto power by "maligning" the PPP, while "terrorists patronized by the drug mafia killed innocent citizens" of Karachi.

While the present regime was attempting to discredit the PPP, the real people behind the attacks were not being pursued or arrested, he said.

Mr. Mirani said the houses of dozens of PPP activists had been raided since Wednesday and many of them picked up without charge.

PPP sources said the arrests were part of a "grand design" to prevent PPP officials participating in the elections set for October 24.

Meanwhile, police were investigating the assassination of the provincial election commissioner's 18-year-old son who was abducted by four unidentified men late Wednesday.

Nadim Haider Zaidi's body was found on a pavement Thursday with two bullet wounds in the head, but no arrests had been made in connection with the murder.

Mazahir Hussain Zaidi, the father of the victim, said his son did not belong to any political group. During the last general elections in 1988, the house of Mr. Zaidi had been looted, the official Associated Press of Pakistan said.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan, who dismissed Ms. Bhutto on charges of corruption and abuse of power, condemned Friday the assassination of Mr. Zaidi's son, saying it was an "unpardonable act."

SEOUL (AUG. 24) - South Korea's Composite Index, plunging through yet another psychological barrier, closed Friday at 594 points, shedding 9.4 points on the day.

The 1.6 per drop cent from Thursday's close of 603.4 points took place amid increasing pessimism that the market would continue to fall and despite heavy intervention by the government's market stabilization fund.

Some 50 investors, blaming the government for the market's continued decline, protested by tearing up share slips and shouting slogans against President Roh Tae-Woo at the busy commercial district of Myongdong.

The day's close was the first time this year that the index dropped below the 600-point level and a 30-month low.

Friday's closing rate was down 36 percent in value from the beginning of the year and a 42 percent loss from the 1,007.7 of April 1989, when the stock market was at its height.

It was also a 4.8 percent loss in value from a week ago when the index was at 624.

Dealers said the South Korean market's own internal problems had been exacerbated by the situation in the Gulf and rising oil prices.

TEL AVIV (AUG. 24) - Israel will ''show understanding'' for United States plans to sell sophisticated weapons to Saudi Arabia and Egypt, Defence Minister Moshe Arens was quoted as saying Friday.

''There is greater understanding why the Americans feel more pressure than in the past to make these deals. I don't think there is reason to suppose that the Saudis, if they get tanks, will turn them against Israel,'' Arens told the Ha'aretz newspaper.

The Gulf crisis had also led Israel to re-evaluate its strategic situation, Arens said. He predicted a growth in Israel's 6.9 billion dollar defense budget and additional requests for U.S.-manufactured arms.

Arens said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had ''received messages'' containing warnings by Israeli leaders not to attack the Jewish state. He also said Iraq was investing large resources in an attempt to achieve nuclear weapons capability.

BEIJING (AUG. 24) - China will create new job opportunities and control labor flow from rural to urban areas to try to maintain its official unemployment figure at less than 3.5 percent until the end of the year, the China Daily reported Friday.

The official unemployment rate at the end of 1989 was 2.6 percent, or more than three million people, in urban areas.

The government target is to keep the figure below 3.5 percent, or less than five million, until the end of 1990, the daily said.

Quoting Labor Minister Ruan Chongwu, the official English-language newspaper said new arrivals numbering 11 million people -- an increase of 500,000 over 1989 -- were expected to flood the job market before the end of the year.

"The supply of labour this year far surpasses the demand," Mr. Ruan was quoted as saying.

The daily said experts blamed the rise in unemployment this year on the nearly two-year-old economic austerity program and the baby boomers born in the 1970's.

Another factor, it quoted experts as saying, is the labor surplus in rural areas, leading to an exodus toward the cities and higher urban unemployment.

Chinese statistics ignore the rural unemployed, which Chinese economists estimate at about 120 million people.

A labor ministry official quoted by the daily warned that the influx of workers in the job market could be long-lasting and difficult to control, and suggested the development of collective and private enterprises and lengthier professional training programs to curb the problem.

SYDNEY (AUG. 24) - State-owned OTC International has won a 250 million dollar (208 million U.S.) contract to help develop Vietnam's international telecommunications network, the Australian Government said Friday.

Under the 10-year contract, which provides for management and development work, OTC will construct two digital international telephone exchanges which should be operational by 1992.

The minister said OTC would also invest in key domestic telecommunications infrastructure programs within the country.

OTC and the Vietnamese Directorate General of Posts and Telecommunications had agreed to the formation of a new specialist international telecommunications organisation, Vietnam Telecom International, to manage the network.

SYDNEY (AUG. 24) - Warwick Fairfax, 29-year-old proprietor of the troubled John Fairfax Group Pty. Ltd., assumed complete control of his newspaper empire Friday following its latest boardroom convulsions.

As some of Australia's corporate high-fliers reportedly circled the debt-laden company, Mr. Fairfax appointed himself chief executive in succession to Chris Anderson who had resigned hours earlier along with two other directors.

Mr. Fairfax, the great-great-grandson of the man who 159 years ago founded The Sydney Morning Herald, flagship of the group, is its fourth chief executive in three years.

"Senior management and editors who previously reported to Mr. Anderson will now report directly to me," he said in a statement.

The group's other papers include The Australian Financial Review and The Age, Melbourne.

Journalists' Association officials who had talks with Mr. Fairfax on Friday later issued a staff circular expresing reservations about his move to "unprecedented power" in the group.

According to the group's own newspapers, its latest upheaval followed an attempt by Mr. Fairfax to assert his authority by sacking two directors over plans for the financial restructuring of the company.

Under a proposed refinancing proposed by the directors, Mr. Fairfax's 75 per cent ownership, giving him total control, could have shrunk to as low as five per cent.

Instead of waiting to be sacked, chairman Bryan Kelman and director Bob Johnston, former head of the Reserve (central) Bank, resigned and chief executive Chris Anderson walked out as well, leaving Mr. Fairfax as the solitary board member.

Mr. Kelman said later that "irreconcilable differences" had recently developed within the board and the company.

In a statement later, Mr. Fairfax said he had invited merchant banker Keith Halkerston to become chairman and Bill Beerworth, one of his corporate and legal advisers, to be a director.

It was the third boardroom shake-up since Mr. Fairfax's 2.1 billion dollar (1.75 billion U.S.) takeover in 1987.

The company's former chief executive Peter King departed abruptly on August 9 after a vote by the board to replace him with Mr. Anderson because of disagreement over the proposed debt refinancing.

Friday's Sydney Morning Herald reported that Mr. Fairfax had been receiving "behind the scenes advice" from his major rival, News Corp. Ltd. chief Rupert Murdoch.

Mr. Murdoch was reported to have said he did not think the Fairfax newspapers would be for sale or that he would be allowed to buy them if they were.

He also said he thought there were "plenty" of people circling the troubled group.

Mr. Murdoch's own paper The Australian reported that one could be Kerry Packer, who recently regained control of the Nine Television network.

According to the Sydney Morning Herald, others include the West Australian entrepreneur Robert Holmes a Court and "despite his assurances" to the contrary, Mr. Murdoch.

Another possible buyer of the company's assets if they come on to the market is said to be Rural Press Ltd., owned by Mr. Fairfax's cousin, John B. Fairfax.

JAKARTA (AUG. 24) - Indonesia on Friday urged industrial nations to release their oil stocks and non-OPEC oil-producing countries to raise output in a bid to ease oil prices, which have soared above 30 dollars a barrel this week.

The high oil price level "indicates a red light for the world economy," the official Antara news agency quoted Mines and Energy Minister Ginanjar Kartasasmita as saying.

Mr. Ginanjar said that talks involving several members of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) due to be held in Vienna on Sunday would discuss requests from some members to raise the group's output to replace supplies from Kuwait and Iraq, which are subject to U.N. trade embargo.

However, OPEC "could not be expected to act alone" in stabilising oil prices, he said.

The minister said industrial countries should start using their huge strategic stocks to ease pressures on the oil markets and help developing countries which did not own oil resources.

Non-OPEC producers should also raise their output to help fill the shortfalls, he added. Indonesia is an OPEC member.

World oil prices have soared to their current level from below 19 dollars when the Gulf crisis began with the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

The United Nations embargo on Iraq and occupied Kuwait has effectively reduced OPEC's oil supply to the world by four million barrels per day.

The OPEC meeting in Vienna would be consultative and would discuss a request from Saudi Arabia and Venezuela to raise the group's output, Mr. Ginanjar said.

Saudi Arabia has said it was ready to raise its output by two million barrels a day, while Venezuela said it could raise its production by 500,000.

If at least 10 of the 13 members were present at Vienna and if the proposal was endorsed by at least seven members, then the cartel would immediately move into an emergency meeting to take a decision, he said.

He said Indonesia planned to raise its own output gradually, with the increase to be supplied primarily to neighbouring developing countries.

Indonesia's output, currently estimated at 1.3 million barrels a day, would be raised to 1.375 million barrels by November and to 1.427 million by December, he said.

BEIJING (AUG. 24) - Both Kuwait and Iraq will field teams to the Asian Games here next month even though Kuwait is under occupation and Baghdad no longer recognizes it as a country, spokesmen for the two countries said on Friday.

"We will attend according to a decision taken before the invasion," Kuwaiti Embassy spokesman Shukri Naser al-Shraim said. "There is no change."

He said a number of Kuwaiti athletes had been training abroad when Iraq invaded their country on August 2, and that a list of those participating could be submitted to the organizers "in a few days."

A spokesman for the Iraqi Embassy, Kais al-Yacoubi, said Iraqi athletes would "definitely" attend the Asian Games and that the country's football team was expected to arrive in Beijing next week.

When asked if Iraq would protest at the participation of Kuwait, which Iraq annexed a week after the invasion, the spokesman said he had "no instructions."

He added that Iraq had submitted its list of participating athletes two days earlier.

During a visit to Beijing on Wednesday, the exiled Kuwaiti foreign minister declared that no Kuwaiti athlete would attend the games as members of the Iraqi team.

"Of course no delegation will attend the games in a joint team," Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Jaber said.

The Beijing Asian Games Organizing Committee has not announced which of the 38 members of the Olympic Council of Asia (OCA) had confirmed their attendance by the deadline Wednesday, a month before the games are to open on September 22.

The official New China News Agency (NCNA) has reported that both Iraq and Kuwait were among the 14 countries and territories that took part in Thursday's draw for places in the gymnastics competition.

Male gymnasts from the two countries will compete against each other and those from five other teams in the afternoon session on September 23, NCNA said.

Both countries also drew for places on Friday for basketball events and were placed in separate groups.

Other Middle Eastern countries in the draws were Saudi Arabia, Syria, Jordan, Iran and the United Arab Emirates.

MOSCOW (AUG 24) - The Soviet Union has evacuated all of the personnel from the Soviet Embassy in Kuwait, Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh said Friday.

Soviet diplomats had left Kuwait because "the situation made it impossible for them to carry out their duties," he said, recalling that the Soviet move did not mean that Moscow had recognized the Iraqi annexation of Kuwait.

Iraq has ordered all embassies in Kuwait City to close on Friday and for diplomats to move to Baghdad.

PARIS (AUG. 24) - OPEC President Sadek Boussena will hold informal consultations with oil ministers of several member countries in Vienna on Sunday, a source close to OPEC said Friday.

But officials at the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries' headquarters in Vienna said they were not aware that majority agreement had been reached, as demanded by the OPEC statutes, for the holding of an extraordinary conference of the 13-member organisation.

Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez said Thursday that seven OPEC members had agreed to the convening of an extraordinary conference, but would not name the country which had given the crucial seventh vote.

An OPEC official said in Vienna Friday, however, that "we are not aware of any majority."

Mr. Boussena, who is Algeria's minister of mines, would however be holding informal consultations with oil ministers of several OPEC members in Vienna on Sunday. The official said he did not know how many ministers would attend.

Saudi Arabia and Venezuela want an urgent meeting of the organisation to discuss raising production to compensate for the four million barrels of oil a day being lost to the market due to an international embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

The OPEC secretariat has said this proposal has not received the support of seven members, the majority required under its statutes for such a move.

Informed sources have said that apart from Riyadh and Caracas, only Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait have given their support.

Indonesia and Iran have oficially confirmed that they will be taking part in the informal talks in Vienna this weekend.

Indonesian Energy Minister Ginanjar Kartasasmita has said that neither Iraq nor Kuwait will be participating.

A spokesman for the Venezuelan Oil Ministry indicated Thursday that there was disagreement within the organisation on who should attend the weekend talks and how they should be organised, and that there were two possibilities.

Either Mr. Boussena would organise informal consultations involving six OPEC members -- Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Indonesia, Iran, Algeria and Nigeria -- or an effort would be made to have all 13 members involved.

LUENEBURG, WEST GERMANY (AUG. 24) - West German Siegfried K's jaw dropped when he looked at himself in a mirror following a routine operation to find that his entire set of 25 teeth had been pulled out by mistake.

The 41-year-old refuse lorry driver was admitted to hospital to have a troublesome wisdom tooth extracted but a surgeon who stepped in for a colleague at short notice took literally a remark in the man's medical notes.

The doctor interpreted the words ''Teeth - ex'' to mean that the already-anaethetised Siegfried was to be deprived of all his molars and reached for the pliers.

The error cost the 46-year-old surgeon a fine of 20,000 marks (13,000 dollars) at a court in this north German town after he admitted pulling the teeth. He was also ordered to pay 5,000 marks towards court costs.

The popular Bild Zeitung, which did not publish Siegfried's full name Friday, called the incident a ''severe case of dentalmania''.

The surgeon, who had already carried out 15 operations on the day in question two years ago, could not explain how the error came about. He called it an ''unfortunate chain of events.''

''I went mad when looked in the mirror. My cheeks had fallen and I looked ten years older,'' Siegfried told Bild. Two years and a new set of false teeth later colleagues still joke about the incident, he grumbled.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 24) - Pentagon officials are urging a "decisive" attack against Iraq using air, naval and ground forces if President George Bush orders military action, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday.

The Times said the Joint Chiefs of Staff was advocating that any military action against the huge Iraqi army be sweeping, simultaneous and deadly.

"We will attempt to be decisive," said Air Force Chief of Staff General Michael Dugan.

Gen. Dugan and other officials said the United States would not attack without provocation.

The report said the Pentagon was compiling an exhaustive list of Iraqi targets.

They included Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's presidential palace; military command centers; Iraq's chemical and nuclear weapons complexes; ballistic missile sites, military airfields; oil refineries and pipelines; water purification plants; ports, rail lines and highways, analysts said.

TEL AVIV (AUG. 24) - Scores of homeless people staged a protest outside the Israeli defence ministry Friday, demanding to be given gas masks amid growing public concern about the threat of an Iraqi chemical arms attack.

Israel is witholding the distribution of gas masks to the nation's 4.5 million citizens out of fear that it may spread panic and fuel Iraqi suspicions that Israel was planning a pre-emptive strike.

The government's defence committee decided Wednesday to appoint a special ministerial subcommittee to examine the issue, but Israel radio reported Friday that the composition of the panel and a timetable for discussions had not yet been decided.

Demonstrators said they wanted the masks immediately because they had no shelter in the event of a possible attack.

An army spokesman issued an official clarification on Thursday's radio broadcast which caused a national panic when a top civil defence officer urged the population to hoard food, prepare a home-made antidote to poison gas and seal a room in which to take shelter during a possible chemical strike.

''The remarks were not a directive to the public in Israel to hoard food or take any special measures because of a change in the situation. These were general recommendations of preparations by the public for an emergency which are in effect throughout the year,'' said the statement which did little to calm the nervous population.

Israeli papers said the broadcast caused a jump in supermarket sales of some 50 per cent as buyers stocked up on canned and frozen foods, rice, flour and oil.

DAKAR (AUG. 24) - Senegal will not close its embassy in Kuwait as demanded by the Iraqi government, Senegalese Foreign Minister Seydina Oumar Sy said here Friday.

But, in an interview with the newspaper Le Soleil here, he said Senegal would try to evacuate families of its diplomats in Kuwait for "humanitarian considerations".

Mr. Sy added that Senegal was working with friendly countries to plan the evacuation of 150 Senegalese nationals in Kuwait and Iraq.

Referring to the use by Iraq of foreign nationals as hostages against attack, he said: "This blackmail using human lives is intolerable."

The Senegalese foreign minister said he supported the inter-Arab effort to solve the Gulf crisis proposed by Moroccan King Hassan. But he urged Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait and submit to international law.

TEHERAN (AUG. 24) - Iraq has released a new batch of Iranian prisoners of war who arrived at the Khosrawi border crossing point Friday, the Iranian news agency Irna reported.

The release of the 1,500 Iranians brought to 21,000 the number of Pows freed by both countries since the Pow swap began last Friday.

The exchange of Pows and Iraq's troop withdrawal from Iranian territory were in line with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's peace offer to Iran last week.

Iran and Iraq, which fought for eight years until a U.N. motion halted the Gulf War in August 1988, have agreed to raise the daily number of the Pows to be swapped to 12,000 as of August 23.

HONG KONG (AUG. 24) - Hong Kong's 1990 economic growth will be lower than forecast while inflation will be higher, the government said Friday.

A weak economic showing in the first half of 1990 coupled with the current oil price hike caused by the Gulf crisis has prompted the government to trim its gross domestic product growth rate forecast for the year to 2.5 percent from an earlier three percent.

The British colony's inflation would in turn rise to 9.5 percent against an earlier expected 8.5 percent, the government said in its half-yearly economic report.

The forecasts came amid a tight labour market here, with unemployment running at 1.6 percent of a total workforce of 2.8 million.

Global oil price surges now posed "the single most important question" affecting inflation and "it will take some time for the full impact to filter through," the report warned.

The government also said on Friday that July's consumer prices were 9.4 per cent higher than the same month last year, based on its Consumer Price Index "A" covering 50 percent of urban households.

The local private-sector Hang Seng Consumer Price Index put the July rate of inflation at 11.2 percent. This index applies to the 10 percent of urban households made up of higher-income families.

Hong Kong's export-led economy suffered a trade deficit of about one billion U.S. dollars between January and June, with demand for Hong Kong-made goods staying sluggish throughout.

The trend would continue into the next half while import prices were expected to soar, the government said in its six-month review.

It added that higher oil prices would also bring about an economic slowdown in Hong Kong's major export markets including the United States, which buys 30 percent of the colony's domestic exports.

AMMAN (AUG. 24) - Jordan's King Hussein was expected to meet Austrian President Kurt Waldheim on Friday, after returning from a visit to Yemen and Sudan where he held talks on the Gulf crisis.

A jordanian official said King Hussein ''sought to convince Arab leaders that there is a need to achieve a disengagement of forces in the Gulf as a first priority.''

He said the monarch's talks in Sanaa and Khartoum focused on finding ''a compromise formula that would allow for negotiations to start for a solution to all aspects of the Gulf crisis, including Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait and the withdrawal of foreign troops from Saudi Arabia.''

The official said the king was also expected to visit Iraq, Libya and Algeria for further consultations towards a peaceful settlement in the Gulf. He did not give the king's exact itinerary.

Waldheim, who was due to arrive at 6 p.m. (1500 Gmt), planned to meet King Hussein before travelling on to Iraq to see President Saddam Hussein in a bid to obtain the release of foreigners being held against their will in Iraq.

In a radio interview just prior to his departure, Waldheim said he hoped his personal aquaintance with the Middle East leaders during his tenure as United Nations general secretary would be of help.

Jordanian officials said Austrian Foreign Minister Alois Mock, who arrived here Thursday, would join Waldheim in the talks in Amman.

In a related development , Jordan's foreign minister, Marwan Qasem, left Amman for Beijing Friday in a bid to persuade China not to accept a draft security council resolution allowing the use of force to enforce a blockade against Iraq, the foreign ministry said.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA (AUG 24) - A Colombian reputed to have been a top money manager for the Medellin cocaine cartel has pleaded guilty to laundering more than 1.2 billion dollars in drug money.

Eduardo Martinez Romero pleaded guilty Thursday, admitting to helping the cartel launder cocaine profits through a nationwide network of jewelry stores known as "La Mina" or "The Mine".

Mr. Martinez Romero, who was the target of a sting by federal agents, was arrested in Colombia and extradited September 7 to Atlanta to stand trial.

He was the first Colombian extradited to the United States to face drug charges, an action that fueled a campaign of bombings and assassinations against the Colombian government by drug traffickers.

Indicted along with Mr. Martinez Romero, were Pablo Escobar, the leader of the Medellin cartel; Gustavo Gaviria, who was shot to death by Colombian police August 11; and Geraldo Moncada.

Mr. Martinez Romero faces a maximum sentence of 30 years in prison and a possible fine of 4 million dollars.

KINSHASA (AUG 24) - Most categories of staff at hospitals in the Zairean capital have gone on strike indefinitely for better pay and conditions, the press reported Friday.

They included chemists, dentists, nurses, laboratory technicians and administrative personnel. Their walkout since Thursday had already paralysed the hospitals, which were handling only emergency cases, the reports said.

It is the second major strike in the health sector in three months.

Doctors went on strike for a month in mid-May, also for more pay but in particular for improved work facilities in a bid to remedy years of serious deficiencies. They said Zairean hospitals had become "real death-houses."

Press inquiries reported that many patients died during the doctors' strike. They got no satisfaction on their demands, and said they would no longer hold discussions with the current transitional government of premier Lunda Bululu.

BEIJING (AUG. 24) - Jordanian Foreign Minister Marwan al-Kassem told Chinese Premier Li Peng on Friday that Jordan and China shared concern over the Gulf situation.

Speaking during a meeting with Mr. Li attended by the press, he said, "Our two countries are concerned by the danger in the region.

"We believe that in several days or weeks we are going to be confronted with an event of global significance," he said referring to the risk of an outbreak of hostilities in the Gulf.

Mr. Kassem, who arrived in Beijing Friday for a short visit, handed Mr. Li a letter from Jordan's King Hussein who is working towards a negotiated Arab settlement to the crisis.

The foreign minister described talks held earlier with his Chinese counterpart Qian Qichen as "very important and constructive."

His visit followed that two days earlier of the foreign minister of the Kuwaiti government-in-exile, Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Jaber.

Sheikh Sabah reportedly received assurances from the Chinese that they would not veto a United Nations Security Council resolution authorising the use of force by Western ships in the Gulf to maintain the embargo on Iraq.

China has condemned the invasion of Kuwait and suspended arms sales to Iraq, but opposes the deployment of Western forces in the Gulf, arguing the crisis should be resolved peacefully by the Arab countries.

BRUSSELS, Aug 24 (AFP) - The European Economic Community (EEC) on Friday was launching an airlift to repatriate thousands of Egyptians stranded in Jordan, the European Commission said Friday.

there are tens of thousands of expatriate workers, many of them penniless, a Commission official said.

The buses will take 600 refugees to Amman airport for the first flight home, which should take off late Friday, he said.

Eleven other mercy flights are expected this weekend, using two Belgian C-130 military aircraft and two aircraft chartered by the EEC, he said.

Meanwhile, officials from the 12 EEC nations met here Friday to coordinate national contributions to the airlift.

France announced financial help of 200,000 European Currency Units (ECUs) (260,000 dollars) and the Netherlands one million guilders (570,000 dollars), adding to the million ECUs (1.3 million dollars) already earmarked for the operation by the Community.

The EEC Commission also wants to provide food aid for the refugees, but has yet to decide how much assistance to give, and what kind.

The Belgian aircraft will leave Brussels with 30 tonnes of food, Belgian officials said.

According to Commission sources, 62,000 refugees are stranded on the border.

The situation there is chaotic, they reported. Fifteen buses have been destroyed in the panic, which will hamper the effort to bring the refugees to Amman airport, they said.

LONDON (AUG. 24) - Shares in British company Davies and Newman plunged 54 percent in London on Friday morning, on fears for the future of its airline subsidiary Dan Air.

Davies and Newman shares, which closed Thursday at 325 pence, plunged by 175 pence to 150 during morning trading, cutting the group's stock market capitalization by more than half.

The plunge followed an announcement by Dan Air on Thursday that it was closing its central London office and transferring it to Gatwick airport to save money, and press reports that the airline, which operates mainly in the charter market, had held a "crisis meeting" with the Civil Aviation Authority.

The company denied the reports, saying that Thursday's meeting had been a routine session, while a spokesman expressed surprise over the plunge in share prices and said it was the result of speculation.

Dan Air, Britain's second largest charter airline with 51 planes, has recently been hit by rising fuel prices and the creation this week of a new charter airline by Britain's third largest tour operator, Airtours.

Airtours had hitherto been using five of Dan Air's planes to regularly carry its customers.

Davies and Newman had said in May that they were holding discussions with several interested parties on the possibility of another company taking a controlling stake in Dan Air or entering into a cooperation deal with the airline.

These discussions have so far not had any result.

Davies and Newman made a loss of 3.3 million pounds (6.2 million dollars) in 1989.

BAGHDAD (AUG. 24) - With the deadline set by Iraq for the closure of foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait about to expire, Iraqi soldiers on Friday moved near Western diplomatic missions, encircling several of them, according to reports reaching Bonn, London, Paris and other capitals.

Baghdad, arguing that Kuwait has been part of Iraq since its August 2 invasion, has demanded that all missions be closed by Friday night.

In London, the Foreign Office said Iraqi troops had encircled the British embassy in Kuwait City. Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said the soldiers had orders to let no one in our out.

He called the action ''illegal'' but gave no indication about possible British counter-action. The embassy staff has been cut to four.

The French foreign ministry said Iraqi troops had taken up positions near the French embassy.

Many of the 68 nations that have diplomatic relations with Kuwait, including the Soviet Union, Japan, Morocco and Saudi Arabia have indicated they will not close their embassies. The 12 members of the European Community (E.C.) said they would maintain their embassy services.

In addition to that of Britain, the embassies of the United States, Japan,

Sweden, Norway and Hungary were said to be surrounded by Iraqi troops.

In Bonn, a spokesman for the West German foreign ministry also said Iraqi troops had started to deploy around the embassies of Bulgaria, Rumania, and East Germany.

The Bonn spokesman said there had been no reports of any confrontation between the military and embassy staff.

Japan's embassy reported Iraqi troops had surrounded the mission as well as the American embassy. Only two staff remained at the Japanese embassy, deputy mission chief Akio Shirota and a secretary.

In Stockholm, the Swedish foreign ministry said the Iraqis has also thrown a ring around the embassies of Norway and Hungary.

A 15-year-old British boy, Alex Cameron Barnett from Scotland, has been released on a personal order from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and arrived Friday in the Jordanian capital, Amman.

He had been travelling alone and was in a British plane that got stranded in Kuwait during the invasion. Saddam Hussein was informed of the boy's plight and, after his propaganda show on television with British hostages Thursday, ordered his release.

Meanwhile, Jordan announced Friday it will reopen its border with Iraq to accommodate thousands of refugees trying to get away from the Gulf. Turkish press reports said 130,000 Pakistanis were believed to have set out for Turkey after the Jordanian border closure.

Jordan's King Hussein was expected to meet Austrian President Kurt Waldheim on Friday, after returning from a visit to Yemen and Sudan where he held talks on the Gulf crisis.

LAGOS (AUG. 24) - Nigeria will attend informal Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) talks in Vienna on Sunday, an official of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC) said here Friday.

Nigeria's delegation would be led by Minister of Petroleum Resources Jibril Aminu, he said.

Nigeria would use the opportunity of the meeting to state its position on the international oil market, including the Gulf crisis and the issue of the OPEC production quota.

The Nigerian delegation was also likely to raise the issue of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2, the official said.

The West African nation still maintains its opposition to any unilateral decision by any OPEC member to breach any of the agreements reached at the organisation's last conference in Geneva in July, he added.

A government source said Tuesday that Nigeria would consider as "highly immoral" any OPEC meeting convened solely for the purpose of allowing some member countries to increase output to make up for the loss to the market due to an international embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil.

The restoration of the sovereignty of Kuwait should be a major issue to be discussed by any OPEC meeting, said the source.

LONDON (AUG. 24) - British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd issued an urgent appeal Friday for the U.N. Security Council to approve fresh measures for enforcing the embargo against Iraq as Iraqi troops surrounded several embassies in Kuwait.

Mr. Hurd said it was "urgent and important that the Security Council should reach a conclusion" on debate over a resolution permitting the use of military force to ensure the sanctions against Iraq were upheld.

"We want to get acceptance by everybody on the absolute need and legality of enforcing the blockade" against Iraq, Mr. Hurd said, adding that "there's been some delay" on approval of the resolution caused by the Soviet Union.

"Iraq is vulnerable to sanctions -- she actually can be very seriously hurt by sanctions provided they are applied," Mr. Hurd said. He said he was in "direct touch" with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on the issue.

Speaking at a news conference, Mr. Hurd stated that Iraqi guards had been posted outside the British embassy in Kuwait "who appear to have instructions not to let people in and out."

A foreign office spokesman said later that the four staff remaining at the British embassy were inside but said he had no knowledge on whether they had made any attempt to leave the embassy grounds.

Mr. Hurd declined to specify what measures were being considered should Iraqi forces try to enter the embassy and evict the diplomats inside but said "no one expects unarmed diplomats to resist" such a move.

He said the siege around the embassies in Kuwait was not a separate issue but was "part of the general picture" and said Britain was "anxious that the response should be a collective one."

Mr. Hurd said the Iraqi oil tanker Ain Zalah had stopped discharging its oil in the Yemeni port of Aden. Another Iraqi tanker, the Baba Gurgur, was in port at Aden and three more Iraqi tankers were on their way to Aden "apparently full with Iraqi oil."

Mr. Hurd cited the tankers as an example of the kind of breach of sanctions against Iraq that "has to be stopped" and coupled the illustration with his appeal for swift action from the U.N. Security Council.

The foreign secretary also emphasized that Britain and other countries would hold individual Iraqi soldiers and ordinary citizens personally responsible for any harm that came to British and other foreign hostages in Kuwait and Iraq.

"I'm anxious that it should be rammed home in proper legal language," Mr. Hurd said, adding that there were precedents for holding individuals responsible for harm to foreigners in their country.

He said Britain "rejects absolutely the right of the Iraqis to carry out the order" to transfer embassies to Baghdad.

In a statement delivered to the Iraqi ambassador here, the government said that "the United Kingdom, along with most other states represented in Kuwait, has rejected the Iraqi demand for the closure of diplomatic missions in Kuwait by midnight tonight" (2000 GMT).

Belgian Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens said Iraq had moved the deadline up to 11:00 p.m. (1900 GMT).

Mr. Hurd also said he was staying in close touch with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker over developments in Kuwait and a British spokesman said the embassy staff in Kuwait "will be prepared for any eventuality."

SYDNEY (AUG. 24) - Australian stocks prices dived during the week as fears grew that the Gulf crisis would escalate into a war and the Federal Government's budget crushed hopes of interest rate falls, brokers said Friday.

The main market indicator, the all ordinaries index, plunged 75.1 points or 4.9 percent to 1,468.1.

The all industrials index fell 124.2 points to 2,177.1, the all resources lost 38.5 points to 914.3 and the gold marker dipped 72 points to 1,552.4.

Brokers said the falls were in line with declines on offshore markets, triggered by renewed fears that war in the Middle East could spark a global recession, and that Canberra's budget held little hope for falling interest rates.

Next week the market would be hostage to the Gulf crisis, they said.

Market leader and oil producer BHP defied the fall and rose five cents to 11 Australian dollars while News Corp., which reported a 43 percent slump in annual profit to 282.3 million dollars (231 million U.S.), lost 1.15 dollars to 10.35 dollars.

BTR Nylex shed 26 cents to 2.54 dollars, Brambles slid 1.20 dollars to 12.80 dollars and Westpac dipped 14 cents to 4.63 dollars.

Among the miners, CRA dived 1.40 dollars to 10.30 dollars and Western Mining dropped 40 cents to 5.14 dollars.

BEIJING (AUG. 24) - China's summer grain harvest is expected to reach 99.35 million tons this year, six percent above last year's record production, the New China News Agency (NCNA) reported Friday.

The record crop was achieved thanks to "a year of bumper harvests," NCNA said, as well as an extra one billion yuan (210 million dollars) the government invested this year into the key agricultural sector.

The overall yearly target for 1990 is 412.5 million tons, or five million more than the record 407.5 million tons harvested in 1989.

BAGHDAD (AUG. 24) - With the deadline set by Iraq for the closure of foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait about to expire, Iraqi soldiers on Friday moved near Western diplomatic missions, encircling several of them, according to reports reaching Bonn, London, Paris and other capitals.

Baghdad, arguing that Kuwait has been part of Iraq since its August 2 invasion, has demanded that all missions be closed by Friday night.

In London, the Foreign Office said Iraqi troops had encircled the British embassy in Kuwait City. Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said the soldiers had orders to let no one in our out.

He called the action ''illegal'' but gave no indication about possible British counter-action. The embassy staff has been cut to four.

The French foreign ministry said Iraqi troops had taken up positions near the French embassy.

Many of the 68 nations that have diplomatic relations with Kuwait, including the Soviet Union, Japan, Morocco and Saudi Arabia have indicated they will not close their embassies. The 12 members of the European Community (E.C.) said they would maintain their embassy services.

In addition to that of Britain, the embassies of the United States, Japan,

Sweden, Norway and Hungary were said to be surrounded by Iraqi troops.

In Bonn, a spokesman for the West German foreign ministry also said Iraqi troops had started to deploy around the embassies of Bulgaria, Rumania, and East Germany.

The Bonn spokesman said there had been no reports of any confrontation between the military and embassy staff.

Japan's embassy reported Iraqi troops had surrounded the mission as well as the American embassy. Only two staff remained at the Japanese embassy, deputy mission chief Akio Shirota and a secretary.

In Stockholm, the Swedish foreign ministry said the Iraqis has also thrown a ring around the embassies of Norway and Hungary.

A 15-year-old British boy, Alex Cameron Barnett from Scotland, has been released on a personal order from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and arrived Friday in the Jordanian capital, Amman.

He had been travelling alone and was in a British plane that got stranded in Kuwait during the invasion. Saddam Hussein was informed of the boy's plight and, after his propaganda show on television with British hostages Thursday, ordered his release.

Meanwhile, Jordan announced Friday it will reopen its border with Iraq to accommodate thousands of refugees trying to get away from the Gulf. Turkish press reports said 130,000 Pakistanis were believed to have set out for Turkey after the Jordanian border closure.

Jordan's King Hussein was expected to meet Austrian President Kurt Waldheim on Friday, after returning from a visit to Yemen and Sudan where he held talks on the Gulf crisis.

The Iraqi authorities have barred a group of dependents of American diplomats from Kuwait, mostly women and children, from leaving Baghdad, a correspondent for the U.S. television network Cnn reported from Baghdad Friday.

He said the group had been told it could only leave the Iraqi capital together with the entire U.S. staff of the U.S. embassy in Kuwait, which the Iraqi government has ordered to close Friday, together with all other foreign missions.

The U.S. dependents had been allowed to make the journey from Kuwait to Baghdad, Cnn said. Their ''special status'' was being respected for the time being and its was not feared that they would be removed to strategic locations, like other foreigners.

About ''six to eight diplomats'' were still in the U.S. embassy in Kuwait, Cnn said.

MANILA (AUG. 24) - Thousands of people were stranded in the streets or evacuated to higher ground Friday as monsoon rains worsened by a tropical depression unleashed flash floods in the Philippine capital.

Radio and television reports said that seven people had died, most of them drowned in floodwaters, but the Red Cross said that so far they had only confirmed one fatality, a young boy who fell into a manhole and drowned.

The Red Cross said over 3,100 families or 18,600 people were evacuated in Manila and other parts of Luzon island because of the floods.

Traffic was snarled thoughout the day in Manila as waters reached waist height in some major thoroughfares and higher in low-lying areas of the capital, parts of which are slightly below sea level.

The military and local government agencies dispatched trucks, amphibious vehicles and boats to ferry commuters who were left stranded by the floods.

Motorists abandoned their vehicles in the streets after the cars stalled. Local residents took to using improvised rafts to get around.

Even areas of the city that normally do not experience flooding during heavy rains suffered ankle-deep floods as rain fell on the city for the second day.

The weather bureau said the tropical depression is expected to intensify into a tropical storm by Saturday, when it is forecast to be 800 kilometers (500 miles) northeast of the capital.

Classes were suspended and state-run Philippine Airlines delayed all domestic flights excluding two destinations serviced by larger aircraft.

Two Manila-bound international flights -- a Korean Air jet from Seoul and a China Air Lines plane from Taipei -- were diverted to Mactan airport in the central city of Cebu.

NIAMEY (AUG. 24) - A 24-hour general strike called Friday in Niger by the central trade union body was widely followed.

Government offices stayed closed, as did businesses. Taxis and the city bus service were not running, and the international airport was closed, a reporter with the state news agency said.

National radio put out a minimum service.

The capital's big market-place was open, however, and in general the informal sector which plays a big role appeared to be ignoring the strike call.

Labour leader Lawali Mouatri said the strike was being widely followed elsewhere.

The strike is a bid to get the government to cancel budget cuts ordered in May, to press for a national debate and conference on Niger's economic and social problems, and to obtain a commitment to political pluralism.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) - In the event of a war with Iraq, U.S. military leaders plan a quick, decisive strike with simultaneous action by army, air force and marines units now assembled in the Gulf, according to a report in the Los Angeles Times Friday.

The paper said the Joint Chiefs of Staff supported an all-out effort to destroy not only Iraq's huge military machine but also President Saddam Hussein's command structure.

General Michael Dugan, air force chief of staff, told the newspaper in an interview: ''We are not looking at a gradual escalation. We will attempt to be decisive.''

He said U.S. forces were ''postured for a joint attack''. Dugan gave no details about targets in the Gulf except to say that the enemy centre should be hit.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) - Two Iraqi MiG-23 fighter jets opened fire on two U.S. warplanes inside Saudi airspace this week along the Saudi-Iraqi border, a newspaper reported Friday, quoting U.S. administration intelligence officials.

The U.S. F-15 Eagles, which had been testing Iraqi air defenses along the tense border, were not hit by the cannon and rocket fire, The Washington Times quoted the intelligence sources as saying.

The American aircraft did not return fire at the Soviet-made MiGs, and withdrew from the area, they added.

The newspaper quoted a U.S. official as saying "we were testing their (Iraqi air defenses. We wanted to see what they would do."

There was no word on when or precisely where the confrontation took place.

The shots were believed to be the first fired in Saudi Arabia since the massive U.S. troop buildup there began August 8 in response to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Iraq Wednesday said two unidentified aircraft had penetrated Iraqi airspace.

NEW DELHI (AUG. 24) - Heavy monsoon rains and floods have killed 75 people and caused widespread damage in the western Indian state of Gujarat, the Press Trust of India (PTI) reported Friday.

Ten of the victims were killed since early Thursday in the coastal regions of Gujarat state, the news agency said.

More than 10,000 people, mostly poor villagers, had been shifted to safer places by the authorities after rain-fed rivers inundated several areas in the state.

News reports said the floods had seriously damaged crops and buildings.

Monsoon floods have also claimed dozens of lives in southern India.

SINGAPORE (AUG. 24) - The United States predicted that Singapore's economic growth for 1990 would be between 8.5 and nine percent.

According to a report prepared by the U.S. Embassy here earlier this month, and released to the press Friday, the overall performance for Singapore was expected to be strong next year, although there were signs of an erosion.

The report said inflation was going up because of rising import and labour costs and the tight labour market. It also predicted that a sluggish investment will limit future productivity increases.

Despite these constraints, the economy is expected to grow by seven to 7.5 percent for next year, the report said.

It said that for Singapore to continue to grow economically it must solve its labour shortage problem and restructure its educational system to produce a highly educated and technically competent workforce.

The report said that the republic was a good prospect for U.S. firms as it had an excellent location for a regional marketing, warehousing and distribution base, with good transportation and communication facilities.

Computers, telecommunications equipment and services, and electronic components were singled out as items with good potential for growth.

The United States is the 12th-largest export market for Singapore.

SINGAPORE (AUG. 24) - Oil prices on the Singapore International Monetary Exchange (SIMEX) moved lower Friday to finish off their all-time high levels.

Dealers said High Sulphur Fuel Oil (HSFO) for September finished Friday at 166.50 U.S. dollars a ton, down from Thursday's all-time high of 176.50 dollars.

At one stage Friday, HSFO for September shot to 179.00 U.S. dollars a ton, before the panic buying subsided. A total of 775 lots were traded for September.

HSFO for October ended at 162.70 U.S. dollars a ton, down 70 U.S. cents from Thursday's close.

The price for Dubai crude moved down marginally to 29.75 U.S. dollars a barrel, down from Thursday's 30.50 dollars a barrel.

Dealers said the trading was a little more settled with buyers staying back for a more clearer picture from the Gulf with hopes of some reduction in the tension over the week-end.

NEW DELHI (AUG. 24) - A police officer was among 15 people killed in Sikh separatist-linked violence in India's Punjab state, where Sikh militants are campaigning for an independent homeland, police said Friday.

Police sub-inspector Mohan Lal was killed and five other policemen were wounded when Sikh separatists ambushed their vehicle in the border district of Amritsar late Thursday, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said.

No further details were available.

PTI said security forces shot dead seven Sikh militants, while the rebels killed six civilians. A girl was killed during a gunbattle between the police and security forces.

Among the victims were two Sikh separatists who were killed by federal border guards in a gunbattle when they sneaked into Punjab from Pakistan, which is accused by India of backing the militnats.

Four others escaped the fighting, PTI said, adding that security forces seized a light machine gun, three AK-47 rifles and eight grenades from the site near the Indo-Pakistan border.

The latest killings brought to at least 1,539 the number of people killed this year in Punjab in violence linked to the militant campaign for a Sikh homeland called Khalistan (Land of the Pure).

DHAHRAN, SAUDI ARABIA (AUG. 24P) - The rate of arrivals at the U.S. air base of Dhahran on the eastern Saudi coastline eased Friday, after a frantic two-week military build-up.

Four C-5 Galaxy transport planes touched down in the morning with troops and equipment, said an officer with the Military Aircraft Command. Previously, U.S. aircraft were landing at the rate of one every five or ten minutes.

"The bulk of our troops are now in place and have been sent off to various desert bases toward the Kuwaiti border," said Bill, a soldier from Kentucky who could not be fully identified under military regulations.

The soldier said that now the main task of the transport planes was to ferry logistical materiel for the U.S. Operation Desert Shield, launched to protect the Saudi kingdom after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

Under U.S. military censorship, correspondents are not allowed to disclose the numbers of troops and arms, or the exact location of bases.

Sweating profusely, a group of young soldiers was taking shelter from the scorching heat under a tent and clutching their water bottles as weapons of survival.

Buses normally used to ferry pilgrims from around the world to Moslem holy sites were parked nearby. The vehicles now serve to transport the American soldiers to their various bases.

While combat helicopters hovered over the Dhahran base, Falcon and F-15 aircraft took off and landed regularly to patrol Saudi airspace.

Several dozen other U.S. and Saudi warplanes, their cockpits open, were ready for take-off at a moment's notice. The aircraft were armed with bombs under their wings.

Neither artillery nor the F-117 Stealth bombers, undetectable by radar, were in sight. But man-made dunes were visible in the distant sands.

"If you were authorized to go down there, you would see that the base is very well defended," said a U.S. Marine who served as a guide on a tour of the Dhahran facility.

GENEVA (AUG. 24) - The International Air Transport Association is to propose fare hikes to compensate for an increase in fuel prices at a special meeting in Geneva next week, the organization said Friday.

The price rises will be discussed at a "joint composite passenger and cargo conference," an unusual move as passenger and freight issues are normally discussed separately.

The combination and the swiftness of the decision to hold the Tuesday to Friday meeting reflected air companies' desire to act rapidly, an IATA spokesman said.

"The conference was not convened in direct response to the crisis in the Gulf, although the events of the last few weeks have played their part," he added.

He said it was not certain that the price increases being proposed would cover the rise in fuel prices, after oil prices rose from 20 dollars a barrel to 30 dollars in less than a month following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2 and a subsequent international embargo on oil from both countries.

Fuel accounts for around 15 percent of airline costs, and several airlines have already said they will be seeking fare increases, including Lufthansa of West Germany and British Airways, which wants to raise prices on North Atlantic routes by six percent.

Governments would probably accept moderate increases, the IATA spokesman said. About 40 major airlines are expected to attend next week's IATA meeting in Geneva.

RABAT (AUG. 24) - A Chad-Libya mini-summit broke up here Friday without reaching a settlement of their 17-year territorial dispute which sparked two rounds of fighting in the 1980s.

A Chadian source said there was no agreement on the reputedly mineral-rich Aouzou Strip in northernmost Chad occupied by Libya in 1973, nor on the release of each country's prisoners of war.

Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafi and Chad's President Hissein Habre discussed the issues for more than two hours on Thursday with King Hassan of Morocco.

The Moroccan monarch arranged the last-minute encounter ahead of a mutually agreed deadline at the end of this month to take the matter to the International Court of Justice at The Hague if the two neighbours failed to find their own political settlement.

A decision to do just that "in the immediate future" was taken by Colonel Kadhafi and Mr. Habre, the draft statement seen by Agence France-Presse said.

But the final text presented for signature by the foreign ministers made no mention of that decision, leading Chad's minister Acheikh Ibn Oumar to protest that Moroccan counterpart Abdellatif Filali, who prepared the final version, had truncated the original.

That drew the heated retort, journalists nearby overheard, that Morocco had not the slightest interest in changing anything in the communique since it was not involved in the dispute.

The Chadian minister refused to sign. The delegations broke up, and both said no attempt had been made subsequently to patch things up, with Col. Kadhafi flying off to Algeria at midday and Mr. Habre due to leave for home later Friday.

The Moroccan final text spoke in generalities, compared with the draft, and although it referred to "decisions taken by the heads of state," it failed to spell them out. No explanation could be obtained Friday from Moroccan sources about the discrepancies.

MOSCOW (AUG. 24) - A total of 110 people have been hospitalized after firefighters struggled to put out a fire caused by a blast in a newly-built chemical plant in the city of Ufa in the Urals, the Tass news agency reported Friday.

Most of those hospitalized were firemen injured while fighting the blaze provoked by several blasts that ripped through the acetone-phenol plant late Wednesday, the official Soviet news agency said.

Tass had reported Thursday that 25 people received serious burns and a number were poisoned by phenol, a toxic corrosive poison which can be used for making explosives and synthetic resins.

A first explosion occurred as final preparations were being made to put the phenol plant into production, the agency said.

It was followed by several other blasts in various buildings at the plant in Ufa, and a fire may have reached units producing hydrocarbons, Tass said.

The condition of three of the 110 hospitalized was described by doctors as critical, Tass said.

Sixty percent of Ufa, a city of one million people, are without water after the explosion because "a certain number of chemical products" have leaked into the nearby Ofimka River.

Tass earlier reported that phenol had leaked into the Ofimka and did not rule out the possibility that other, more dangerous, toxic chemicals had spilled into the river.

All the region's medical centres have been put on a state of alert after the explosion and 4,000 patients in the Ufa hospital have been evacuated from the city, Tass said. The agency did not indicate whether the lack of water was the reason for the evacuation.

A village situated 15 kilometres (nine miles) from the plant had been evacuated Thursday after a highly poisonous cloud was seen heading for it, but on Friday Tass provided no further information on the poisonous cloud.

Citing Aldjet Turianov, the health minister for the autonomous Soviet republic of Bashkir, whose capital is Ufa, Tass noted that the explosion was not the first accident of this kind in the region.

In April, toxic waste from the Khimprom herbicide plant, not far from the chemical plant that exploded Wednesday, drained into a local river.

Residents in the area were not alerted, however, and 60 percent of the local population drank water contaminated with phenol for several days.

When consumed, phenol-contaminated water causes lesions to the kidney and liver and can cause cancer, Mr. Turianov said.

In June 1989, 600 people were killed in a train accident near Ufa caused by an explosion provoked by a gasline leak along railway tracks.

A gas pipeline exploded when two trains passed each other close to the leak and a spark hit a pocket of gas.

NICOSIA (AUG. 24) - The speaker of the Iraqi parliament Friday called on the American people to protest against the U.S. military build-up in the Gulf, warning that Iraq's weaponry could not be compared to that of Vietnam.

Saadi Mehdi Saleh, in a message to Americans carried by the official Iraqi News Agency, also gave assurances that Baghdad had no intention to "threaten the interests of America or the West."

"The Bush Administration seems to have forgotten the tragedy of Vietnam and its repercussions on the American people," he said. "It does not realize that Iraq is not Vietnam, and that Iraqi arms are not those of the Vietnamese."

SINGAPORE (AUG. 24) - A singapore group has bought a 95,310-ton oil tanker, the Pasadena, to stockpile oil supplies, industry officials said Friday.

Officials said the move comes as oil prices soared to even greater heights over fears of a military conflict in the Gulf. One official said the 23-year-old tanker was bought at 7.3 million dollars.

A port of Singapore Authority (Psa) official said the Pasadena was currently anchored within Singapore port limits. It could stockpile about 580,000 barrels of fuel oil.

Industry sources estimate that the cost of hiring a supertanker for storing crude oil could run to more than 25,000 dollars a day.

Singapore is the world's third biggest oil refining centre, but oil is also stored at independent tank farms like those run by Paktank, Van Ommeren and Oiltanking.

AMSTERDAM (AUG. 24) - Dutch plane maker Fokker said Friday it tripled its net profit in the first half of this year compared to the same period of 1989 to 41.9 million guilder (25 million dollars).

Turnover was up 18 percent at 1.3 billion guilder (778.4 million dollars).

Group financial director Erik Jan Nederkoorn told journalists Fokker was standing by its forecast in May that it would double net profit for the whole of the year.

Fokker had tripled net profit last year over the 1988 level to 42.4 million guilder (25.3 million dollars).

The company escaped bankruptcy in 1987 when it made a net loss of 107 million guilder thanks to an injection of cash from the state and has since turned itself around thanks to the success of its medium-haul Fokker-100 plane.

Mr. Nederkoorn said that Fokker had nothing to fear from oil price increases due to the Gulf crisis.

"This only underlines the advantages of modern planes" which use less energy, he said.

But if the fall of the dollar continued in the long-term it could have a negative influence of results in coming years, he warned.

LONDON (AUG. 24) - Iraq bears full responsibility for the welfare of the four remaining staff at the British embassy in Kuwait and other foreign diplomats in the emirate, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said here Friday.

"If anything happens, it will be the responsibility of the Iraqis," she said. "It will be the responsibility of a dictator who seized another country by force, guns and tanks."

Referring to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, Mrs. Thatcher added that "every bit of the problem is down to him."

Government sources confirmed separately that the telephone line serving the British embassy in Kuwait had been cut.

But the sources stressed that the line had often been cut and then reconnected in the past and said communications between the ambassador's residence inside the embassy compound and London were still intact.

PARIS (AUG. 24) - The Paris Bourse staged a strong recovery on Friday after a disastrous performance for the August trading month, as the CAC 40 stock price index gained 4.12 percent on the day after opening up 2.01 percent.

Operators said the Friday uptrend was encouraged late in the session by a higher opening on Wall Street. However, the recovery was primarily technical, perhaps encouraged by the start on Friday of a new trading month, they said.

Investors remain cautious, as there is nothing about the on-going Gulf crisis in their eyes to justify renewed optimism. Some of them said that with the problem of the Western embassies in Kuwait and foreigners of many nationalities being held in Kuwait and Iraq, the weekend looked like a "very risky affair".

High oil prices continue to worry financial circles here, and one analyst said new economic forecasts would have to be developed to reflect them. Leading shares were the main beneficiaries of the Friday uptrend, including Hachette, Europe No. 1, UCB, oil stocks and Avions Dassault.

ABU DHABI (AUG. 24) - Kuwaiti resistance fighters have been carrying out guerrilla attacks against Iraqi forces, the exiled Kuwaiti news agency Kuna reported Friday.

Kuna said the Iraqis, most of them in their late teens, were terrified ''even when a stone or an empty bottle'' is thrown at them.

During the past few days, refugees from Kuwait have told of witnessing several Molotov cocktail attacks on Iraqi troops, which they said ''destroyed'' at least five tanks and killed or wounded a number of soldiers.

The agency said Iraqi troops had closed down several mosques where calls for a ''jihad'' (holy war) against the Iraqi forces originated.

Every day, resistance fighters reportedly tack pictures of exiled Emir Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed as-Sabah and Crown Prince Sheikh Saad al-Abdullah as-Sabah to street signs to confuse the Iraqis.

PRAGUE (AUG 24) - Soviet Ambassador Boris Pankin is suspected of working as a KGB agent specialising in propaganda and disinformation, a Czechoslovak newspaper reported Friday.

A spokesman for the foreign ministry here dismissed the allegations as "baseless" in a statement carried by the official news agency CTK.

The independent weekly Respekt said Mr. Pankin, 59, is believed to have headed a Soviet secret police unit in charge of disinformation.

Sources at Respekt, which has a circulation of 100,000, said that before the publication of its latest edition, Mr. Pankin refused to let journalists at the newspaper interview him, saying he was "tired."

During an "informal meeting" with Alexander Udaltsov, press secretary at the Soviet Embassy in Prague, foreign ministry spokesman Lubos Dobrovsky expressed "regret" over the article and said Mr. Pankin "has contributed in an important way to the normalization of relations between Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union," CTK said.

Observers here note that Mr. Udaltsov is the son of former KGB agent Ivan Udaltsov, who in 1968 took part in preparations for the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

ATHENS (AUG. 24) - A fire ravaging Mount Athos for the past 10 days spread Friday despite efforts by a massive firefighting force, including army troops, to quench the blaze in northeastern Greece.

Forestry officials said some 1,500 soldiers, 30 fire trucks, eight bulldozers, and dozens of police and forest rangers failed to stop the fire spreading on two fronts between the Aghios Dafni region and the Mount Athos peninsula.

It had razed hundreds of hectares (acres) of forest and crops and damaged part of Simeon Petras monastery, but doed not threaten other monasteries or inhabitated areas for the moment.

"Only rain can put it out now," a firefighting official commented after torrential rain lashed almost all the country except for the Mount Athos region Thursday night.

The cause of the blaze, which began in a monatery in Karakalou on August 14, is not known. Some officials believe it was arson, while others blamed human negligence.

HONG KONG (AUG. 24) - Typhoon Yancy killed 111 people and left 4.14 million others homeless in China's eastern seaboard province of Fujian, the New China News Agency (NCNA) reported Friday.

The official agency, in a report monitored here, estimated economic losses from the powerful typhoon to be 590 million yuan (125 million dollars).

It said 171,300 hectares (423,100 acres) of crops were damaged and 31,008 houses collapsed under the typhoon's gale force winds and heavy rains. Some 450 bridges were destroyed and 5,352 head of livestock killed, the agency added.

Eighty-four people were killed when their houses collapsed, 25 were washed away by floods and two were electrocuted, NCNA said.

It was the fourth typhoon in the past two months to hit Fujian province, directly across from Taiwan, and inundated 30 townships and five county towns.

Yancy left at least 11 people dead in Taiwan after it plowed into the island last weekend and caused damage there worth 3.7 million U.S. dollars.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) - Iraq, faced with a naval quarantine in the Gulf, is circumventing the U.N.-mandate global trade embargo by receiving air shipments of supplies, including chemical weapon products, the White House said Friday.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater Friday said that U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Thomas Pickering "has outlined at the United Nations the various efforts being undertaken by Iraq to circumvent the sanctions."

Mr. Fitzwater said Iraq's evasion of the embargo included "aviation shipments into Baghdad ... military materiel that appears to be coming in through some routes and also the procurement of chemical warfare products ... from some other countries."

Asked which countries were aiding Iraq and what route the cargo planes were using, Mr. Fitzwater said, "I am not willing to identify sources or the avenues."

Mr. Fitzwater said Washington was trying to end violations of the embargo but refused to go into details at this stage.

Mr. Pickering cited several examples of attempts by Iraq, with the complicity of other countries, to export oil but he also did not name those countries.

He also mentioned Iraqi efforts "to illegally import many different commodities -- arms, machinery, steel."

The United Nations imposed an international embargo against Iraq following its August 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait.

The five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council are currently discussing a draft resolution that would permit the use of minimum force to uphold the embargo.

Mr. Pickering Thursday said the five -- the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France -- had agreed to refer the draft text to their respective governments for approval.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) - The U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, where a handful of diplomats Friday awaited a possible intervention by Iraqi forces, is a complex of buildings ringed by a high wall reinforced after a 1983 terrorist attack.

Only one steel gate, protected by concrete barriers against suicide car-bombs, pierces the long, blank wall nearly three meters (10 feet) high, according to diplomats and journalists who have been posted there.

Iraq has ordered all embassies in Kuwait to close by Friday. The United States and more than 20 other countries have refused to obey.

On Friday, about a dozen Iraqi soldiers were at the gate, a State Department official said. The soldiers seemed to be blocking access, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Non-essential diplomatic personnel have been evacuated along the Marines who usually guard the embassy were withdrawn Thursday.

The rectangular enclosure, separated by a highway from a Gulf beach, was reinforced after a pro-Iranian terrorist crashed a truck loaded with gas cylinders through the steel gates on December 12, 1983.

The attack killed six people, including the driver, and destroyed the embassy's administration building.

"I suppose a tank, like an Iraqi tank, could get through, but it has been reinforced, the wall has been upgraded and the entry gates," said a diplomat who has served in Kuwait who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Inside the gate, there is the chancery, a single-story stone building, and to the north, the brick administration building that has been rebuilt, said Francois Dickman, a retired Foreign Service officer who was U.S. ambassador to Kuwait from 1979 to 1983.

The complex also includes the ambassador's residence, a two-story building, a warehouse, a garden, a swimming pool and parking lot.

DUBLIN (AUG. 24) - Dublin exploded in joy late Friday at news that Irish hostage Brian Keenan, held hostage in Lebanon for more than four years, had been released.

"Everyone in Ireland is overjoyed," the government said in a communique, adding: "The government would like to express their deep appreciation to the government of Iran for the effort" it had made to secure the release, while the Syrian government was also thanked for its "assistance."

The Irish government said it hoped "this example will soon be followed everywhere in the Middle East so that all hostages, no matter where they are being held or by whom, will be released."

One of Mr. Keenan's two sisters, Mrs. Elaine Spence, said just one word: "Happiness." The other, Mrs. Brenda Gilham, said: "It's absolutely brilliant."

Then, in a joint message to the 39-year-old teacher before leaving for Damascus where Mr. Keenan was being handed over to Irish officials, they said "Hang on Brian, we'll be with you in just a few hours."

The two sisters had left their homes in Belfast earlier Friday for Dublin where they were told of the release. They were joined in their hotel by Irish Foreign Minister Gerry Collins.

In London the Foreign Office said: "We are delighted at the release of the Irish hostage Brian Keenan. In agreement with the Irish government and at the request of his family, we have for some years regarded Keenan as Irish."

Mr. Keenan, born in Belfast, has double British and Irish nationality.

A Foreign Office spokesman also hailed the role played by Iran and Syria in obtaining the release.

Meanwhile the families of Terry Waite and John McCarthy, the British hostages still held in Lebanon, expressed joy and hope at the freeing of Mr. Keenan.

David Waite, brother of the Archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy to Lebanon who was kidnapped in January 1987, said he hoped Mr. Keenan could give him news of Terry Waite, 50.

The Friends of John McCarthy, a group campaigning for the release of the 33-year-old journalist who was seized in April 1986, said they were "delighted" but spokesman Joan Willows said: "Brian and John had spent almost their entire period of captivity together so we are concerned about how John will react to Brian's release."

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) - Since American troops were first dispatched to the Gulf on August 7, Sergeant Anthony Johnson, an army recruiter here, has been besieged by calls from volunteers.

"Army: Be all that you can be," reads a poster on the wall above the sergeant's head.

The telephone rings frequently -- callers eager to test their mettle in what some see shaping up as a desert war. But few will be chosen.

Many are too young, or too old, not quite smart enough, or fit enough. Many are foreigners seeking a route to remain in the country without proper documents, Sgt. Johnson said.

"I have at least twice as many phone calls," as before the crisis, he said.

"I have more work, but it's bad work. A lot of people are not qualified."

The Army and Marines require a secondary school diploma, and a physical examination and drug test.

A successful recruit will be housed, fed and clothed by the military and will received 700 dollars a month during his or her first year of service.

"I got several calls from Canada from people who wanted to fight with the Americans," he said. "I have mostly Trinidadian and Jamaican people who have lost their green card (residence permit)."

One Kuwait student tried to sign up, but did not want to commit himself, as required, for the required three to four years.

"He wanted to defend his country, he wanted to join but just for a short tour. He was very disappointed," the sergeant said.

Veterans called, too. One 41-year-old Vietnam veteran calle but he was well beyond the 35-year age limit to enlist, Sgt. Johnson said.

TOKYO (AUG 25) - Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu was due to meet with leading ministers Saturday evening to consider the Gulf crisis and Japan's contribution to multinational forces in the region, government sources said.

The urgent meeting is expected to hear a detailed report from Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama, due to to return earlier in the day from a regional tour of Saudi Arabia, Oman, Jordan, Egypt and Turkey.

Mr. Nakayama, who stopped in Stockholm on Friday before returning to Tokyo, reportedly hinted that the time might have come to change laws which prevent the dispatch of Japanese military personnel abroad.

"We may have reached a time when the laws must be adjusted," he reportedly told Japanese journalists in the Swedish capital. "We must discuss what can be done as a member of the international family."

Japan, whose post-war constitution renounces the threat or use of force to settle international disputes, has maintained "self-defence" forces since 1954 but their activities are restricted by law to Japanese territory.

The American ambassador to Japan, Michael Armacost, suggested Thursday that Tokyo send minesweepers to the Gulf, underlining the "importance of being involved directly in multinational ventures."

In this context, Japan's ambassador to the United States, Ryohei Murata, was recalled to Tokyo on Saturday for urgent consultations.

SANTIAGO (AUG. 24) - The bodies of two leftist youths who disappeared following the 1973 militiary coup have been exhumed from an illegal grave in central Chile, authorities said.

Judge German Hermosilla, leader of the investigating team at the site in the town of Paine, confirmed Thursday that the dead were Saul Carcamo and Ricardo Carrasco, aged 18 and 20 at the time of their death.

The two victims were known members of the Leftist Revolutionary Movement (MIR) and were believed to have been killed five days after the September 11 coup that toppled the constitutional government of Salvador Allende and brought Gen. Augusto Pinochet to power.

Preliminary investigations have indicated that both victims were shot repeatedly in the back and that Carrasco's skull was cracked after he was shot twice in the neck at close range.

Hermosilla ordered the digging after the Vicariate of Solidarity of the Catholic Church compiled testimony from area residents about dozens of people who were allegedly murdered by a group of 100 armed civilians and 27 military police in Paine following the coup.

According to Patricio Araya, a friend of the two victims who witnessed their deaths, the youths were dragged from Araya's house and shot by a group of people which included members of the military police.

Since the democratic government of Patricio Aylwin took office March 11 ending the 16-year Pinochet dictatorship, reports of a large number of illegal graves dating from after the coup have been investigated.

Earlier this month, the Chilean Human Rights Commission estimated that some 300 mass graves could be found across the country.

Five bodies exhumed from Paine earlier this week were found to be those of people who died before 1973.

BILBAO, SPAIN (AUG 24) EFE - At least 23 people were injured after police clashed Friday with Basque nationalists who tried to pull down the Spanish flag hanging from the town hall in the northern Spanish city of Bilbao, police said

Police fired tear gas and rubber bullets at hundreds of Basque nationalists who chased and attacked a police officer after trying to replace the Spanish flag with the red, white and green standard of the Basque region during Bilbao's annual Semana Grande celebrations.

One of the wounded was operated on after a rubber bullet hit him in the eye while another two people were reported as being seriously injured. Some 20 others were treated for bruises and cuts.

Police arrested three people.

Friday's incident followed the death earlier this week of a suspected supporter of the Basque separatist group ETA after a bomb he was preparing in his car exploded before he could carry out an attack on a supermarket outside the northern city of San Sebastian.

Some 600 people have been killed since ETA took up arms in the 1960's to fight for independence for the Basque region.

TEHRAN (AUG 24) EFE - Some 21,000 prisoners from both sides in the eight-year Iran-Iraq War had been exchanged by Friday, Irani officials said.

The latest batch of 1,500 were delivered to the frontier earlier Friday where they were received by officials from the International Committee of the Red Cross.

A spokesman for the Iranian Foreign Ministry said a Boeing 747 Jumbo-jet was set to make the next exchange flying an unspecified number of Iraqis to Baghdad before returning with an equal number of Iranians.

The repatriation of POWs began last week with the surprise announcement from Iraq's President Saddam Hussein finally settling peace terms between the two countries, which agreed to a cease-fire in 1988.

Saddam also agreed to return territory occupied during the war and the shared use of the Shatt al-Arab waterway.

But Tadini, who will be in charge of the sales, said the state would continue directing the public services, and that the private sector would manage distribution.

He added that the transference of public services to private hands, a central plank in President Fernando Collor de Mello's economic reform program, was necessary to encourage investment in areas currently lacking resources.

SANTIAGO (AUG 24) EFE - The bodies of three Chilean farmers were found wrapped in plastic bags and tied up with electrical cords in a clandestine grave in the southern part of the country, government officials said Friday.

The bodies, apparently shot during the bloody 1973 military coup of Gen. Augusto Pinochet, were dug up Thursday in a cemetery in Talca, 258 km south of Santiago.

Judge Christiane Ibarra led the excavation after the Catholic Church Vicariate of Solidarity released a report detailing "proven homicide, illegal disinterment and burial" in the region.

A lawyer for the Catholic organization, Silvia Espinoza, said the three men were farmers who, according to press reports at the time, were accused of attacking a conscript in 1973.

The report said a military district attorney ordered the three men arrested and shot on October 3, 1973 without trial.

Workers exhuming the bodies Thursday discovered that the three men had been illegally dug up and reburied for unknown reasons in the same cemetery on two previous occasions.

Meanwhile in Huelquen, 25 km south of Santiago, excavations continued in the town's cemetery where four executed politicians are believed buried.

Since President Patricio Aylwin's democratic government came to power last March, reports of a large number of mass graves throughout the country dating from shortly after the coup have been investigated.

Many of the victims were supporters of former president Salvador Allende, ousted from power by Pinochet.

Earlier this month, the Chilean Commission of Human Rights estimated that some 300 mass graves could be found throughout the country.

PANAMA CITY (AUG 24) EFE - Three U.S. soldiers billeted to Panama have been arrested and charged with planning several bank robberies, Panamanian police said Friday.

Judicial Technical Police (PTJ) director Leslie Loaiza said Panamanian police gave information on the group's plans to the U.S. Army Department of Criminal Investigations (CID), which arrested the soldiers at the U.S. Clayton military base near Panama City.

The soldiers had two shotguns, several pistols, masks and "detailed plans" which they were planning to use in robberies of at least four banks and other businesses, Loaiza said.

He added that the the PTJ had initially planned to arrest the soldiers in the act of committing the robberies, but discovered that the soldiers were planning to murder a bank watchman as well as a taxi-driver whose taxi they intended to use in the first heist.

U.S. Army spokesman Lt. Col Bruce Bell said the Army was investigating the allegations and that the three may be court-martialed.

Loaiza said it was not known whether there was a connection between these arrests and the wave of thefts from banks and businesses in recent months in Panama.

U.S. soldiers are stationed in Panama following the U.S. invasion last December to oust military dictator Gen. Manuel Noriega from power.

WINDHOEK (AUG. 24) XINHUA - EARTHLIFE NAMIBIA, A WILD- LIFE-PROTECTING BRANCH OF EARTHLIFE AFRICA, IS SCHEDULED TO DIS- CUSS THE PLANNED KILLING OF 20,000 SEALS ON THE NAMIBIAN COAST AT ITS SEPTEMBER 3 GENERAL MEETING.

THE MEETING FOLLOWS THE DISPUTE ON THE PLANNED KILLING OF 30,000 SEALS ALONG THE CAPE COAST OF SOUTH AFRICA BY A TAIWANESE BUSINESSMAN.

THE ORGANIZATION IS NOW PARTICULARLY CONCERNED ABOUT AN ALLE- GED QUOTA GIVEN TO A LOCAL BUSINESSMAN OF KILLING MORE THAN 20,000 SEALS ON THE COAST OUTSIDE LUDERITZ OF NAMIBIA.

THE GENERAL MEETING IS EXPECTED TO DETERMINE IF THE KILLING OF 20,000 SEALS ALONG THE NAMIBIAN COAST IS "CULLING" OR "HAR- VESTING".

ENVIRONMENTALISTS SAID THAT "CULLING" IS AN ARTIFICIAL REDUC- TION OF A SEAL POPULATION WHEN IT BECOMES TOO LARGE TO BE SUP- PORTED IN ITS ENVIRONMENT WHILE "HARVESTING" IS A REDUCTION OF A SEAL POPULATION FOR ECONOMIC PROFIT.

ENVIRONMENTALISTS SUPPORT SEAL "CULLING" BUT OPPOSE SEAL "HARVESTING". EARTHLIFE NAMIBIA SAID IN A PRESS RELEASE THAT IN ORDER TO HAVE A CLEAR UNDERSTANDING OF THE KILLING OF SEALS ALONG NAMIBIAN COAST, IT IS IMPORTANT TO KNOW WHETHER THE KILLING IS CULLING OR HARVESTING.

THE SEAL POPULATION ALONG THE COAST OF SOUTH AFRICA AND NA- MIBIA IS ABOVE 600,000. PELTS OF YOUNG SEALS CAN BE MADE INTO EXPENSIVE SEALSKIN.

"THE PUBLIC HAS THE RIGHT TO KNOW DETAILS ABOUT THE SIZE OF THE EXISTING SEAL POPULATION, THE DANGERS OF ITS DECLINE FOR NATURAL REASONS AND THE FACTORS ON WHICH THE DECISION TO ALLOW THE KILLING OF THE SEALS WAS BASED " ARGUED THE ORGANIZATION.

THOSE WHO STAND FOR KILLING SEALS ARGUED THAT SEALS CONSUME TOO MUCH SEA

RESOURCES. BUT SUCH KIND OF ARGUMENT HAS BEEN BITTERLY CHALLENGED BY ENVIRONMENTALISTS.

AFTER HE AND BURGOMASTERS FROM VARIOUS DISTRICTS MET WITH PRESIDENT ALBERTO FUJIMORI AT THE GOVERNMENT PALACE, BELMONT TOLD REPORTERS, "WE HAVE TO SUPPORT THE MORALIZATION, THE WORKING SPIRIT, THE RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF AUTHORITY AND THE NEW SPIRITUALITY THAT (THE GOVERNMENT) WANTS TO PUT IN PLACE IN THE COUNTRY."

DURING THE MEETING, ACCORDING TO BELMONT, FUJIMORI EXPLAINED THE GOVERNMENT'S ECONOMIC RECOVERY PLAN AND CALLED FOR THEIR UNDERSTANDING AND COOPERATION IN VIEW OF THE EFFORT AND SACRIFICE NEEDED OVER THE NEXT SIX MONTHS, THE AMOUNT OF TIME OFFICIALS PREDICT IT WILL TAKE TO ACHIEVE ECONOMIC STABILITY.

ON ANOTHER FRONT, SECOND SENATE VICE-PRESIDENT JULIAN BUSTAMANTE SAID HERE THURSDAY THAT "THE PEOPLE HAVE A LOT OF FAITH AND CONFIDENCE THAT EVERYTHING WILL CHANGE FOR THE BETTER, DESPITE THE DIFFICULT SITUATION THE COUNTRY IS IN."

BUSTAMANTE ALSO CALLED ON THE WORKING CLASS TO CONTINUE THEIR EFFORTS IN WHATEVER FIELD THEY WERE IN, BECAUSE THAT IS THE ONLY WAY TO SAVE PERU FROM THE CRISIS IT IS IN.

AFTER THE NEW ECONOMIC STABILIZATION MEASURES WERE PUT INTO EFFECT ON AUGUST 9 WITH A SHARP RISE IN THE PRICE OF ESSENTIAL GOODS, PERU'S DOMESTIC MARKET HAS STABILIZED SOMEWHAT OVER THE PAST FEW DAYS AND PRICES ARE SHOWING A TENDENCY TO GRADUALLY FALL, IN KEEPING WITH THE GOVERNMENT'S APPLICATION OF THE LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND.

MANILA (AUG. 24) XINHUA - THE PHILIPPINE GOVERNMENT INTENDS TO MAXIMIZE THE ECONOMIC POTENTIALS OF COCONUT PRODUCTS AS THE COUNTRY IS BESET BY AN IMPENDING OIL CRISIS DUE TO THE MIDDLE EAST CONFLICT, PRESIDENT CORAZON AQUINO SAID HERE TODAY.

IN A SPEECH AT THE 4TH ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF THE NATIONAL COCONUT WEEK, THE PRESIDENT CALLED FOR RADICAL USES OF COCONUT, SUCH AS EXPANDED USE OF

COCO DIESEL AND COCOBUNKER FOR INDUSTRIAL POWER.

SHE SAID THAT SHE HAS DIRECTED THE NATIONAL POWER CORPORATION TO COORDINATE WITH THE PHILIPPINE COCONUT AUTHORITY IN EXPLORING SUCH PROSPECTS.

THE PRESIDENT CALLED FOR THE REBUILDING OF THE COUNTRY'S COCONUT INDUSTRY. SHE LAMENTED THE SLOW GROWTH OF THE COCONUT INDUSTRY WHICH USED TO BE THE COUNTRY'S TOP EXPORT EARNER.

THE PHILIPPINES, THE BIGGEST COCONUT PRODUCER AND EXPORTER IN THE WORLD, EARNS AN AVERAGE OF SOME 700 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS A YEAR FROM THE EXPORT OF COCONUT PRODUCTS.

BUT IN RECENT YEARS, COCONUT INDUSTRY IN THE COUNTRY HAS SUFFERED A SLUMP BECAUSE OF LOW PRICES OF COCONUT PRODUCTS IN THE WORLD MARKET.

"THIS MUST END," PRESIDENT AQUINO SAID, "THE REAL TRANSFORMATION OF THE COUNTRY INTO A PROGRESSIVE ONE MUST START WITH THE COCONUT INDUSTRY."

SHE DIRECTED DEPARTMENTS CONCERNED TO IDENTIFY IMMEDIATELY FUND SOURCES FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A SOCIAL CREDIT FUND AND ANOTHER INDUSTRIAL LOAN FUND FOR SMALL COCONUT FARMERS.

THE PRESIDENT ENCOURAGED THE PHILIPPINE COCONUT AUTHORITY TO LOOK FOR MORE STABLE MARKETS FOR COCONUT OIL OTHER THAN THE UNITED STATES.

SINGAPORE (AUG. 24) XINHUA - INDONESIAN AGRICULTURE MINISTER WARDOYO SAID THAT THE INDONESIAN GOVERNMENT IS EXPLORING THE POSSIBILITY OF LIFTING RESTRICTIONS ON THE IMPORT OF FRUITS, ACCORDING TO A REPORT BY THE "JAKARTA POST" TODAY.

SPEAKING AT THE OPENING OF A PANEL DISCUSSION ON HORTICULTURE AT THE JAKARTA FAIR GROUNDS IN JAKARTA ON WEDNESDAY, WARDOYO SAID THAT THE LIFTING OF IMPORT RESTRICTIONS WAS AIMED MAINLY AT MEETING THE INCREASING DEMAND FOR FRUITS AND AT ABIDING BY THE REGULATIONS OF THE GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE (GATT).

THE REPORT NOTED THAT THE FRUIT IMPORT RESTRICTION, IMPOSED UNDER THE TRADE MINISTER'S DECREE, IS INTENDED TO PROTECT DOMESTIC PRODUCERS.

HE TOLD PARTICIPANTS THAT THE IMPORT RESTRICTIONS WOULD BE LIFTED BECAUSE THE RATE OF FRUIT CONSUMPTION HAD SUBSTANTIALLY INCREASED OVER THE LAST FEW YEARS.

STUDIES SHOW THAT INDONESIA'S FRUIT CONSUMPTION HAS INCREASED AT A RATE OF ABOUT 8 PERCENT PER ANNUM, WHEREAS THE GROWTH RATE OF FRUIT PRODUCTION WAS SAID TO BE RELATIVELY LOW DUE TO THE ABSENCE OF COORDINATION AMONG THE FRUIT PRODUCTION CENTERS AND TO THE CONVENTIONAL PRODUCTION OF THE COMMODITY.

A BREAKTHROUGH WAS BADLY NEEDED TO HELP IMPROVE THE COUNTRY'S FRUIT PRODUCTION IN TERMS OF BOTH QUALITY AND QUANTITY, THE STUDIES SAID.

LAGOS (AUG. 24) XINHUA - NIGERIAN MINISTER OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS RILWANU LUKMAN LEFT HERE TODAY FOR SAUDI ARABIA TO DELIVER A SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM NIGERIAN PRESIDENT IBRAHIM BABANGIDA FOR THE SAUDI MONARCH.

OFFICIAL SOURCES HERE SAID THAT DR. LUKMAN IS EXPECTED TO DISCUSS WITH SAUDI LEADERS ISSUES RELATED TO THE GULF CRISIS AND THE BILATERAL RELATIONS.

BUT OBSERVERS HERE BELIEVE THAT THE MINISTER WILL FOCUS HIS TALKS WITH SAUDI LEADERS ON THE HIKING OIL PRICES IN THE WORLD MARKET AS A RESULT OF THE IRAQI INVASION OF KUWAIT, BOTH OPEC MEMBER STATES.

SAUDI ARABIA AND NIGERIA, THE TWO LARGEST OIL PRODUCERS IN THE MIDDLE EAST AND THE BLACK AFRICA DIFFER OVER THE OPEC PRODUCTION QUOTA. WHILE NIGERIA INSISTS ON THE OIL PRODUCTION QUOTA REACHED DURING THE LAST OPEC MEETING IN GENEVA, SAUDI ARABIA CALLS FOR THE INCREASE OF THE PRODUCTION QUOTAS TO MEET THE SHORTAGE IN THE WORLD OIL MARKET AS A MAJOR STEP TO CHECK THE GLOBAL OIL PRICES SURGE AFTER THE GULF CRISIS.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG. 24) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT reports that the first revision of gross national product grew at an annual rate of 1.2% for the second quarter.

Mid-August auto sales by the nations major automakers fell 4.7% from the same period last year. ... GENERAL MOTORS told the UAW it is willing to boost benefits for laid-off workers, but didn't offer to enhance job security for current employees.

A judge upholds the U.S. takeover of LINCOLN SAVINGS & LOAN. ... PROCTER & GAMBLE dropped its plans to market Maalox antacid and other RHONE-POULENC RORER products, bowing to a U.S. antitrust lawsuit.

ZAPATA plans a restructuring that includes selling a 90% stake in its off-shore oil rigs and giving bank lenders 80% control of the concern.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

PRESIDENT BUSH meets in Kennebunkport with advisers to discuss the federal budget. ... IBM is expected to announce Sept. 5 its first new generation of mainframe computers since 1985 which should give a boost to that market. ... APPLE COMPUTER plans to unveil three new machines in mid-October, including a lower-priced Macintosh with a detachable color monitor.

FROM THE BULLS:

RON SCHROEDER, chief investment officer at J. & W. SELIGMAN, who manages about $800 million, says he is no longer a seller. The sell-off "has been overdone," he says.

"A resolution in the Mideast - either a military one or a negotiated one - would send the market upward. My feeling is [the U.S. and its allies] will get their ducks in a row militarily, and it's over quick and dirty. In the meantime, though, what has crept into the market in the last two days is outright fear." (WSJ, 8/24)

FROM THE BEARS:

"Last year, in July, we predicted a sluggish economy, and we thought then that the averages would be around 2200 at this time not thinking of the Iraq phobia which would enter the picture," says GEORGE ZIMMERMAN, director of research at GRUNTAL & COMPANY.

"I don't know where it will wind up. The market is hinging on every bit of news that comes out of the Mideast. That news cannot be good. We don't expect good news to come from that sector, so the weight on the market is certainly in a downdraft."

Though he cannot predict when the Mideast crisis will be over, he says, "But when its over, you are going to have what I believe will be one of the biggest booms in the stock market." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/23)

BARRY ZISKIN, who manages $50 million, with $18 million of it in the

Z-SEVEN mutual fund of Mesa, Ariz, says yesterday was damaging to the market in that the momentum of selling accelerated. He believes that the bear market has begun and may be a long affair that could last until the second half of 1991. ("Investor's Daily", 8/24)

"We're in a bear market," says SURESH BHIRUD, strategist at OPPENHEIMER & CO. "There's no need to describe it." ("USA Today", 8/24)

STOCK MARKET:

Trading in recent days has been "like trying to kiss a freight train," says RON DORAN, a trader at C.L. KING & ASSOCIATES. "Everybody is ducking and you can't blame them." ("USA Today", 8/24)

"There doesn't seem to be any bottom in sight," says ALAN ACKERMAN, senior vice-president with GRUNTAL & CO. "Stock values are being ignored, investor confidence is low and anxiety about the Mideast is growing day by day. My guess is the selling probably will continue in advance of the weekend." ("Investor's Daily", 8/24)

"There's been a crescendo of selling and right now I'd say it may be reaching a peak," says PHILIP DOW, retail equity marketing manager at PIPER, JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD in Minneapolis. He says he has seen panic selling among some small investors for about two weeks, but not every client is bailing out of stocks. (WSJ, 8/24)

"We were in a bear market before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait," says MARK BOYAR, of MARK BOYAR & CO. "Saddam accelerated it and probably shortened it. You need a strong stomach to buy. But if you think long term, say three to five years, there are buys all over the place. In fact, this could be one of the market's best buying opportunities ever." Boyar believes that the bear market could run through June. ("USA Today", 8/24)

ROBERT FREEDMAN, the chief portfolio manager for the JOHN HANCOCK mutual funds, describes the mood of the market as "ultimate pessimism, extreme nervousness." He says, "It seems like people are throwing out money just to get into cash." While a lot of stocks have fallen to attractive levels, he adds, "We're not doing anything. some extremely discounted stocks." (NYT, 8/24)

"What worries me is we haven't seen a panic,' says NED COLLINS, a trader at DAIWA SECURITIES. "If we have to get panic selling to find a bottom, we have a ways to go" before the market turns up. ("USA Today", 8/24)

"I've been told by a lot of our branch managers that they are getting more calls for quotes from people wondering at this point whether the market can go any lower," says THOMAS QUICK, president of QUICK & REILLY. "People are skittish, but afraid of selling out just before a rebound." (WSJ, 8/24)

STOCK TIPS:

Many major oil companies have reached price-earnings valuations well above their peaks during the last oil-price surge of 1979-1980 when oil reached $40 a barrel, says BERNARD PICCHI, oil analyst at SALOMON BROTHERS.

ATLANTIC RICHFIELD and TEXACO are Picchi's picks because he believes they are still cheap relative to other oil stocks and have less exposure to the chemicals business.

He also likes refiners DIAMOND SHAMROCK, ASHLAND OIL and VALERO ENERGY because they are likely to benefit from diminished refining capacity around the world in wake of the Middle East turmoil. (WSJ, 8/24)

"If crude prices do no more than stay where they are now, people should be buying oil stocks with both hands," says BRYAN JACOBOSKI, an oil analyst with PAINEWEBBER INC. He recommends the purchase of UNOCAL, MURPHY OIL, TEXACO and AMERADA HESS. "A lot of scenarios could lead to lower prices than where we are today, but prices will still be higher than where we were before the [Kuwait] invasion." (NYT, 8/24)

"If you can see doubles and maybe triples in fundamentally sound stocks that have been bludgeoned why not buy? Sure they could go down another 10% to 15% in this hysteria. But so what? When the reward outweighs the risks as much as now, I want to be there," says MARK BOYAR of MARK BOYAR & CO.

His picks among the battered stocks include AFFILIATED PUBLICATIONS, CHOCK FULL O'NUTS, DUN & BRADSTREET, FIELDCREST CANNON, MEREDITH CORP., NEIMAN-MARCUS, N.Y. TIMES, OUTBOARD MARINE, PLAYBOY (Class A), SALOMON INC., SEARS, WHITMAN CORP. and XEROX. ("USA Today", 8/24)

"Heard on the Street" reports that SCOTT PAPER is being buoyed in this market because it is seen as just about recession proof. GARY PALMERO, an OPPENHEIMER & CO. analyst, notes, "Tissue is more necessary than discretionary," and he expects the companies sales to increase due to overseas demand. EVADNA LYNN of DEAN WITTER REYNOLDS gives the company a strong "buy" recommendation believing the company will benefit from declining pulp prices. (WSJ, 8/24)

Footware importer MILLFELD TRADING INC. keeps working its way higher as the stock market falls, and is the "Stock of the Week" in "Investor's Daily". The article says that the company's name has become synonymous with relative strength, and they are doing well by filling a niche that the Big Three shoe-makers - NIKE INC., REEBOK INTERNATIONAL LTD and L.A. GEAR INC. - are ignoring: cheap shoes. ("Investor's Daily", 8/24)

#90236m0002 08/24/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys
FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG. 24) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"Corrective upticks [for the dollar] are very limited and people are viewing even the smallest corrections as selling opportunities," says PETE GRANT, a currency analyst with MONEY MARKET SERVICES in Chicago. "We would look for further declines in the dollar." ("Investor's Daily", 8/24)

"Basically, the dollar's fall hasn't ended," says MICHAEL KOCH, treasurer of the BANK OF AMERICA's Frankfurt branch. "We're going to see DM1.50 before its over. Before that you can't expect the Bundesbank to step in [with intervention]. It's not in their interest." (WSJ, 8/24)

ROBERT HATCHER, a corporate foreign exchange dealer with BARCLAYS BANK PLC in New York, says the dollar is likely to fall further unless central banks, including the Federal Reserve, decide the U.S. currency has fallen far enough. However, there are so signs the banks are concerned about the dollar's drop. ("Investor's Daily", 8/24)

"The bond market is worried about inflation and the stock market is worried about recession. And the Fed is trying to figure out which of these two is the bigger menace," says ROBERT DECLEMENTE, an economist at SALOMON BROTHERS INC.

Most economists think that the Fed has decided that patience is the best way to deal with the current unsettled state of the economy and the markets, and will hold interest rates steady.

"Until the Fed has a clear indication how the economy and the markets will react to a rate change, I can understand why they have to wait on easing," says one economist. (Reuters, 8/24)

"I think interest rates are going higher here and around the world, so this is a good time to keep money in short-term, liquid investments," says JEFFREY POXON, chief investment officer at LAFAYETTE LIFE INSURANCE CO. in Lafayette, Ind. "We've got our helmets and flak jackets on." (WSJ, 8/24)

"In these circumstances it is impossible to trade the fixed-income markets " says DANA JOHNSON, chief money market economist at the FIRST NATIONAL BANK in Chicago. "They are subject to the latest rumor or headline coming out of the Middle East or any movement in oil prices." (NYT, 8/24)

Betting on long-term bonds right now "is very dangerous," says JAMES

BENHAM, chairman of BENHAM CAPITAL MANAGEMENT GROUP. "It's just too big a gamble to buy long bonds right now and bet that this is the high we'll see in rates." (WSJ, 8/24)

"At this point, we do not have foreigners - especially the Japanese - stepping in to buy our securities," says international analyst ANDREW ROJECK of MERRILL LYNCH. ("USA Today", 8/24)

THE ECONOMY:

"Now the economy is active, but sluggish," says GEORGE ZIMMERMAN, director of research at GRUNTAL & COMPANY. "We have very little growth, but we do have an active economy. Specifically, what I am talking about: We only have unemployment levels near the 6% level.

"In 1980 and 82's recession we had it at 10% with interest rates on long-term governments at 14%. So, we have two paychecks now in every family. So economic activity is good but growth is sluggish." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/23)

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT announced that durable goods orders in July climbed 2.9% which was stronger than analysts' predictions. "The individual components in July are generally encouraging, but this report is generally quite volatile so you should discount the strength," says ALAN GAYLE, chief economist at CRESTAR FINANCIAL CORP. in Richmond, Va. (WSJ, 8/24)

"As oil prices rise, the corporate profitability will probably be impaired for those areas outside of the energy companies and so companies will likely to be looking to pair back rather than to increase" durable good orders, says NORMAN MAINS of BATEMAN EICHLER HILL RICHARDS. (FNN "Marketwrap", 8/23)

"These decisions were made to place [durable goods] orders well in advance of developments in the Middle East," says NICHOLAS PERNA, chief economist at SHAWMUT NATIONAL CORP. in Boston.

"That means the numbers are essentially borderline irrelevant." He continues, "The real question is what are orders going to look like if people become convinced that oil is at $30 a barrel and rising, and the threat of recession is becoming precipitous." (WSJ, 8/24)

Despite the 4.7% mid-August drop in auto sales, DAVID HEALY, an auto analyst with BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD in New York, says, "So far there seems to be no visible effect on car sales from gasoline problems or fears about the Middle East." (NYT, 8/24)

Nearly six out of ten Americans feel that the U.S. is in a recession

according to a New York Times/CBS News poll. Conducted August 16-19, the poll found that about 55% of the public say the economy is growing worse - the last time Americans felt so negative about their economy was in 1981 and 1982 - 40% of those polled say the economy is staying the same, and only about 4% feel it is getting better. (Reuters, 8/24)

IN WASHINGTON:

"Saddam has three choices" in dealing with the U.S. refusal to close the Kuwait embassy. "He can back off, which I think is unlikely, or he can do nothing, or most likely he will declare that diplomats no longer have diplomatic status and expel them or try to," says AMBASSADOR JAMES AIKEN, former ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

"Given the things that PRESIDENT BUSH has said, given the fact that he has quite explicitly ruled out any diplomatic solution to the problem, I suppose that he is looking for a reason to move [militarily], and I suppose that would be a reason." He says that we could move quickly because the troops are in place and the move could come as soon as Friday [today] if Saddam does anything. (FNN "Marketwrap", 8/23)

DALLAS (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Retirement Living Communities L.P. ("RLC") announced today that it extended to midnight, Eastern Time, on Wednesday, Sept. 12, its cash offer of $8 net per Beneficial Unit Certificate ("BUC") evidencing ownership in Retirement Living Tax-Exempt Mortgage Fund Limited Partnership (the "Partnership").

The tender offer and withdrawal rights, first announced on June 26, were due to expire at midnight, Eastern time Aug. 23.

Retirement Living Communities said that, as of 3 p.m. on Aug. 23, approximately 534,356 BUCs had been tendered, which is approximately 42 percent of the 1,264,000 BUCs outstanding.

RLC extended the tender offer to allow BUC Holders adequate time to review the latest financial information disclosed in the Partnership's second quarter report (Form 10-Q), filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on Aug. 14, 1990. The report reflects that income for the first six months of 1990 is $.02 per BUC.

The offer is part of RLC's previously announced plan to acquire at least a majority and no more than 60 percent of the outstanding BUCs, which would better equip RLC to proceed with a work-out plan on the defaulted loans owned by the Partnership.

The second quarter report indicates that four of the five mortgage loans have been in default since June 30, 1989 and unpaid base interest due to the Partnership through June 30, 1990 totals $2,679,276. It also stated that the Guarantors have not signed Certificates of Net Worth on the grounds that "because of the uncertainties and contingencies involved in the dealings of the Guarantors with the Creditors' Committee, it would be inappropriate at this time to deliver the certificate." The Guarantors further advised the Partnership that any attempt to collect on the guarantees or to foreclose on the Mortgage Loans at this time would necessitate their filing for protection under the bankruptcy laws.

ENGLEWOOD, COLO. (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Jones Intercable Investors L.P. (AMEX: JTV), a publicly-traded master limited partnership for which Jones Intercable Inc. (NASDAQ: JOIN) serves as general partner, today announced financial results for its second quarter of 1990, which ended June 30.

The partnership declared a 35 cent per Class A unit distribution for each of the first and second quarters of 1990. The distribution for the second quarter was paid on Aug. 15, 1990 to unitholders of record as of June 1, 1990. In addition, the partnership has declared a distribution of 35 cents per Class A unit for the third quarter 1990. The distribution will be paid on or about Nov. 15, 1990 to unitholders of record as of Sept. 1, 1990.

Revenues for the three months ended June 30 increased 13 percent from $7,894,280 in 1989 to $8,889,469 in 1990. For the six months ended June 30, revenues increased approximately 13 percent from $15,388,650 in 1989 to $17,431,376 for the like period in 1990. These increases are attributed to gains in subscribers and basic service rate increases implemented in the systems in February and March 1990. Equivalent basic subscribers in the two systems increased 9,872 or approximately 9 percent, from 112,304 at June 30, 1989 to 122,176 at June 30, 1990. This increase is due in part to the construction of 68 miles of cable plant, which passes approximately 4,600 homes in the two systems, since June 30, 1989.

Operating, general and administrative expenses increased approximately $175,048 or 4 percent, and $941,369 or 12 percent, for the three and six months ended June 30, 1990, due primarily to increases in programming costs.

Net loss of the Partnership decreased for both respective periods. The net loss was $1,961,409 in the second quarter of 1990, compared to a loss of $3,379,907 in the second quarter of 1989. The net loss per Class A and Class B unit for the quarter was 23 cents. The decrease in net loss was due primarily to the increase in revenues and the lower depreciation and amortization amounts. Also, the increase in revenue was greater than the increases in operating, general and administrative expenses.

Jones Intercable Investors L.P., was formed for the purpose of acquiring, owning and operating cable television systems in the United States. It owns and operates cable television systems serving approximately 122,176 equivalent basic subscribers in Independence, Mo., and Alexandria, Va. CHEYENNE, WYO. (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - With the help of an innovative refining process called STAR (Steam Active Reforming) developed by Phillips Petroleum Company (NYSE: P), Coastal Chem, Inc. is planning to enter the petroleum octane additive business.

Coastal Chem, a subsidiary of the Coastal Corporation (NYSE: CGP), has licensed the Phillips Petroleum STAR and methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE) processes to economically produce MTBE, an additive for high-octane, oxygenated gasoline designed to reduce air pollution. The STAR process will be used to convert isobutane into isobutylene which will be fed as a raw material into the MTBE plant to be built in Cheyenne.

The company plans to open the 4,000-barrel-per-day STAR/MTBE plant in the second quarter of 1992.

Coastal Chem is the first company to license the Phillips STAR process. Phillips 66 Company expects its own STAR unit, presently being engineered for its Borger, Texas, refinery, to come on-stream at about the same time as the Coastal Chem unit.

The flexible STAR process can dehydrogenate light hydrocarbons (C5 and lower) to make, for example, feedstocks for MTBE or polypropylene manufacturing, and can dehydrocyclize heavier hydrocarbons (C6 and higher) to high-octane motor fuel blend stocks.

The Phillips Petroleum STAR process dilutes light paraffins with steam and utilizes a proprietary, but commercially available, solid particulate catalyst from a patented Phillips Petroleum formulation. The total reaction occurs in the vapor-phase over the catalyst in a fixed-bed, fired-tube reactor similar to a steam/methane reforming reactor in configuration, according to Robert Dunn, Phillips Petroleum senior licensing specialist.

"This process works at relatively moderate temperatures (950-1,150 F), low pressures (under 3 atmospheres), and high selectivities to ultimately convert up to 95 percent of the feed isobutane to isobutylene. This technology also requires lower capital and overall conversion costs, compared with competing dehydrogenation/ dehydrocyclization technologies," Dunn said.

The unique STAR reactor design is compatible with both the isothermal process cycle and the requirements of cyclic regeneration, so that reactor operation is essentially continuous.

Coastal Chem now produces nitrogen-based fertilizers and livestock- feed supplements, carbon dioxide and low-density ammonium nitrate for industrial uses.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - FFP Partners, L.P. (AMEX: FFP), announced that its board decided, at its meeting on Aug. 23, not to declare a regular quarterly distribution. The decision not to pay a distribution was predicated on the weakness in the company's earnings for the second quarter 1990. The company released information regarding its earnings on Aug. 20, 1990.

In making the announcement, John Harvison, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, said, "Our earnings for the first six months of 1990 were $100,000, about 1/3 of the amount reported for the corresponding period in 1989 and significantly below our expectations for this period of time. Although the company posted impressive gains in revenues, our earnings were negatively influenced by a contraction in retail fuel margins and significant increases in operating expenses."

He noted the increased expenses were primarily in the areas of salaries for store level employees, store supplies, and legal fees. Harvison added the company is addressing its expense problems by improving controls over store staffing to assure its outlets have adequate personnel to serve customers during peak periods while avoiding unnecessary staffing during periods of lesser activity, and critically reviewing all expense areas for potential savings.

Harvison also commented that the present uncertainties in the world crude oil markets due to the crisis in the Persian Gulf were placing pressures on the company's fuel operations from both margin and supply perspectives. He stated this situation also contributed to the board's conclusion that it would not be prudent to declare a distribution at the present time. The company indicated its board would consider the distribution policy on a quarterly basis and expected to declare distributions at an appropriate level as the company's earnings and cash flow warranted.

In addition to construction, P&O has interests in shipping, property, storage, and distribution and a wide range of service industries. In the U.S., P&O is best known through its company Princess Cruises which owns the Pacific Princess, better known as "The Love Boat."

McDevitt & Street, which has 1,600 employees and had $880 million in revenues in 1989, is rated as North Carolina's largest privately held company, according to "Business North Carolina." It is also ranked as the nation's seventh largest commercial, institutional and industrial building company. In addition, it is ranked as the second largest retail builder and fourth largest hospital construction company by industry trade surveys.

No details of the financial terms were released, but the transaction is expected to be closed in September.

In announcing the agreement in principle, representatives of both McDevitt & Street and Bovis cited the similarities between the cultures of both companies and the reputation of each group for financial strength, for being client-oriented and for taking a long-term view of the construction market.

Sir Frank Lampl, Chairman of the Bovis Construction Group, said the agreement was a positive strategic move.

"This is an important and very significant move, both for Bovis and for our parent, P&O. It represents a major expansion of our activities in North America and further strengthens the scope and quality of our U.S. operations," Sir Frank said.

"Bovis already has an international reputation for its abilities in construction and engineering. That reputation is going to be further enhanced by the skills and resources of McDevitt & Street.

"In particular, these resources rest with the company's management. From the outset we have been keen to ensure that the managers who have done so much to establish McDevitt & Street's strong standing in the industry remain with the Company when it becomes a part of Bovis. I am pleased to say that they share our enthusiasm and are eager to join in the Company's future growth."

Luther Cochrane, Chairman and CEO of McDevitt & Street, agreed with Sir Frank's assessment.

"We are tremendously excited about the prospect of becoming part of Bovis and the P&O Group. They have approached construction on a worldwide basis much as we have in our areas of operation, relying on people strength, financial strength and a reputation for quality, on-time and cost effective performance to attract and retain a select group of clients. They take an extremely long-term and global view of the construction market and thier financial strength and worldwide contacts, coupled with their management resources, will give us new opportunities to continue to grow by offering more and better services to our clients."

He said one of the most attractive aspects of becoming part of the Bovis Group was that the firm wanted existing management to remain intact and to continue to lead McDevitt & Street. Continuity and stability, togther with financial strength, will make it easier for McDevitt & Street to compete for new work and continue to satisfy the needs of existing clients.

"We could not have found a better organization to join to assure us the opportunity to continue to grow, to continue to attract and retain the very best people in the construction industry and to continue to meet the needs of our clients," Cochrane concluded.

Bovis already has a presence in the United States by virtue of its ownership of Lehrer McGovern Bovis, headquartered in New York and currently ranked fourth on the "ENR" listing of the largest construction managers in the United States. McDevitt & Street and Lehrer McGovern Bovis will continue to operate independently because of their different geographic focus but will work closely together to best serve their clients on a national basis.

Luther Cochrane will join the Board of Directors for Bovis, Inc., upon conclusion of the transaction. Sir Frank Lampl is Chairman of Bovis, Inc. and Peter M. Lehrer is President.

TORONTO (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Dr. Klaus M. Zeitler, president and chief executive officer of Metall Mining Corporation announced today that the corporation's net income for the six months ended June 30, 1990 was $5,053,000 or $0.13 per share as compared to restated earnings of $21,334,000 or $0.57 per share in 1989. Earnings for the second quarter were $2,887,000, or $0.07 per share, compared to restated earnings of $12,463,000, or $0.33 per share, in the comparable period last year. Earnings declined from 1989 levels due to lower copper prices realized at Copper Range and reduced earnings from Cominco Ltd.

Sales were $80,191,000 for the six months and $35,597,000 for the three months ended June 30, 1990. Sales were $41,351,000 for both the six and three months ended June 30, 1989 as the acquisition of Copper Range Company was completed in the second quarter of 1989.

Copper Range produced 46.2 million pounds of equivalent copper cathode in the first half of 1990 which was seven percent higher than the previous six months. Operating costs, however, remained high due to the increased underground development expenditures and high repairs and maintenance costs. The underground mine equipment modernization program has resulted in increases in mine production and significant productivity gains in the mining units which have been upgraded. The impact of these productivity gains will be reflected in the third and fourth quarters. Copper Range contributed operating earnings of $4,773,000 and $2,619,000, respectively, for the six and three months ended June 30, 1990.

The Ok Tedi project in Papua, New Guinea, in which Metall has a 7.5 percent interest, had a profit of $38,027,000 in the first half of 1990, compared to $18,472,000 in the comparable period in 1989. Metall's share was $1,719,000 in the first six months of 1990 compared to a loss of $156,000 in 1989. This improved performance was in large part due to the consistent achievement of targeted milling rates of 75,000 tons per day in the first half of 1990. Total Ok Tedi production for the six months was 225,658 ounces of gold and 175.9 million pounds of copper.

On July 31, 1990, Metallgesellschaft Canada Investments Limited, a wholly owned subsidiary, redeemed its Class B preferred shares at a cost of $50 million. The redemption was paid from cash on hand which reduced cash to $112 million.

EDWARDS AFB, CA (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - A NASA F-15 powered by a prototype Pratt & Whitney F100-PW-220E+ engine has successfully completed a series of flight tests. The PW-220E+ uses new components and electronic control technology developed for Pratt & Whitney's newest production engine, the F100-PW-229, to improve the safety, operability and performance required of today's fighters.

This upgrade infuses the latest technology into the highly reliable F100 engine that powers all F-15s and three quarters of the world's F-16s. The F100 has set new standards for reliability, safety and durability in U.S. Air Force fighters and the 220E+ upgrade offers even further improvements.

"This is an important program," said Larry Ponder, director, F100 operations. "The PW-220E+ produces 27,000 pounds of thrust and will fit all F-15 or F-16 models, allowing the Air Force to improve the safety and reliability of older aircraft to a level comparable to that of the newest models. The PW-220E+ offers increased performance almost equivalent to the PW-229, which develops 29,000 pounds of thrust, at a fraction of the cost of a new engine. The PW-220E+ is doing extremely well in ground and flight testing and could be ready for production by the end of 1993, if an Air Force requirement developed."

CANOGA PARK, CALIF. (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Bob's Big Boy announced today that it has become the first major family restaurant chain in the Los Angeles area to provide car hop service for drive-in customers.

Bob's Big Boy said it has returned car hop service to its restaurant located at 21222 Sherman Way in Canoga Park, Calif. The restaurant, which is owned by the Marriott Corp. (NYSE: MHS), hired seven car hopping waiters and waitresses who take orders from customers as they sit in their cars, and then serve their food and drinks on trays that hang from the top edge of car windows.

Restaurant officials said their modern day car hops have been trained by some of the original waitresses who worked at the same restaurant as car hops when it first opened more than 25 years ago. The staff will work rotated shifts between car hop service and inside service.

To accommodate the new drive-in trade, the restaurant's parking lot was repainted and re-striped to include new lot lines and identification numbers.

The growth of drive-in restaurants over the years, which were first introduced in the 1920s, paralleled the rise in the use of automobiles. In the 1960s, many drive-in restaurants were replaced by drive-through facilities as more and more motorists preferred to order their food "to go."

Greg Hernandez, Marriott Corp.'s director of field marketing, said, "Bob's Big Boy has always been an important part of growing up in this area, and the return of car hop service will give our customers a chance to experience for themselves what was always a fun and memorable way to dine."

Hernandez said the return of car hop service has become a popular feature of the restaurant, drawing large crowds at night and members of local car clubs on weekends.

He said people have reacted enthusiastically, and quoted one customer as saying, "I used to come here more than 20 years ago, and bringing back car hop service is like taking a pleasant trip back in time."

VOORHEES, NJ (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Plasma-Therm Inc. (NASDAQ: PTIS) announced today that new order bookings continue at a slow pace.

The company attributes this trend to a slowdown in the economy and the resultant delays by semiconductor device manufacturers to purchase capital equipment for increased production.

Due to these current conditions and absent signs of an immediate industry rebound, management said it anticipates that sales and earnings for the second half of fiscal 1990, particularly for the fourth quarter, will be substantially less than the first half results. As a result of the second half decline, sales and net income for fiscal 1990 will not reach the company's projected levels.

In the meantime, management said it is closely monitoring expenses and has trimmed personnel to more closely match current production requirements. Concurrently, the company is vigorously working toward qualifying its products with new customers as historically industry slowdowns provide a window of opportunity to generate new business.

Plasma-Therm, headquartered in Voorhees, is a producer of plasma process equipment and radio frequency "RF" component products used primarily by manufacturers of semiconductor devices.

The event, which will last from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., will feature a pizza-making contest between local dignitaries, Chamber of Commerce officials, and Queen Anne's young future leaders.

They will compete in a race to see who is the fastest at putting toppings on a pizza. Once the pizzas are cooked, Pizza Hut will deliver the pizzas to worthy organizations in the Queen Anne area, as selected by the participants.

Also invited to the grand opening are officials from the Queen Anne Chamber of Commerce. Instead of cutting a ribbon to symbolize the store's opening, the officials will help Pizza Hut to slice a large pizza at the store's entrance.

A free slice of pizza and Pepsi will be available to each person attending the opening. A six-foot-tall "Doo-wop-a-saurus," a juggler, balloon animals and a clown will be on-hand to provide entertainment for children.

The new store will be the 68th Pizza Hut store in Western Washington. About 30 people will be employed at the Queen Anne store, according to store manager Aaron Greene. "Queen Anne has a lot of two-parent working families, as well as single professionals, so it's an area that would greatly benefit from a home-delivery store," Green said. "We're looking forward to doing business in this area."

The Pizza Hut parking lot will be roped off to provide an area for the festivities. Those wishing to visit the grand opening are encouraged to use public transit or plan on parking in the neighborhood.

In September, Pizza Hut will also open two locations in the Soviet Union -- a first for Western pizza operators. The two Pizza Hut stores, which cost an estimated $6 million, will serve an expected 50,000 customers a week -- seven times the number of customers of any Pizza Hut in the United States.

MINNEAPOLIS (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Cargill's Nutrena Feed Division today announced plans to build a $4 million feed mill on a seven-acre site near Big Lake, about 50 miles northwest of the Twin Cities.

Dave Larson, Nutrena's president, said the new mill will have the capacity to mix more than 60,000 tons of animal feed annually and will produce bagged and bulk feeds. It will include a 7,500-square-foot warehouse and a 2,500-square-foot office. Construction will begin in October with completion scheduled for late 1991. The new facility will employ eight people.

He added that the new mill will have access to excellent highway and rail transportation.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) today placed Ambassador Savings and Loan Association, Tamarac, Fla., in receivership and chartered a new federal mutual institution to take its place.

The new institution, Ambassador Federal Savings and Loan Association, will assume certain assets and liabilities of the old thrift and will operate in conservatorship under the management of the Resolution Trust Corporation.

The receivership did not affect Ambassador's day-to-day operations. The institution and its branches will remain open for business as usual. Holders of insured accounts are not affected by the action, which was taken by OTS to protect insured depositors and the interests of the thrift insurance fund. Deposits remain insured to the $100,000 legal limit.

OTS initiated the action because Ambassador was operating in an unsafe and unsound condition in that it had insufficient capital, with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance.

Ambassador's condition is due primarily to excessive operating expenses, a high cost of funds, and a high volume of poorly underwritten commercial real estate loans made through the institution's building and development subsidiaries.

As of March 31, 1990, 28.5 percent of Ambassador's assets were composed of high-risk non-residential and acquisition, development and construction (ADC) loans. As of the same date, assets of $34 million, or 15.8 percent of total assets, were troubled, including $17.4 million in delinquent loans and real estate owned.

The subsidiaries, Ambassador Homes Inc. and Ambassador Capital Corporation lost a total of $11 million in 1989 and $5 million for the first six months of 1990. Net losses of the institution were $1.7 million in calendar year 1988, $13.9 million in calendar year 1989 and $3.9 million for the first six months of 1990.

Since February 1989, Ambassador had been operating under regulatory restrictions limiting its liability growth. In February 1990, regulators imposed further restrictions limiting Ambassador's lending activity to one-to-four family mortgage loans not exceeding $250,000 and consumer and home improvement loans not exceeding $25,000.

Ambassador Savings and Loan Association was a state-chartered stock association wholly owned by Ambassador Financial Group Inc., a holding company. Its common stock was traded over the counter. Shareholders will retain no interest in the new institution.

MARYLAND HEIGHTS, MO. (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Edward D. Jones & Co. will broadcast, via satellite, a continuing education seminar for more than 9,000 CPAs across the country Sept. 20. The seminar will originate from the brokerage's St. Louis headquarters and from Washington, D.C. and be broadcast live to each of the firm's more than 1,500 branch offices across the country. BALTIMORE (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Baltimore Gas and Electric Co. reported common stock earnings of $87,783,000 for the seven months ended July 31, 1990, equivalent to $1.07 per common share.

The total volume of gas sold during the current seven-month period decreased 7.4 percent from the same period last year. The decrease in sales was primarily related to milder winter weather and decreased usage by our commercial and industrial customers.

Earnings from diversified business activities primarily represent the results of operations of Constellation Holdings Inc. and its subsidiaries. Lower earnings from diversified business activities for both periods are attributable to lower income from financial investments combined with the timing of income earned from the alternative energy systems and real estate projects.

CHICAGO (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - United Airlines today announced that it will implement a fuel surcharge of 5.3 percent on all domestic freight shipments effective Oct. 1.

"The modest charge is necessary to offset escalating fuel costs that recently have risen sharply over previous levels," said Carl Norris, director of cargo. "Fuel costs are being closely monitored, and should prices decline, the fuel surcharge will be removed," said Norris.

Norris noted that the Oct. 1 effective date of the fuel surcharge was announced at this time in order to provide customers advance notice and the opportunity to plan accordingly.

A similar fuel surcharge is under review for international freight shipments, with an announcement to be made at a later date.

For the month of June, United's cargo ton miles increased by 8.6 percent over June 1989 levels.

On Aug. 1, United began offering air freight and passenger service to Paris with daily non-stop flights between Chicago's O'Hare International Airport and Charles de Gaulle International Airport.

Chief Administrative Law Judge John Mathias has recommended United Airlines should receive authority to operate daily non-stop flights between Chicago and Tokyo's Narita International Airport. Pending Department of Transportation (DOT) and presidential review, which is expected to be completed by Nov. 1, United plans to inaugurate Chicago Tokyo non-stop service late this year.

YPSILANTI, MI (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Flagship Express, Inc. (NASDAQ: FLAXC) has announced results for the six months ended June 30, 1990.

The company reported revenue from continuing operations of $25.7 million and a net loss per share of $(0.05). Flagship's continuing operations consist of the results of Rosenbalm Aviation, Inc., its 90-percent-owned subsidiary and only operating entity.

Rosenbalm was acquired by Flagship in December 1989, and therefore, Flagship's 1990 results are not comparable to 1989. Revenue from continuing operations for the six-month period was $25.7 million and operating profit before interest expense from continuing operations was $2.7 million. Rosenbalm's revenue and operating profit before interest expense for the six-month period ended June 30, 1989, were $26.8 million and $6.1 million, respectively.

The period to period decline in revenue was principally due to lower levels of international aircraft operation and a reduced volume of maintenance activity. The period to period decline in operating profit before interest expense was due to a combination of lower revenues and increased operating and general and administrative expenses.

As previously announced, a substantially new management team led by Judith Rogala joined Flagship on Aug. 1, 1990.

"We have assembled an outstanding team of experienced professionals in the aviation industry," Rogala said.

"For the first time in company history, we now have a sales force actively pursuing additional aircraft operation and maintenance opportunities. We expect this effort to reverse our decline in revenues and boost our quality service. Earnier this month, the company began operating an additional aircraft for one of our major customers and expects to continue to add aircraft in the future.

"Our new management team also is investigating new sources of revenue and profit available through diversification and we are implementing improved quality control measures that we expect to bring our expenses to appropriate levels."

Flagship Express, through its subsidiary, Rosenbalm Aviation, is a worldwide aviation services company with the capabilities to operate and maintain cargo and passenger aircraft.

HOUSTON (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - LL&E Royalty Trust (NYSE: LRT) today announced that its monthly distribution to unit holders will be made on Sept. 15, 1990, to unit holders of record on Sept. 5, 1990. This distribution represents amounts payable to the trust with respect to production for the month of June 1990.

The total amount of the September distribution will be $382,114 or approximately $.02012 per unit. This distribution was adversely affected by reduced production at the Jay Field and South Pass 89 properties due primarily to repair and maintenance activities. Lower prices recorded in June also contributed to the decline from the prior month. In addition, this distribution includes no proceeds from offshore Louisiana due primarily to increased capital expenditures at one offshore property. Due to the nature and timing of operating and capital projects, along with monthly production fluctuations, this distribution is not necessarily indicative of future monthly distributions.

As previously announced, the working interest owner has begun to escrow amounts for the Fort Worth Basin property in connection with the issue of recapture of intangible drilling and development costs under Section 1254 of the Internal Revenue Code. The trust's interest in the amount escrowed from the current month's distribution and the cumulative balance of such are $8,095.94 and $517,891.23 respectively. As stated last month, pending the possible appeal by the IRS of the previously announced favorable ruling rendered by the United States Tax Court on the Section 1254 issue, the working interest owner has made no decision on whether and when these amounts will be released from escrow.

The working interest owner has determined under the terms of the trust documents that it is eligible to escrow funds from all trust properties for the 1254 recapture issue. However, it has advised the trustee that it does not intend to exercise its rights to escrow funds, other than for the Fort Worth Basin, for this issue for the September 1990 distribution. However, the working interest owner intends to continue to monitor its estimates of relevant factors in order to evaluate the necessity of escrowing funds for this issue on an ongoing basis. The working interest owner is under no obligation to give any advance notice to the trustee or the unit holders in the event it determines that funds should be escrowed. If the working interest owner does begin to escrow such funds with respect to the productive properties, other than Fort Worth Basin, the effect on royalties paid to the trust would be significant, and in certain circumstances could eliminate distributions for a period of time.

LINDENHURST, N.Y. (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Richard E. Smith, chairman and CEO of Steve's Homemade Ice Cream, Inc. (NASDAQ: STVEA), today announced the company's financial results for the second quarter of 1990.

Steve's reported revenues for the 13 weeks ended June 30, 1990 of $6,814,000 as compared to $8,919,000 for the 13 weeks ended July 1, 1989. The decline in revenues is attributable to the inventory control program of a major user, a temporary disruption in the company's distribution network and soon-to-be resolved dispute with a major area developer and licensee.

Net loss for the 13 weeks ended June 30, 1990, was $86,000 as compared to net income of $531,000 for the 13 weeks ended July 1, 1989. The net loss for the second quarter is primarily attributable to the reduction in revenues, as described above, and to the company's continued above-normal advertising expenditures. During the second quarter of 1990, the company expended approximately $611,000 more for advertising (in connection with the introduction of Steve's Gourmet Light) than in the comparable period in 1989.

Revenues for the 26 weeks ended June 30, 1990, decreased to $13,952,000 from $16,420,000 for the comparable period in 1989. The decline in revenues was primarily due to a decline in sales attributable to the inventory control program of a major user and the soon-to-be resolved dispute with a major area developer and licensee, and a temporary disruption of the California and Florida distribution networks.

The company experienced a net loss of $7,000 (including an extraordinary gain of $176,000) for the 26 weeks ended June 30, 1990, as compared to net income of $909,000 for the 26 weeks ended July 1, 1989. This reduction was primarily attributable to the decline in revenues as stated above, and an increase of $1,247,000 in advertising and promotion expenses for the 26 weeks ended June 30, 1990, as compared to the expenditures during the 26 weeks ended July 1, 1989. The increase in these expenses related to the continued introduction of Steve's gourmet Light into new markets. Management said it believes that these promotional expenditures in connection with the introduction of Steve's Gourmet Light are necessary to the future long-term growth and profitability of the company.

Steve's Homemade Ice Cream, Inc. markets Steve's Super Premium and Swensen's ice cream in 36 states and the District of Columbia and franchises and licenses more than 450 ice cream shops and family restaurants in the United States and 16 foreign countries.

HOUSTON (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Experiencing improved business in its meat processing and turkey divisions, Granada Foods Corp. (AMEX: GNF) today reported gains in both sales and earnings for the six months ended June 30, 1990.

According to David G. Eller, chairman and chief executive officer, the stronger earnings performance thus far in 1990 reflects effective cost-containment efforts as well as higher sales.

"The gains are particularly gratifying, given the first six months of the year are traditionally the slowest part of our selling year," he said.

For the second quarter, however, income declined as higher interest costs related to cattle feedlot operations offset an 18 percent advance in revenues.

For the six-month period, net income was $130,000, or 4 cents per share, compared with a net loss of $26,000, or 1 cent per share, in the 1989 period. Revenues were $69,486,000, a 14 percent increase from $61,014,000 in the year-earlier period.

Eller said that revenues for the period increased primarily due to a gain in its TMP subsidiary meat product sales in the Houston and San Antonio markets. In addition, feedlot occupancy increased to 95 percent, compared with 84 percent in the 1989 period. He said turkey sales were about equal to last year and there was a decline in export sales due to increased competition and oversupply in a key market.

For the second three-month period, net income was $71,000, or 2 cents per share, compared with $90,000, or four cents per share, for the second quarter of 1989. Revenues were $36,805,000, up from $31,286,000 in the prior year.

Eller noted the 1990 per share amount was based on 3,477,000 average outstanding common shares, while the 1989 per share amount was computed on the basis of 2,200,000 average outstanding common shares.

On June 30, 1990, Granada Foods had working capital of $22.5 million, and a ratio of current assets to current liabilities of 2.15 to 1. Shareholders' equity was $24.5 million, a 43 percent improvement from shareholders' equity of $17.1 million at Dec. 31, 1989.

Granada Foods Corp. is the largest meat purveyor in Texas and the largest smoker of whole body turkeys in the nation. The company is a producer, marketer and distributor of value-added food, specializing in certain red meat and poultry products. The company's Texas-based processing and distribution facilities service various metropolitan areas in the continental United States and certain international markets.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - Interchem (N.A.) Industries Inc. (NASDAQ, Vancouver: IID) is pleased to announce that it has completed its first plant to make synthetic fuel oil from waste wood. Final testing will be completed at its Southern Missouri location in September and deliveries of fuel oil and charcoal will commence in October.

Approximately 13,000 tons of waste wood will be processed annually to create 1.7 million gallons of synthetic oil which will be used as a replacement for conventional fuel oil. Markets for the fuel oil and charcoal have been assured and final contracts are being completed.

This plant is the first of many commercial plants to be built by Interchem and its joint venture partner, Midwest Pacific Inc. and will demonstrate their unique environmentally safe waste to chemical process. This process (which vaporizes waste wood and converts it into fuel oil and other useful compounds) is a timely solution to the environmental problems of waste wood disposal and provides a viable alternative to reduce current oil shortages.

Total revenues from this small plant are expected to approach $1,000,000 (U.S.) annually.

Interchem (N.A.) Industries Inc. is a publicly-traded emerging growth company specializing in the environmentally clean production of commodity chemicals and electrical power from waste materials.

EAST LANSING, MI (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - The Crittenton Hospital RN Bargaining Committee asked authorities from the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Services to call an Aug. 29 bargaining meeting with hospital administrators Friday.

"The RN bargaining committee requested this meeting to demonstrate their willingness to resolve the issues and return to work," said Michigan Nurses Association Representative Larry Cross, explaining that the nurses are prepared to settle contract differences with the employer.

"If the hospital does not also demonstrate a willingness to compromise, it may be a very short meeting," added Cross, explaining that the administration's refusal to listen to the nurses' concerns during earlier negotiations prompted the RNs' decision to strike.

The nurses are united in their efforts with over 97 percent withholding professional services since the strike began. Patient census at Crittenton has continued to decline and is now below 25 percent.

Cross will meet with an agent of the National Labor Relations Board Tuesday, Aug. 28, to give testimony and provide evidence supporting the Unfair Labor Practice Charge which was filed against the hospital Aug. 15. The charge asserts that Crittenton Hospital management has negotiated in bad faith and has discriminated against union members, which is a violation of federal law.

Cross also indicated that nursing agencies which have been supplying nurses on a temporary basis to the hospital are being contacted and requested to pull their nurses from the facility.

The Michigan Nurses Association, a constituent of the American Nurses Association, is the professional organization of registered nurses in Michigan. It provides professional and educational opportunities for registered nurses and offers services in a variety of areas of concern to nurses in health care.

ST. LOUIS (AUG. 24) PR NEWSWIRE - When is small, big? When you're talking about small business customers at Southwestern Bell Telephone (SWBT).

They comprise about 93 percent of the company's business customers. And at 660,000 strong, they contribute about one-half of SWBT's $2.2 billion annual business revenues.

So why not think "small" when looking for "big ideas" to boost business revenues?

That's exactly what SWBT did this spring when it formed a 16-member "Small Business Advisory Panel." SWBT defines a small business as having one to six business lines at a single location.

Panel members from around SWBT's five states met quarterly to give their ideas on ways SWBT can better market to small businesses. The panelists also learn more about SWBT and the products and services it sells.

"We already knew our small business customers were vital to our success," said Becky Thompson, SWBT's coordinator for the panel and planning manager for SWBT's general business marketing. "But it's only in the last year or so that we've been looking at ways to better reach these customers. This panel should help us do just that."

Thompson said SWBT will use the suggestions from panel members to support recommendations regarding SWBT's marketing, as well as to develop new products and services.

"We want to gain a better understanding of the small business market, by learning about these customers' motivations, concerns and current and future telecommunications needs," she said.

Southwestern Bell Telephone is a wholly owned subsidiary of Southwestern Bell Corp. and provides network exchange service to nearly 9 million customers in Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and Missouri.

MOSCOW (AUG. 24) UPI - Armenia's Parliament passed a declaration of independence the same day Soviet Interior Ministry troops were deployed in the republic in response to fighting that left 50 extremists dead and more than 100 wounded, reports said.

In passing the declaration Thursday, the lawmakers claimed the right to form its own army, interior troops and security forces.

Lt. Gen. Mikhail Kolesnikov, a commander of troops on the Soviet Union's embattled southern rim, provided the first details of a massive battle Tuesday between soldiers and hundreds of heavily armed Armenian fighters in an Azerbaijani village near the two republics' border.

''According to our information, 50 extremists were killed and more than 100 wounded in an engagement they initiated near the village of Baganis-Airum,'' Kolesnikov said.

Soviet television said 800 Armenian fighters fought two detachments of soldiers for nearly 10 hours. It reported the same casualty figures and showed dramatic footage in which the village appeared to have been destroyed.

The casualty toll was much higher than previously reported in the latest round of violence in the Caucasus, where mainly Moslem Azerbaijanis and predominantly Christian Armenians have waged a virtual civil war for 2 1/2 years over control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region.

There were no reported casualty figures for troops or residents of Baganis-Airum. The official Tass news agency said in an earlier report that there were dead among soldiers and the local population, but it did not provide casualty figures.

Tass said more than 100 homes were destroyed in the fighting, but their inhabitants had managed to escape.

Kolesnikov said Interior Ministry troops were deployed in Armenia Thursday within a 3-mile zone on the other side of the besieged border.

''The task put forward by the command, after the measure was authorized by the republican leadership, is to clear the area of militants and carry out active operations against them,'' he said.

Armenia has several large illegal armies and was the main target of President Mikhail Gorbachev's July 25 decree ordering the breakup of vigilante units in the Soviet Union.

In its independence proclamation, the Armenian Parliament claimed the ''inalienable right'' to the Nagorno-Karabakh territory at the root of the bitter ethnic warfare in the Caucasus.

The proclamation placed Armenia on a collision course with the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan during a period of renewed violence along the two republics' border.

The conflict over Nagorno-Karabakh, an enclave of Azerbaijan inhabited mainly by Armenians, first erupted in February 1988 and has escalated into an undeclared war.

Armenia stopped short of outright secession from the Soviet Union in the independence declaration, but it claimed the right to establish its own relations with other countries and seek membership in the United Nations and other international organizations.

The proclamation drops the name of ''Armenian Soviet Socialist Republic'' and extends automatic citizenship to all Armenians living in the Soviet Union and throughout the world in the newly designated Republic of Armenia Tass said.

Levon Ter-Petrosian, Armenia's effective president as chairman of the Yerevan legislature, told deputies minutes after they approved the independence declaration that it was a ''historic moment for the Armenian people,'' the independent Interfax news service said.

Deputies put off a vote on the proclamation Wednesday because of fierce debate over a clause demanding international condemnation of the 1915 genocide of Armenians by their former Turkish rulers. The clause was included in the final act, Tass said.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Western nations face a showdown with Iraq over a Friday deadline for closing their embassies in occupied Kuwait. The United States the 12-member European Community, Japan, Yugoslavia, Austria... among others... have said they will defy the order despite reports that Iraqi troops were prepared to surround their diplomatic compounds. In Washington a State Department source said Thursday night that embassies in Kuwait City were given a midnight Friday deadline for evacuating.

A corporate plane ferrying oil rig workers from the North Sea to their homes crashed, split in half and caught fire during takeoff from Houston Intercontinental Airport Thursday night. Three people were killed and the remaining dozen others aboard the plane were injured. Cause of the accident is under investigation.

Armenia's Parliament passed a declaration of independence Thursday. The proclamation stops just short of outright secession from the Soviet Union. But it puts the republic on a collision course with neighboring Azerbaijan during a period of renewed violence along their border. That violence prompted the deployment Thursday of Soviet Interior Ministry troops in the region.

At least hundreds, and possibly thousands of people crossed the Polish-Lithuanian border Thursday to protest Soviet control of the area. The event was one of many planned in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia to mark the 51st anniversary of a Soviet-German pact that led to Moscow's annexation of the Baltic republics. People crossed the border without apparent incident... despite earlier Soviet warnings that the action was a ''provocation.''

(AUG. 24) UPI - Directors of the Los Angeles Festival have overridden a vote by fellow board members and rejected a 30-thousand-dollar grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. The move came in protest of the agency's anti-obscenity stance. With only two weeks before opening day, the financially strapped festival... the largest of its kind in the nation... is still short of its five-Million-dollar fund-raising goal. But organizers say 12-thousand dollars of the rejected 30-thousand-dollar N-E-A grant have already been made up by private contributions.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 24) UPI - Roseanne Barr's ex-husband has filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against the television star, seeking half of the assets the couple accumulated during their relationship as well as alimony.

The suit also seek damages from Barr's current husband, Tom Arnold.

The Superior Court suit, filed Thursday on behalf of William Pentland by famed palimony attorney Marvin Mitchelson, charges breach of contract, as well as emotional distress.

Pentland and Barr, the suit said, lived together beginning in January 1972 were married Feb. 4, 1974, and separated in May 1989.

During the relationship, Pentland said he managed Barr's career, wrote comedy material for her, sacrificed his own career and acted as homemaker and cook for the entertainer.

Pentland said that in January 1986 he gave up his job, sold the couple's home in Colorado and moved to Los Angeles to further Barr's career.

The following year, the suit said, Pentland helped develop, write and nurture a television series, which eventually became the top-rated ''Roseanne'' show on ABC. Pentland also wrote and developed a revue for Barr called ''Rosie with a Z,'' which she performed at a small theater.

The suit seeks 50 percent of undetermined assets the couple accumulated during their marriage, at least $15 million in general damages, as well as at least $10 million in punitive and exemplary damages against Barr and at least $3 million against Arnold.

Pentland contends in the suit that starting in January 1989, Arnold drove a wedge between Barr and Pentland by telling her that Pentland was ''unreliable, nonsupportive and a detriment'' to Barr's career.

Pentland said Arnold's actions led to Barr's ending her business and personal relationship with Pentland in May 1989.

Barr married Arnold shortly after her divorce from Pentland last year.

In addition to the damages, the suit seeks one-half of the assets - which are to be determined - and ''a reasonable sum per month'' in alimony, plus court costs.

The United States trimmed staff at the U-S Embassy in Kuwait, but left a skeleton crew of 10 and says it will defy Iraq's order to close down the embassy. Other nations including the Soviet Union and China also say they will NOT comply. The State Department says embassies in Kuwait City were given a midnight deadline for evacuating.

The countries refuse to accept Iraq's annexation of Kuwait, and say closing their embassies would be an admission that Baghdad controls the tiny, oil-rich emirate. The annexation came shortly after Iraq invaded Kuwait August 2nd. Iraqi troops reportedly are prepared to surround embassies that doN'T close.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela says he might meet with Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi in an effort to halt tribal violence in black townships. It would be the first meeting between the two men since the conflict between their supporters erupted 11 days ago. 528 people have been killed.

(AUG. 24) UPI - The Kansas City Royals are excited about the wrong record and pleased with the wrong pitcher.

Recognized as pre-season favorites for an American League pennant, Kansas City has instead roamed the bottom half of the AL West for most of the season. Thursday night's 4-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners put the Royals record at 62-62 and gave Kevin Appier his 10th win on the year.

The Royals have been long in searching for a .500 mark, last attained on April 18 when they were 4-4.

''It seems like it took about three years,'' Kansas City Manager John Wathan said.

The victory was Kansas City's fourth straight, giving them a 14-8 record so far in the month of August.

''To play so bad for so long and then start winning games shows you what kind of character this team and this whole organization has,'' said George Brett, whose two-run double in the first inning put the Royals in front to stay.

''This was our first goal, to reach .500. Now our next goal is to move up another level,'' said Kevin Appier, 10-4, who allowed just three hits and no earned runs in six innings in posting his fourth straight win.

Appier was still in Omaha playing AAA ball at the beginning of the season when Mark and Storm Davis arrived from the West Coast. Touting strong arms and inflated salaries, the pitching duo was to insure Kansas City of dominance from the mound.

Now the Davis pair's combined record reads 8-15 and it is Appier who has become the Royals' first 10-game winner.

''That's a surprise, especially with the pitchers we have on this team,'' Appier said.

Tough-luck Seattle starter Brian Holman fell to 11-10. The Mariners have scored a total of just 14 runs in Holman's 10 losses.

''It's a strange game,'' said Holman, who came within one out of a perfect game April 20 at Oakland. ''I'm pitching OK. You just have to take the bad with the good.''

The Mariners have lost six of their last seven games and 12 of their last 16.

Jeff Montgomery picked up a career-high 19th save with one inning of one-hit relief.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Elsewhere Thursday night in the American League, Toronto downed Boston 4-3 Milwaukee clubbed New York 8-2 and Chicago defeated California, 4-2.

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 3

At Toronto, Kelly Gruber's broken-bat ground ball scored Mookie Wilson from third with the winning run to shave Boston's AL East lead to one game. Toronto reliever Tom Henke, 2-2, went two innings to pick up the victory. Joe Hesketh lost in his first decision the season.

Brewers 8, Yankees 2

At New York, Dave Parker homered and drove in four runs and Rob Deer smacked a solo homer, snapping the New York Yankees' six-game winning streak. Jamie Navarro, 4-5, gave up two runs and eight hits in pitching his first complete game of the year. New York starter Mike Witt fell to 2-6.

White Sox 4, Angels 2

At Chicago, Alex Fernandez scattered seven hits over eight innings and Scott Fletcher capped a three-run fourth inning with a two-run single, boosting the Chicago White Sox. Fernandez, 2-1, struck out five, the most in his five major-league starts, and walked two. Bobby Thigpen pitched the ninth for his major league-leading 42nd save. Kirk McCaskill evened to 9-9.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla performed like rivals for MVP honors Thursday night, but insisted it's just teamwork toward bringing a National League pennant to Pittsburgh.

Bonilla achieved his second career grand slam with his 29th home run of the season, and Bonds slammed his career high-tying 25th homer, a two-run shot in the seventh, to lead Pittsburgh to a 9-3 thrashing of Cincinnati.

''We have to push, we have to continue to push,'' Bonilla said, ''because we need to have as big a lead as we can get when we get back in the division.

''There's a lot of things we want to accomplish, and one of them is bringing a pennant to Pittsburgh. We're going to have some hard times in September, and we're going to have some good times, and we've got to hope the good out-weigh the hard.''

The win, the eighth in their last nine, combined with the New York Mets' loss to Los Angeles Thursday to give the Pirates a four-game lead in the NL East.

Bonds and Bonilla have both exhibited award-winning play this season and sport similar statistics. Bonds, among the league leaders in batting average, home runs, RBI, runs scored, stolen bases and a few other less celebrated categories, is considered the league's top MVP candidate.

Bonilla, who has top-five rankings in home runs, RBI, runs scored and a couple other categories, is considered one of his chief challengers.

But Bonilla is more concerned with a team trophy than one for himself.

''If a post-season honor comes, it comes,'' Bonilla said. ''B.B.'s (Barry Bonds) set out to do some things this year. All the attention he's getting he should be getting. That's why he was a No. 1 draft choice (in 1985).

''I'm not worried about post-season honors. If a post-season honor comes my way, it won't be because I'm talking to you right now.''

The Pirates took advantage of nine walks issued in a combined effort by rookie Chris Hammond, 0-2, Tim Layana and Rosario Rodriguez. All of the runners on base when Bonilla hit his grand slam to cap a six-run fifth had drawn bases on balls, and a walk to Andy Van Slyke right before Bonilla's blast forced in the Pirates' second run.

Winning starter Zane Smith, 9-7, earned his third win in three starts since Pittsburgh obtained him in a multi-player deal with Montreal on Aug. 8. He gave up seven hits and two runs, walked one and struck out four over 6 1-3 innings.

-- AROUND THE NL --

In other National League action, Houston pounded Atlanta 8-3, San Francisco dropped Philadelphia 6-3, and Los Angeles beat New York 4-2.

Astros 8, Braves 3

At Atlanta, Glenn Wilson stroked four singles and drove in two runs to pace an 18-hit attack, lifting Houston. Mark Portugal, 7-9, allowed seven hits over six innings to earn the win, striking out five and walking three. Larry Andersen allowed one hit over two innings, while Dave Smith tossed the final inning. Starter Charlie Leibrandt fell to 5-8.

Giants 6, Phillies 3

At San Francisco, pinch hitter Ernest Riles clubbed a three-run homer in a four-run fourth inning, his second pinch-hit home run in five days, leading San Francisco. Riles's pinch-hit homer was his fourth of the season, tying a club record. Francisco Oliveras, 1-2, earned the the victory with three innings of scoreless relief, allowing one hit and striking out two. Dennis Cook fell to 8-3.

Dodgers 4, Mets 2

At Los Angeles, Eddie Murray's two-run homer in the fifth inning snapped a 2-2 tie and carried Los Angeles. Fernando Valenzuela, 11-10, gave up only four hits and drove in a run. He was forced to pitch out of trouble repeatedly, walking a season-high seven, and did not strike out a batter before being lifted in the eighth inning. Jay Howell finished to record his 12th save.

DETROIT (AUG. 24) UPI - A 72-year-old man has been charged with murder for allegedly helping his cancer-stricken wife commit suicide earlier this week in suburban Romulus, police said.

The couple flew from a Sacramento, Calif., suburb to Michigan because news reports about Dr. Jack Kevorkian and his ''suicide machine'' led them to believe assisted suicides were legal in Michigan, Derek Humphry, executive director of the Hemlock Society, told the Detroit Free Press in Friday editions.

Conflicting legal precedents make it unclear whether assisting suicide is a crime in Michigan.

Virginia Lee Harper, 69, who was terminally ill with cancer, died Sunday in a motel room near Metro Airport after she swallowed unidentified pills and put a plastic bag over her head, Humphry said.

Her husband, whom authorities identified as Bertram but who is known as Robert, and her daughter, Shanda McGrew, were at her side, Humphry said.

He said the couple has been members of the Hemlock Society, an Oregon-based group that supports voluntary euthanasia, since 1988, but that he learned of the family and its plight on Thursday, when McGrew called him.

''They thought they were safe in Michigan from such a crime,'' he said. ''They made statements to authorities in the belief that all was fine and dandy and there would be no prosecution.''

Bertram Harper, of Loomis, Calif., was arraigned Wednesday in 34th District Court in suburban Romulus on charges of murder and conspiracy to commit murder, authorities said.

The conspiracy charge refers to his assistance of his wife's suicide, according to Nancy Schuette, the court administrator.

Harper was being held in lieu of $25,000 bond at the Wayne County Jail. He was scheduled to appear in 34th District Court next Wednesday for a preliminary exam.

An official with the Wayne County Medical Examiner's office said the cause of Virginia Harper's death has not been officially determined.

Humphry said the woman had been ill with cancer for at least two years and that her health was deteriorating.

Kevorkian is a Royal Oak doctor who grabbed national headlines after he helped an Oregon woman, Janet Adkins, kill herself June 4 with his machine that administered drugs to her intravenously.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Flash flooding hit West Virginia early Friday, washing out roads, and fierce winds whipped parts of Georgia and Arkansas.

The National Weather Service said the flooding occurred following more than 3 inches of rain that fell in two hours. Three roads were washed out, state police in Elkins, W.Va., said.

No injuries were reported.

Earlier, winds downed trees in Georgia's eastern Adams County and thunderstorm gusts reached 60 mph at Fort Smith, Ark. Golf ball size hail fell near Lincoln, Neb.

Blue sky and warm temperatures returned to the Pacific Northwest Thursday, with temperatures ranging from the mid-60s as a weather system moves southward along the British Columbia Coast. A few showers can be expected through Saturday mainly along the coast.

Eastern Washington will remain mostly clear. There will be a chance of an afternoon shower or thundershower mainly in mountain areas through Saturday.

Oregon had partly-to-mostly sunny skies as a weak high pressure nosed into the state from the Pacific. However, a band of cloudiness associated with a dissipating frontal system kept clouds over southeast Oregon. A disturbance will begin moving into the area on Friday bringing with it increasing cloudiness and a chance of showers through the weekend.

In California, low clouds and fog blanketed much of the northern and central coastline during night and morning hours while inland skies were mostly clear. The pattern, typical for the season, will continue through the weekend except for the possibility of showers in the extreme north and a trend toward cooler temperatures.

Las Vegas posted 100 degrees Thursday with the upper 90s expected Friday under mostly sunny skies.

A lingering cold front should continue to dump rain over much of the Southeast as hot, muggy conditions prevail. While much of the region, including Tennesse, Mississippi and Alabama, should be free of showers, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida can expect early morning fog and strong afternoon thunderstorms.

At 3 a.m. Friday, temperatures across the Southeast ranged from a low of 71 degrees in Knoxville, Tenn., to a high of 78 degrees in Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla. Elsewhere, Atlanta reported 77 degrees, Chattanooga, Tenn. 75 degrees, and Charleston, S.C., 73 degrees.

During the Depression, farm families made only half as much as the U-S average.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed higher Friday for the first time in seven trading sessions amid a cloud of rumors surrounding the Middle East.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues rebounded 428.13 points to 24,165.76, a gain of 1.8 percent.

The rally followed the Nikkei's fourth-worst loss ever Thursday, as market's leading indicator dropped 1,473.28 points in panic selling over the Middle East.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major shares gained 16.47 points to 1,845.72, following a 110.58 point loss Thursday.

An estimated 550 million shares changing hands, compared with 478 million shares Thursday.

Declines outpaced advances 526 to 367, while 80 issues remained unchanged.

Once again, the Middle East played a decisive role in the market, brokers said, as rumors of a partial Iraqi pullout from Kuwait and, later, of an attempted coup against Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein drove the market higher.

Analysts said bargain-hunters were looking for an excuse to buy following a string of six losses that knocked the market down to its lowest level in more than two years.

The rumors about Iraq provided that incentive, analysts said.

Many market observers were pessimistic about the chances of sustaining a rally.

''What we saw was the euphoria of people reacting to the news,'' said

Betty Wu of SBCI Securities. ''I don't think it's going to last. There are too many uncertainties ahead.''

Andrew Melyarchik, a broker with Merrill Lynch, said much of the afternoon buying may have been simply to cover short positions.

''I would interpret it as an extension of bearish sentiment,'' he said.

One reason for pessimism was an announcement that Japan's long-term interest rate was raised Thursday afternoon by 0.6 percentage point to 8.5 percent, Wu said.

Much of the buying centered around blue-chip stocks, she noted.

''People were going for familiar names,'' she said.

Among the winners were some electronics including Sony, while steel issues also performed strongly.

Elsewhere around the Asian region, stocks posted their first gain in seven sessions on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, rallying on a strong showing by Tokyo stocks and positive rumors from the Middle East.

The Hang Seng Index climbed 46.60 points to 2,918.01. The gain followed a loss of 83.52 points Thursday and left the market with a 204.63-point deficit for the week.

Among the narrower indexes, financials gained 10.06 points, utilities added 60.67, industrials climbed 46.06 and properties jumped 97.06 points.

Volume remained light as an estimated 1.2 billion shares changed hands, compared with 1.34 billion shares Thursday.

Analysts said rumors of a partial Iraqi pullout from Kuwait and the gain on the Tokyo Stock Exchange combined to give Hong Kong investors their first winning session since Aug. 16.

''People are beginning to look at the real value of the market now,'' said David Harman, an analyst with Morgan Grenfell. ''Tokyo saw a rebound and investors here took heart in that.

''The market has sunk to a point where there are a lot of solid bargains and people are looking for an excuse to buy.''

Despite the rally, many investors remained on the sidelines, waiting to see if the upturn would continue into next week, brokers said.

The Hang Seng Index has shed about 15 percent since Iraq invaded its oil-rich neighbor Kuwait, sending oil prices soaring and global markets into turmoil.

Traders in Hong Hong will take a break from the action on Monday for the Liberation Day holiday. Trading will resume on Tuesday.

In Singapore, stocks closed higher on the Singapore Stock Exchange for the first time this week as bargain hunters overcame apprehensions about the Gulf crisis.

The Straits Times Industrial Index gained 30.17 points to 1,158.06. The All Singapore Index rose 8.04 points to 329.70.

Volume amounted to around 106.3 million shares.

Analysts said investors were motivated by the rally on the Tokyo Stock Exchange.

Institutions were the primary bargain hunters after the string of staggering losses accompanying escalating tensions in the Mideast, market watchers noted.

On the trading floor, Development Bank of Singapore foreign shares paced the advancing issues followed by GB Holding and UMW Holdings.

Oriental Holdings led the declining issues followed by Singapore Land and Hong Leong Industries.

In Bangkok, stock prices fell another 5 percent on the Stock Exchange of Thailand amid worries over the crisis in the Middle East.

The Stock Exchange of Thailand (SET) Index dropped 39.58 points to 695.81.

An estimated 1.7 billion shares changed hands as declines hammered advances, 167 issues to only seven.

The downward trend affected all sectors of the market.

''It is the matter of fear in the market,'' said Wiroj Duangkhee, president of the Thailand Brokers Association.

''So we have to look for additional measures to boost purchasing power,'' he said.

Analysts noted the Thailand stock market has fallen 37 percent while Wall Street has dropped only 10 percent and the Japanese market by 18 percent since the Aug.2 invasion of Kuwait.

Maruay Padungsith, President of the Board of SET, has proposed relaxing restrictions on investment in the stock market by finance companies, to help boost confidence.

He said regulations limiting stock market investment by finance companies to only 60 percent could be completely removed to increase the supply of money available for investment in the market.

In Seoul, stock prices on the Korean Stock Exchnage ended broadly lower in moderate trading.

The Korea Stock Exchange Index slid to its lowest level in more than 2 1/2 years, losing 9.39 points to 595.36.

Concerns over the Gulf crisis were the main reason for the fall but a delay in government supportive measures for the stock market was another, analysts said.

Government officials said Friday they were considering moves to boost the stock market.

There were fears spreading among investors that the market may collapse altogether if the government does not move quickly, the analysts said.

In Australia, stock prices fell sharply on the Sydney Sharemarket despite the rally in Tokyo.

The All Ordinaries Index fell 24.1 points, or 1.6 percent, to 1,469.6.

Losses occurred across the boards.

The All Industrials Index fell 19.8 points to 2,178.8 and the All Resources Index lost 29.9 to 911.5.

Declines overpowered advances, 262 to 76, while 186 stocks remained unchanged.

An estimated 147.1 million shares changed hands.

Analysts said Wall Street's plunge on Thursday was the trigger for the drop.

On the trading floor, BHP Oil fell 35 cents to $11, WMC eased 26 cents to $5.14, News Corp. fell 15 cents to $10.35, Brambles lost 20 cents to $12.80, while Westpac Bank rose 3 cents to $4.63.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Sweden says Iraqi troops are patrolling around several embassies in Kuwait City today as Baghdad's deadline nears for the embassies to close. Sweden's foreign minister says troops are around the British, Japanese, West German, Swedish, Norwegian, Hungarian and Romanian embassies.

Norway's foreign ministry confirms the Swedish report and says there are ''enough soldiers to completely surround the embassy.'' But Britain's foreign office denies that any soldiers are outside its embassy. The United States and many other countries refuse to comply with the order to shut their diplomatic compounds.

The Tokyo stock market rallied at the end of the week, sending the Nikkei average of 225 stocks rising 428 yen today for a gain of one-point-eight percent. The rise follows yesterday's fourth-worst loss when the Nikkei fell 14-hundred-73 yen in panic selling because of the Persian Gulf crisis.

More than three inches of rain fell in two hours in Elkins, West Virginia, causing flash floods that police say washed out three roads. NO injuries were reported. Fierce winds blasted parts of Georgia and Arkansas, toppling trees in Georgia's Adams County. Thunderstorm gusts reached 60 miles-an-hour at Fort Smith, Arkansas.

A corporate plane crashed yesterday during take-off from a Houston airport... killing three of the 15 people aboard and injuring a dozen others. Authorities say the plane split in half and caught fire when it went down. It was carrying North Sea oil rig workers to New Orleans. They had just arrived back in the United States from England.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - America's total output of goods and services crawled ahead only 1.2 percent in the second quarter of the year, the government said Friday, as the economy struggled to avert a recession.

Private economists anticipated an increase of 1.4 percent and warn that a period of negative or near-zero growth lies ahead because energy and other consumer prices will likely spiral as the Iraq crisis drags on.

In its first revision of the real gross national product, the Commerce Department also reported corporate profits after taxes dipped 0.2 percent from April to June after inching ahead 0.5 percent in the first quarter.

The second quarter's overall $12.2 billion increase in the real GNP, which discounts inflation, follows a gain of 1.7 percent, or $17.4 billion, from January to March, the department said.

The figures in the report were adjusted for seasonal factors and calculated at an annual rate. Most of the revisions came from data collected during June, a government spokesman said.

The implicit price deflator, a critical measure of inflation tied to the report, finished the second quarter at 4.7 percent, down from 4.8 percent in the first quarter when energy prices jumped in the wake of a December by only 0.3 percent in the second quarter after gaining 1.1 percent in the first quarter.

Spending on durable goods plunged 9 percent from April to June while spending on non-durable goods was off 2 percent. Spending on services, however, was up 5.1 percent.

''About one-third of the second-quarter increase was in expenditures on electricity and natural gas, which reflected a return to near-normal temperatures following an unusually mild winter,'' the Commerce Department said.

Exports of goods and services, which rocketed 11.2 percent in the first quarter, were off 3.5 percent in the second quarter, while imports dipped 0.6 percent after advancing 2.5 percent from January to March.

Business investment, meanwhile, dropped 5.2 percent in the second quarter, more than offsetting a 5 percent increase in the first quarter as business inventories, the stockpile of unsold goods, increased dramatically.

Total government spending was up 6.6 percent in the second quarter, a better showing than a 2.9 percent increase in the first quarter, on substantially higher non-defense spending by the federal government, the Commerce Department said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced Friday he will slash production of the Army's $42 billion Light Helicopter program by nearly 40 percent to save an estimated $7.8 billion.

It was Cheney's final review this year of major new weapons systems in an attempt to find defense budget savings. While cutting back and slowing down programs, he did not terminate any of the expensive weapons.

Cheney said he will direct the Army to cut its planned buy of 2,096 Light Helicopters over the next 10 years to 1,292 - a reduction of nearly 40 percent. They will be produced at a rate of 120 per year instead of the planned 216 a year.

In addition, he said, the demonstration phase of the contract will be extended two years.

Reducing the size of the program to 1,292 helicopters represents ''the minimum requirement for light helicopters in the force structure,'' Cheney said.

While cutting the total size of the purchase by 804 helicopters would reduce procurement costs by $8 billion, the extended development program will add $200 million to total research and development costs, resulting in net savings of $7.8 billion, the Pentagon said.

''The changes in Europe do not alter the need for helicopters that can serve a versatile, more flexible force,'' Cheney said. ''Helicopters must be versatile, with the ability to self-deploy to hot spots. These are all attributes of the LH not found in the current helicopter fleet.''

The LH is intended to be a light, all-weather, night-attack helicopter that can destroy tanks and shoot down helicopters. More than 2,096 had been expected to be ordered over the next 10 years, entering service in 1997.

It is expected to replace the AH-1, OH-6 and OH-58 light tactical helicopters.

But many members of Congress have objected to spending $42 billion on a new helicopter program at a time when the defense budget is sharply declining and the threat from Eastern Europe has all but evaporated.

In addition, the LH has been criticized for failing to meet is 7,500-pound weight limit, for not being agile and fast enough to catch the Soviet KA-28 Hokum attack helicopter and for failing to meet its cost goal of $7.5 million each.

Pentagon officials said the per-unit cost of the LH has grown to $9.1 million, or $1.6 million over the Army's goal of $7.5 million.

The nation's four helicopter companies have formed two teams that are seeking the lucrative LH contract, pitting McDonnell Douglas Helicopters and Bell Helicopter Textron against Boeing Vertol and Sikorsky Aircraft of United Technologies Corp.

The LH was the last of Cheney's reviews this year of major weapons systems.

On Aug. 13, Cheney culminated a four-month review of major new warship programs by announcing he would cut the number of Seawolf attack submarines and Arleigh Burke-class destroyers to be built, to save an estimated $7 billion through fiscal 1994.

Earlier this year, Cheney completed his review of major new aircraft programs in April by cutting the Air Force's $75 billion B-2 ''stealth'' bomber program from 132 to 75 planes and paring back other programs for an estimated savings of $34 billion through the early years of the next century.

As part of that review, Cheney also cut back the Air Force's C-17 transport plane and the Navy's A-12 ''stealth'' carrier-based attack plane and delayed production of the Air Force's stealthy, next-generation Advanced Tactical Fighter or ATF.

The campaign, which starts Monday, includes a nutrition seminar in Tokyo and Osaka, an American meat exhibition, a meat products show and a meat cutting school. The federation has been holding the event annually since 1987.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Iraqi troops reportedly have surrounded several embassies in Kuwait City in advance of Iraq's deadline for the foreign missions to close. Iraq made the demand as a symbol of its annexation of Kuwait... but many foreign nations are refusing to abandon their embassies. Baghdad says diplomats in Kuwait after the deadline will lose their diplomatic status.

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim is expected to meet today with King Hussein in Jordan before traveling to Baghdad tomorrow. King Hussein returned to Amman today after visits to Sudan and Yemen in diplomatic efforts to avert a Middle East War. Sources at Jordan's Ministry of Interior says its border with Iraq will reopen this afternoon to allow more refugees to cross.

In Tokyo, the 225-issue Nikkei average managed to end the week with a rally for the first time since Iraq invaded Kuwait. The market rose more than 428 yen to end the day with a gain of nearly two percent. The rally followed the Nikkei's fourth-worst loss. Yesterday, the market's leading indicator dropped precipitously in panic selling over the Middle East.

The Commerce Department says the Gross National Product... America's total output of goods and services... rose a paltry one-point-two percent in the second quarter of this year. That's less than the total expected by private economists, who had anticipated an increase of one-point-four percent. The economists warn of negative or near-zero growth ahead because energy and other consumer prices will likely spiral as the Persian Gulf crisis drags on.

Authorities in Boston say three people were killed early this morning when a small twin-engine plane crashed between two houses. Fire Chief John White says the pilot and two passengers aboard the plane died... but NO casualties were reported on the ground. Federal officials say the twin-engine turbo-pro Piper Cheyenne was bound for Logan International Airport from Chatham, Massachusetts.

South Africa's Law and Order Minister will announce measures later today to cope with the black-on-black violence that has claimed more than 500 lives in the last week and a half. MANILA (AUG. 24) UPI - U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt warned U.S. servicemen Friday against possible communist guerrilla attacks as talks near on the renewal of U.S. basing rights in the Philippines.

Guerrillas of the communist New People's Army have said they would continue attacking U.S. personnel unless the United States dismantles its six facilities in the Philippines, including the giant Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Complex.

''I think the security situation is really very tight as long as these negotiations are going on and I think that we have to be very vigilant during that period,'' Platt said in a taped interview broadcast on the U.S. military television Far East Network.

''The threats coming from the NPA are there and we have to take them seriously and so I think it will be a period of heightened vigilance for the next few months,'' Platt said.

The deaths of at least 10 U.S. citizens since October 1987 have been blamed on the NPA. The fatalities include two servicemen killed outside Clark last May as talks began on extending the leases that expire in September 1991.

The 19,000-member NPA has been battling for 21 years to establish a Marxist state.

The second round of talks is expected to begin in mid-September but officials refuse to set a specific date because of fears of triggering new responses from the NPA.

Clark, home of the 13th Air Force, and Subic, a repair and logistics center for the 7th Fleet, are the oldest and largest U.S. facilities overseas. Manned by some 14,500 servicemen, the bases allow the projection of U.S. military might over the Western Pacific and the Indian Ocean.

Diplomats said the Persian Gulf conflict has enhanced the value of the bases, but U.S. spokesmen have refused to talk about the role the facilities are playing there.

Philippine senators have expressed opposition to the use of the bases as a staging area. Any expansion of basing rights requires approval by the Philippine Senate.

Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus said, however, the bases are allowed to resupply vessels and the U.S. facility at Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean. Diplomats point out logistics plays a key role in any war effort.

Meanwhile, suspected military rebels trying to oust President Corazon Aquino detonated a bomb Friday at the Cosmos Bottling Plant in San Pedro outside Manila, injuring a worker.

The plant is owned by the family of Trade Secretary Jose Concepcion. It was the third company of the Concepcion family to be attacked in more than a dozen bombings in the past two weeks. The only casualty has been a wounded security guard.

Concepcion has been accused of corruption and despite his denials has been severely criticized in Manila's newspapers. News reports said he was targeted for assassination by rebel soldiers denouncing corruption and inefficiency in government.

Last December, 119 people were killed and more than 500 wounded in the sixth and worst uprising since Aquino assumed the presidency in February 1986 in a military-backed civilian revolt against President Ferdinand Marcos.

HOUSTON (AUG. 24) UPI - An Ethiopian government investigation into the airplane crash that killed Rep. Mickey Leland and 15 others a year ago concludes the accident most likely was caused by pilot error.

''By pushing too far and flying into an area of bad weather at a very low altitude, the flight crew may have failed to maintain visual ground contact and unknowingly collided with a mountain,'' concludes the report by the Ethiopian Civil Aviation Authority.

The report was received by the National Transportation Safety Board, which released it Thursday.

Leland, D-Texas, and the others died Aug. 7, 1989, when a twin-engine plane flying them to an African village on a hunger-relief mission slammed into a mountain during a rainstorm. There were no survivors.

In addition to Leland, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, the victims included congressional aides, federal aid workers and seven Ethiopians.

In addition to concluding the crash ''most probably'' was due to pilot error, the report criticized the flight crew for not properly studying and determining route and destination weather before departing, as required by regulations.

''It is significant that none of the flight crew attempted to personally go to the weather office and receive firsthand information and weather briefings,'' investigators said.

''The weather being as it was, one would expect at least the co-pilot, if not both pilots, to remain close to the meterological office and closely monitor the route weather development by all available means, including the weather satellite photos, which were readily available.''

The report also noted the attempted itinerary for Leland's group was ''tight considering the weather conditions at the time.'' Bad weather had caused several delays in earlier parts of the journey.

Investigators also believe the pilots may have violated their license restrictions by flying under instrument flight rules until visible ground contact could be established.

The report noted that a plane that took off from Addis Ababa on the same route about one hour after Leland's flight returned because of bad weather.

The investigation concluded the plane hit the top of a tree about 250 feet before it struck the mountain, that the crash occurred at high speed and that all the passengers died instantly, before a fire swept the wreckage.

The force of the impact destroyed the plane's emergency transmitter, and extensive ground and air searches for the craft did not find the wreckage until a week after the accident, the report said.

FORT SMITH, AR (AUG. 24) UPI - Whirlpool Corp. will lay off more workers sooner than originally planned, a newspaper reported Friday. The company said between 250-300 workers would lose their jobs Friday and between 1,500-1,600 on Sept. 21.

The Benton Harbor, Mich.-based appliance maker, which makes refrigerators at its Fort Smith plant, had projected earlier this year that about 1,800 employees would be laid off by Oct. 1, the Arkansas Gazette story said.

Neal Catlett, president of the Allied Industrial Workers Local 370, which represents workers at the plant, said the company had indicated that the Middle East crisis would have a rippling effect on the economy. He said during the possibility of a conflict of some type, most people are tighter with their money.

Catlett also said the decision may have something to do with the boycott of Whirlpool products by the union. Catlett said five million members from 17 labor unions are boycotting Whirlpool products as a response to the company's actions toward the Fort Smith union. The two sides have not been able to resolve a contract dispute since last fall, and the union has been working without an agreement.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Sweden says Iraqi troops have surrounded several Western embassies in Kuwait as a midnight deadline approaches for the closure of all foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait City. The United States and other Western allies are refusing to shut down their diplomatic missions, saying that to do so would be a concession that the Iraqi annexation of the oil-rich emirate was valid. The Soviet Union initially said it would keep its Embassy open but announced today that its diplomats were flown back to Moscow last night.

President Frederik de Klerk of South Africa announced a major crackdown today on the surge of black-on-black violence that has claimed at least 506 lives in 12 days and left another 15-hundred people injured. He said the government will introduce legislation to give police wide-ranging powers in so-called ''unrest areas.'' He said the powers would be limited to the time of unrest and NOT long-term. The South African Army is mobilizing reserve troops to help police trying to quell the violence.

The Commerce Department says the U-S gross national product advanced a scant one-point-two percent in the April-through-June quarter, as the economy struggled to avert a recession. The second quarter's overall 12-point-two-BILLION-dollar rise in the real G-N-P, which discounts inflation, comes after a one-point-seven percent first-quarter gain of 17-point-four-BILLION dollars. The government also reported that corporate after-tax profits fell two-tenths of one percent after rising one-half percent in the first quarter.

Defense Secretary Cheney today slashed a 42-BILLION-dollar Army Light Helicopter program by 40 percent to save an estimated seven-point-eight-BILLION dollars. The cuts come in Cheney's final review of the defense budget. He says he will direct the Army to cut its planned purchase of two-thousand 96 Light Helicopters during the next 10 years to one-thousand 292.

(AUG. 24) UPI - A small twin-engine plane made a crash landing between two houses in Boston early today, setting both homes on fire and killing three people on the plane. NO casualties were reported on the ground. F-A-A officials say the pilot radioed Logan International Airport that he was experiencing problems and the plane went down moments later. Neighbors say the occupants of one house were away on vacation, and that five people in the other house fled to safety.

A Coast Guard radar plane hunting drug smugglers caught fire and crashed today at a U-S naval station in Puerto Rico, killing all four men aboard. The deaths are the first for the Coast Guard since it began drug-smuggling interdiction work in the 1970's. A Coast Guard spokesman in Miami says the EC Hawkeye plane crashed just short of the runway at Roosevelt Road Naval Station. The victims were based in St. Augustine, Florida.

BONN (AUG. 24) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl Friday invited the opposition Social Democratic Party for talks in a bid to resolve differences over the technical aspects of German unification, notably over new abortion laws.

Abortion is legal in East Germany but generally prohibited in West Germany and there has been no agreement so far on legislation that would be enforced after the two states are scheduled to merge on Oct. 3.

Kohl reportedly discussed issues linked to German unification with his East German counterpart, Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere, in East Berlin Friday.

Kohl also met with the parliamentary faction of the East German Christian Democratic Union, the sister party of his West German CDU.

While in East Berlin, Kohl invited the West German SPD and the parties in his government coalition for talks in Bonn Sunday over a proposed unification treaty.

The SPD had earlier requested the talks in view of continuing disagreements over the treaty, which is due to set down the legal, financial and technical aspects of unification.

Both the SPD and the Free Democratic Party, the junior partners in the government coalition, reject new abortion legislation which is to be included in the treaty.

The draft law states that only women living in what is now East German territory could legally have abortions. The SPD and the FDP want abortion to remain legal in East Germany for all German women.

Under both proposals, abortion would remain illegal on West German territory.

New legislation included in the treaty would remain in force for two years or until an all-German parliament alters it.

The CDU needs the support of the SPD in both East and West Germany to have the treaty ratified by the two-thirds parliamentary majority required for constitutional amendments.

If the treaty is not passed, a transitional law could be adopted instead. The law would only include the parts of the treaty that do not affect the constitution. It could be passed unilaterally by a simple majority of the West German Parliament.

Resolution of the issue is one of the conditions for unification as stated in a decision Thursday by the East German Parliament.

The SPD also insists that former owners of land confiscated by the former East German Communist leadership should receive compensation rather than be given back their land.

There are also disagreements over the distribution of the cost of unification among the 11 West German states and the five states East Germany is expected to create.

CHICAGO (AUG. 24) UPI - Trading was choppy and grain and soybean futures were mixed at midmorning Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Traders were on both sides of the market in relatively light activity ahead of the weekend.

Both corn and soybeans were pressured by profit-taking and indications that Thursday's gains were overdone. Country elevator managers reported a slight increase in farmer selling overnight which contributed to the weakness across the floor.

Commission houses dominated the selling in corn and beans.

Wheat was narrowly mixed in lackluster trading.

Corn and wheat basis levels were higher at the Gulf while the soybean basis was lower.

Taiwan bought a small quantity of wheat, otherwise the export markets were quiet.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Sep 2.58 3/4 off 1/4; Dec 2.50 off 3/4; Mar 2.59 up 1/4.

Soybeans Sep 6.26 3/4 off 1 1/4; Nov 6.39 3/4 off 1 3/4; Jan 6.53 1/2 off 1; Mar 6.67 off 1/4.

DETROIT (AUG. 24) UPI - General Motors Corp. has offered its hourly workers 2 percent raises, while Ford Motor Co. has proposed a lump-sum bonus in their first contract proposals made to the United Auto Workers union.

Neither carmaker has demanded any reductions in benefits or asked employees to share expenses for health insurance, it was reported Friday by sources close to the negotiations .

That by itself encouraged UAW negotiators, who have been bargaining since mid-July for new three-year labor pacts with GM, Ford and Chrysler Corp. for about half-a-million U.S. auto workers.

''There were not serious takeways, which gave rise to optimism,'' one UAW source at Ford told the Detroit News.

Both carmakers and the union declined to officially reveal specifics of the offers made Thursday while they are under review by the UAW. But sources said the contract offer by Ford included a lump-sum payment in the first year instead of a base wage increase.

Also offered was a $100 a month raise to $1,600 for workers who retire after 30 years of service. While no health insurance co-pays were sought, Ford did propose an incentive program encouraging workers to switch to health maintenance organizations and preferred provider plans.

GM's offer included a 2 percent base wage increase in the first year, and lump sum payments equal to 2 percent of base wages in the second and third years, sources confirmed.

GM's offer also set forth a job security proposal that builds on the current guarantees. GM has been accused by the union of not meeting the spirit of its current contract - which forbids official plant closings unless dictated by market conditions - because it has labeled shut plants as merely ''indefinitely idled'' rather than say they had been closed for good.

GM also offered new financial incentives to those who retire early or resign, but pledged to work harder to return work transferred outside the company to GM facilities.

Both carmakers said their first proposals for a new three-year pact provide the basis for a settlement by the Sept. 14 expiration date of the current agreements.

Chrysler was expected to present its proposal Friday, but executives of the No. 3 carmaker have indicated it could not afford to match offers placed on the table by GM and Ford.

Once all proposals have been reviewed by the UAW, it will select one of the automakers as a ''strike target,'' so they can establish a similar or ''pattern'' agreement it hopes the other two will follow.

Each of the nation's Big Three carmakers seem to be goading the UAW into picking them as a strike target because it gives them control in the bargaining process.

That announcemnt is expected Tuesday after UAW board meetings Monday. Bargaining is then expected to intensify at the target company until an agreement is reached and ratified.

The union's prime goals in this year's negotiations are increased job security, reduced outsourcing of work, and pension and wage gains.

Carmakers are seeking more operating flexibility to lower costs and become more competitive with ''transplant'' firms, or foreign-based carmakers with assembly plants in North America. Those firms have been steadily increasing their share of the U.S. market as they step up domestic production.

GM said its offer to the UAW, which is primarily concerned about job security at the giant carmaker, would help the two sides reach an agreement ''without further interruption of production.''

GM was hit with a week-long strike earlier this month when 3,200 workers at its AC Rochester parts plant in Flint, Mich., walked because of fears over job losses. The strike shuttered several GM assembly and components plants, idling about 20,000 workers and costing the carmaker about 19,000 cars and trucks in lost production.

SEATTLE (AUG. 24) UPI - With the Mideast crisis pushing the price of oil to $32 a barrel, NASA and The Boeing Co. announced a new wing design that could cut jet fuel consumption by more than ten percent, thus saving airlines a billion dollars a year in fuel costs.

The National Aeronatics and Space Agency said the new design creates "laminar airflow," smoothing out the air turbulence that normally exists on the surface of a wing. The turbulence creates friction, slowing the plane and forcing it to burn extra fuel to offset the drag.

Attaching the new wing would cut the total drag on an airplane by at least ten percent, NASA said. The space agency estimated that for every one percent reduction in drag, the airline industry would save about $100 million in fuel costs annually.

NASA's Dick Wagner, who heads the $22 million joint industry-government wing design project, said researchers were surprised by the effectiveness of the new design. Airlines could either save fuel or increase the range of their planes by incorporating the design, he said. Commercial airlines consume about 15 billion gallons of jet fuel annually, according to industry figures.

Wagner said the technology exists to use the design immediately on at least a portion of an aircraft's wing. Boeing successfully flew a 757 jetliner earlier this summer with a 22-foot wing section retrofitted with the fuel-saving design.

The retrofit smoothed out the airflow over 65 percent of the upper surface of the wing, Wagner said. "As far as I know there was no discernible handling problem with the plane," he said.

NASA said government and industry researchers anticipated incorporating the laminar flow technology into new aircraft designed during the 1990s. Wagner said the most likely application will be on a new plane rather than retrofitting existing aircraft.

Boeing executives said a major breakthrough during the three-year laminar-flow research project was the company's ability to make an unusually smooth titanium surface that still could suck in air and be cost-effective.

In the new design, engineers have added a thin titanium surface to the leading edge of the wing. That surface - covered by a flap to shunt away dirt and insects - contains about 19 million tiny laser-drilled holes that suck in air, "scrubbing away" the turbulence and leaving a smooth airflow across the wing surface.

Boeing spokesman Tom Cole cautioned that the potentially billion-dollar-saving wing is still an item of the future. "This has a practical application," Cole said, "but it is still in the embryonic test stage. These things take years before they're ready to be included in an aircraft design."

COLOMBO (AUG. 24) UPI - Helicopter gunships opened fire on scores of bicycle-mounted Tamil rebels fleeing advancing government troops in northern Sri Lanka, killing at least 75 guerrillas, a senior military official said Friday.

The incident occurred during a three-day military offensive against the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam on the northern Jaffna peninsula. As of Friday, at least 110 combatants had been killed in the fighting, which was still continuing, the official said.

Violence in the teardrop-shaped island nation and reports of civilian casualties prompted an expression of ''deep anguish'' from the Indian government, which earlier this year withdrew a peace-keeping force that failed to defeat the Tigers after more than two years of fighting.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in New Delhi urged Colombo and Tiger rebels to resolve their differences through political dialogue.

''The government of India is deeply anguished at the reports of indiscriminate aerial attacks on heavily populated areas of Jaffna, leading to a large number of civilian casualties,'' the spokesman said.

''The government of India once again calls on all parties concerned to cease hostilities and resume negotiations for a political solution in which the legitimate Tamil demands and aspirations are fully met within the framework of unity and integrity of Sri Lanka,'' the official said.

The Tigers are fighting for an independent homeland for Sri Lanka's Tamil minority in the northern and eastern parts of the country.

A senior military official in Colombo said at least 75 rebels were killed on Wednesday when helicopter gunships fitted with .50-caliber machine guns opened fire on about 150 rebels riding motorbikes and bicycles and crossing a causeway near the town of Kopai on the Jaffna peninsula.

The rebels were fleeing advancing government troops in the area, the official said.

''The incident occurred when our gunners from the chopper spotted the rebels attmepting to escape by crossing the Kopai causeway,'' the official said. ''The chopper was providing air cover for ground troops to advance when they spotted the Tiger rebels.''

In a separate incident Thursday, security forces and rebels clashed on the island of Kayts, located a few miles southwest of Jaffna town, the official said.

At least 10 rebels and three soldiers were killed during the encounter, he said.

Another 22 combatants, mostly rebels, were killed in separate incidents since Wednesday morning when security forces launched its three-day offensive.

Some 3,600 troops, backed by helicopter gunships and artillery, were involved in the operation, which was aimed at breaking rebel control of the area surrounding a 300-year-old Dutch fort in the town of Jaffna, where about 200 government troops have been trapped since mid-June.

The Tigers have used automatic weapons and mortars in sporadic attacks on the fort, preventing government helicopters from landing inside to deliver food and other supplies, and from evacuating wounded soldiers.

The government has staged repeated attacks on rebel positions around the fort, but has failed to bring the area under government control.

Authorities imposed curfew and dropped leaflets over populated areas of the Jaffna peninsula, asking people to remain indoors and to stay out of the line of fire.

Hostilities between Tiger rebels and security forces erupted in mid-June when rebels staged simultaneous attacks on four military camps in eastern Sri Lanka.

Since then, at least 2,600 soldiers, rebels and civilians have been killed in the fighting.

NEW YORK (AUG. 24) UPI - ABC has dropped ''Baby Talk'' from its fall schedule after Connie Selleca pulled out of the cast and will replace it with a new version of ''Head of the Class,'' the network announced Friday.

''Baby Talk'' was a new sitcom based on the film ''Look Who's Talking,'' in which a baby narrates the action. Bruce Willis was the voice of the baby in the movie version, and Tony Danza was slated for the role in the TV series.

''Head of the Class,'' which first went on the ABC schedule in 1986, had been in production as a backup series this season after its star, Howard Hesseman, left the show.

The new version will star Scottish comedian Bill Connolly, as a new character, and not in the role Hesseman created. The series premieres Sept. 11, 8:30-9 p.m. Eastern time.

Selleca withdrew from ''Baby Talk'' last week.

''The recasting process on 'Baby Talk' is not complete, and that delay means that the series will not be available for our September schedule as planned,'' said Robert Iger, president of ABC Entertainment. ''We'll announce plans for 'Baby Talk' in the near future.''

Aggravated assault is punishable by a prison term of two to 10 years and as much as $10,000 in fines. Failure to stop and render aid has a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

''I'm just trying to concentrate on playing football,'' Sanders said. ''I'm not letting this affect me at all.''

Sanders was indicted Wednesday by a Harris County grand jury. He originally had been charged with attempted murder and aggravated assault after a May 1 incident outside the Men's Club, a Houston topless bar.

''We want to get this over with as quickly as possible,'' said Sanders' attorney, Wendell Odom. ''We're looking forward to going to trial and I think the facts will show that Ricky was just trying to leave the parking lot that night.''

Sanders had come to Houston to watch a Houston Rockets-Los Angeles Lakers game and went to the club with friends after the game. The incident occurred after Sanders realized the hubcaps on his father-in-law's Cadillac were missing and argued with parking attendant Sam Jamus.

Sanders claimed the hubcaps were stolen while he was in the club while parking attendants said the hubcaps were already gone when Sanders arrived at the club.

Jamus, 29, claimed Sanders struck him with the car and drove off. Jamus, who has since filed a $5,000 personal injury lawsuit, spent six days in the hospital, four in an intensive care unit being treated for head injuries.

''I think it's a solid case,'' Assistant District Attorney Marc Brown said earlier this week. Brown said he would not pursue the attempted murder charge because he thought the grand jury would not return an indictment on that charge.

''I'm surprised they came with the aggravated assault charge,'' Odom said. ''We thought they would come with the failure to render aid. I think the fact he is somewhat of a celebrity had something to do with it.''

Sanders, who has been with the Redskins since 1986, has played in both of Washington's preseason games this season, and expects to play in Saturday's preseason game at Cleveland. He previously played for the Houston Gamblers of the USFL.

PRETORIA, South Africa (AUG. 24) UPI - The government announced a major crackdown on a surge of black violence Friday, imposing emergency laws in the hardest-hit areas that give police sweeping powers to arrest and disarm rival black factions of all weapons.

But African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela immediately attacked the move as ''totally useless'' and said it amounted to the imposition of a formal state of emergency in the areas.

''My own view is that it is not necessary to impose a state of emergency anywhere in the country because a state of emergency has shown that it is absolutely ineffective,'' Mandela said after an hour-long meeting with President Frederik de Klerk.

Mandela had met de Klerk not to discuss the crackdown but as a follow-up to an Aug 6. between the ANC and the government, which cleared obstacles to power-sharing negotiations. Mandela said he did not believe the latest emergency rules would disrupt the talks process.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok gave notice of the emergency rules in an order in a Government Gazette declaring that 19 magisterial districts, which include 27 black townships around Johannesburg, are immediately under the orders.

Vlok acknowledged the imposition of the powers ''could be harmful to the image of the country,'' but said the violence, having left more than 500 people dead and 1,500 hurt in 12 days, must stop.

''I want to once again seriously and urgently appeal to all responsible leaders in these areas to give their full cooperation in order to calm emotions and to assist in ending the violence,'' Vlok told reporters. ''It is in the interests of South Africa and all its inhabitants that further bloodshed, disorder and chaos be prevented at all costs.''

De Klerk had earlier said, ''We will not allow anarchy.''

The government invoked the emergency powers under provisions unused to date in terms of the Public Safety Act of 1953, permitting the declaration of ''unrest areas'' for a maximum period of three months, unless extended.

The act gives police broad powers to detain any person without trial for as long as the regulations remain in force and includes wide search-and-seizure powers and conditions limiting the liability of police officers enforcing the provisions.

Vlok also invoked the Dangerous Weapons Act of 1968, which allows the seizure of 33 types of dangerous weapons, including swords, battle-axes, petrol bombs, stones, garden forks, screwdrivers, and spears.

The measures effectively forbid rival groups from congregating and carrying traditional township weapons if police believe they are massing to ''kill, assault, attack or injure another person or persons or cause damage to any property.''

Vlok said the strength of the police, backed by the army, will be drastically increased in the listed areas. The military said Friday it was mobilizing an unspecified number of reserve forces to help police quell the violence.

''The aim of these measures is to institute purposeful steps to end the violence through the implementation of additional capabilities and strength of security force numbers,'' Vlok said.

Commissioner of Police Gen. Johan van der Merwe assured reporters that although police had the power to remove anyone at the scene of violence in the listed areas, they would not be doing so.

De Klerk said during a television interview that if the new measures proved insufficient, they would be supplemented. ''I give the assurance that ... the negotiating process will be allowed to continue,'' he said of the run-up to power-sharing negotiations clouded by the killings.

The president on June 8 lifted a 4-year-old national state of emergency in three of four provinces that gave police wide powers to quash anti-government and other civil unrest. He maintained the emergency in hard-hit Natal and noted Friday the latest measures were to be ''short-term'' and ''limited.''

The latest feuding, between Zulus of the Inkatha movement and the predominantly Xhosa supporters of the anti-apartheid African National Congress, had Zulus threatening to go into war formation in the western township of Kagiso, witnesses said.

(AUG. 24) UPI - The Pentagon has called up the reserves for the first time in 20 years. The first reserves called up are from units based in Mississippi, New York, New Jersey, Texas, Maryland and Massachusetts. The order calls on six Air National Guard and Air Force reserve cargo-hauling units to mobilize for duty in Saudi Arabia. Today's move follows yesterday's authorization by Defense Secretary Cheney to begin calling up nearly 50-thousand reservists.

Iraqi troops have surrounded at least seven embassies in Kuwait city, where officials say soldiers have stopped people from entering at least two of the diplomatic compounds. In the words of a Norwegian Foreign Ministry spokesman- ''The embassies now appear to be under siege.''

South Africa today announced a major crackdown on a surge of black factional strife, imposing emergency laws encompassing 27 black townships around Johannesburg. The order gives police sweeping powers to arrest and disarm rival factions of all weapons... and it takes effect immediately. South Africa's law and order minister acknowledges that the crackdown may harm the nation's image. But he says the violence that has killed more than 500 people and injured 15-hundred others in 12 days must stop.

Moslem security sources say Moslem and Syrian officials are working to free Irish hostage Brian Keenan. The sources indicate that Keenan may be taken to Damascus to be handed over to Irish diplomats. One source indicates that the deal possibly involves paying a ransom to kidnappers, believed linked to Iran.

MIAMI (AUG. 24) UPI - The landmark CenTrust Financial Center will be placed on the block in November as part of the Resolution Trust Corp.'s auction of property seized from insolvent thrifts, the auctioneer said Friday.

"We call it the crown jewel of the auction. It is a magnificent building," said James Gall Jr., chairman of Auction Co. of America, the Miami company which will conduct the auction.

The CenTrust tower, designed by architect I.M. Pei, is one of Miami's most visible landmarks, particularly at night, when the glass tower is often bathed in colored light.

"It will be the first property sold in the satellite auction. It is probably the largest single item ever to cross the auction block," he said. The RTC announced the sale of the building late Thursday. "We have already this morning received interest on the Centrust tower from around the world " Gall said.

Gall said regulators have yet to set a minimum acceptable bid for the 47-story building, but those wanting to bid will have demonstrate their good faith with a $2 million cashier's check.

The federal goverment took contol of the tower in February when it seized an insolvent CenTrust Bank, in one of the largest such takeovers in the nation. Regulators have said the bailout could cost taxpayers $2 billion.

Gall declined to estimate what the building could fetch. "I really don't know. But we do expect competitive bidding, and our goal is market value," he said.

The auction will be held Nov. 15 in Dallas, with satellite sites in Miami, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Denver, London, Tokyo, Houston, New Orleans, San Antonio, Texas, and Phoenix, Ariz.

ATHENS, GREECE (AUG. 24) UPI - Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said Friday that Tehran backed U.N. sanctions against Iraq, and called on Baghdad to pull its forces out of Kuwait, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

But the Iranian president also said Iran opposed the presence of a multinational force in the region.

Speaking at prayer ceremonies in Tehran, the president said Iran was trying to bring about a peaceful solution to the crisis ''and prevent the outbreak of any armed clash in this region.''

He did not say whether Iran was ready to play a mediating role between Iraq and the conservative Arab states in the region. Tehran played host Thursday to Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al Ahmed Al Sabah and to a Jordanian delegation.

Iran's own relations with Baghdad took a dramatic turn for the better last week when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein made sweeping concessions to Rafsanjani in a bid to end the 10-year-long Iran-Iraq conflict.

Iraq has since pulled out of Iranian territory taken during the Persian Gulf crisis, returned thousands of Iranian prisoners of war and has expressed willingness to sign a peace agreement with Iran, accepting a division of the Shatt al Arab waterway between the two countries.

The prisoner exchanges continued Friday, and Baghdad has also allowed more than 40,000 Iranians trapped in Kuwait after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion to return home by an overland route.

Despite Iraq's peace gestures, Iran has repeatedly said it stood by the stance it adopted at the start of the current crisis and wanted Iraqi troops to pull out of Kuwaiti territory.

''The Iraqi aggression against Kuwait revealed that Baghdad was an expansionist government,'' Rafsanjani said. He said Iran supports U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

IRNA quoted him as saying, ''The world acknowledged that Iraq has been the aggressor in the 1980-88 war and we have resisted justly.'' Iran had ''gained an ultimate victory'' with the Iraqi acceptance of its demands, Rafsanjani said.

HILLSBORO, OR (AUG. 24) UPI - When sheriff's deputy Dawn Overman cruises down Main Street in her white patrol car with its shiny gold shield on the door, heads turn and people even applaud.

No dull sedan for this lady deputy. She drives a growling, 1971 Corvette Stingray equipped with siren and flashing red lights.

The car would probably outrun most of the vehicles on the road but Overman never chases bad guys with her flashy wheels. She just lets them read what's written across the hood and rear fenders:

''This Car Seized in a Drug Raid.''

The car made its debut in a Fourth of July parade.

''At first everybody was craning their necks to see what it was,'' said Overman. ''Then they saw what was written on the fenders and they started to applaud.''

The Corvette was seized from a Portland cocaine dealer in 1989 and turned over to the Washington County Sheriff's Office by the Regional Organized Crime Narcotics Task Force. Sometimes seized cars are used for undercover work but usually they are sold at auction, with the proceeds going for drug enforcement.

But Sheriff Bill Probstfield tried a different tactic. He turned it into a billboard for his narcotics unit.

''It carries a message,'' said the sheriff. ''If you are going to break drug laws, you are going to pay the price, and it might not be a fine, jail time or probation.

''To a lot of young people, losing a car is a lot stiffer penalty,'' Probstfield said.

The aging Corvette was overhauled with volunteer labor and a body shop donated a paint job.

''All we had to pay for was the star on the door, the gold striping and the the light bar,'' the sheriff said.

Probstfield said the Corvette isn't practical for patrol work because it is too small and burns too much gas. But it is perfect for law enforcement education programs.

Overman drives the car to schools and other gatherings. She is frequently the driver for McGruff, the crime dog, and the Corvette is equipped with a trailer hitch to pull a talking robot that is is used to give anti-crime lectures to elementary school children.

''It gets the kids' attention,'' she said.

The sheriff said he plans to keep the Corvette on the force for a couple of years ''until the novelty wears off,'' then sell it.

Sgt. Rick Gordon, the sheriff's fleet manager, estimates the Corvette is worth about $20,000.

There appear to be plenty of ready buyers. While Probstfield was showing off the car to reporters, a man in a Lincoln drove up, rolled down his window and offered to write out a check on the spot.

(AUG. 23) UPI - Iraqi troops surrounded several embassies in Kuwait Friday, reportedly preventing people from entering and leaving some missions, as a midnight deadline to close all foreign embassies in the occupied city neared.

Iraq also told U.S. diplomats in Baghdad they would not be allowed to leave Iraq as long as the United States defied the order and kept open its embassy in the occupied Kuwait city.

The showdown between Iraqi authorities and the defiant foreign diplomats has fast become the most serious in the Persian Gulf crisis, triggered three weeks ago when Iraq invaded Kuwait.

The United States, the 12-member European Community, China, Japan, Yugoslavia, Austria and other nations have refused the order to close the embassies, saying it would be a tacit admission that Iraq's announced annexation of the oil rich emirate was valid.

The Soviet Union, which initially agreed to stand firm with the others, evacuated all personnel from its embassy and flew them home, a Soviet spokesman said in Moscow.

In other developments Friday:

- Jordan agreed to reopen its border with Iraq and allow a maximum of 20,000 refugees a day into the kingdom. Jordan had closed its border with Iraq Wednesday, saying it could not accommodate more refugees, but 26,000 people, most of them Arab nationals, crossed into Jordan Thursday despite the order.

- Only half of OPEC's 13 ministers agreed to attend an emergency weekend meeting in Vienna, suggesting the cartel is split over a Saudi proposal to raise production quotas to counter shortages caused by a U.N. embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil.

- The five permanent members of the United Nations continued their efforts to work out an agreement that would provide for multinational enforcement of economic sanctions against Iraq and Kuwait.

- Iran repeated its intention to honor the embargo, but condemned the West for sending troops into the region and said it would ''not scorn'' its long-time foe Iraq.

- Western officials further condemned a televised meeting between Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and a dozen British hostages, with White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater calling it ''sick beyond expression.''

At a news conference in Kennebunkport, Maine, Fitzwater confirmed the presence of Iraqi troops around the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait city, but said Washington was in contact with Ambassador Nathaniel Howell.

''Iraqi forces of one kind or another are around the embassy,'' Fitzwater told reporters. ''They have not made any moves on the embassy or intruded in any fashion, but they are present.''

In a special television broadcast, Sweden's Foreign Minister Sten Andersson announced Friday Iraqi troops were patrolling around the British Japanese, West German, Swedish, Norwegian, Hungarian and Romanian embassies.

Norwegian Ambassador Hans Wilhelm Longva told his foreign ministry that Iraqi troops had stoped people who tried to enter the mission and British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said troops were also preventing movement in and out of the British Embassy.

The United States kept a small staff - believed to be less than 10 people - in the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait and moved the rest over land to Baghdad, where they had been expected to leave the country under the protection of diplomatic immunity.

But Fitzwater said Iraqi authorities told the workers they were to remain in Baghdad until the rest of the staff evacuated the mission in Kuwait. He said Iraq had ''reneged'' on its promise to respect the diplomatic immunity of the embassy staff that left Kuwait and called the incident ''another troublesome element in the overall pattern of harassment and hostage-taking activity.''

Fitzwater said Thursday he did not know how many of the 62 embassies in Kuwait would remain open, but the majority of nations indicated they would comply with a U.N. resolution that deemed the annexation of Kuwait illegal.

Lebanon, however, recalled its ambassador for consultations while India said it would close its mission and Brazil said it would close temporarily.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh said Friday all Soviet diplomats had left Kuwait and returned to Moscow on a flight from Baghdad Thursday night.

''The situation made it impossible for them to do their work there,'' Gremitskikh said. ''The Soviet government decided to evacuate all its citizens from Kuwait in the interests of security of people.''

He said despite the fact that ''as of today the embassy is empty'' and is closed for practical purposes, under international law the Soviet Embassy had not officially been closed.

Foreign mission officials said most of the embassies that remained open in Kuwait were each staffed by only a handful of personnel, in some cases a single ambassador. They indicated the diplomats remaining were told not to resist if forced to move by Iraqi troops.

Iraq has said diplomats who stay in Kuwait past the Friday deadline would lose their diplomatic status, indicating they would face a possible roundup along with other foreign nationals.

Iraq has been moving foreigners to key military and economic sites to guard against strikes by the Western and Asian force that has been deployed to the gulf region since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. The United States has sent an estimated 30,000 troops to Saudi Arabia, its chief supplier of oil.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said the number of confirmed Americans detained by Iraq had reached 56 - 41 from Iraq and 15 from Kuwait.

In Bagdhad, British Broadcasting Corp. reporter John Simpson said Iraqi officials apparently believed Saddam's televised meeting with British hostages would improve British public opinion of Iraq.

Instead, the televised meeting - in which Saddam patted the heads of children and told their parents he shared their anguish - has been universally condemned.

Fitzwater said the controversial tape, aired over Baghdad television and picked up by networks worldwide, showed the ''cynical and inhumane view he (Saddam) holds of human life,'' adding the tape, which he said President Bush watched, was ''sick beyond description.''

Simpson described Baghdad as ''quiet and silent.'' He said streets were virtually empty but armored personnel carriers were out, especially near the television building.

''It's not on a war footing. I don't think it is right to say that,'' Simpson said in one of his reports. ''There is a sort of sense of tension, of stress, that surprised me after my previous visit.''

Also Friday, Austrian President Kurt Waldheim arrived in Amman for talks with Jordan's King Hussein and was expected to travel to Baghdad Saturday in hopes of playing a role of mediator in the 3-week-old gulf crisis.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AUG. 24) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said Friday that western Europe was the only guarantor of independence for Lithuania.

''Either Europe helps Lithuania to rejoin Europe, or Europe rejects the Baltic states and forces them to remain in the Soviet Union,'' Landsbergis said.

The Lithuanian president was in Copenhagen Friday on a two-day official working visit as the guest of Danish Prime Minister Poul Schluter.

''The time is coming when the European states will have to see the situation as it is and make their decisions accordingly,'' Landsbergis said.

''The West says it wants to support (Soviet President Mikhail) Gorbachev, but does not seem to realize that to do this, they must support the Baltic states. We are the ones who have given Gorbachev most assistance in bringing about real change in the Soviet Union,'' Landsbergis said.

The Lithuanian president added that Lithuania had the right to take its independence and sovereignty, ''things which could never be a gift from Moscow.''

''If we find an agreement whereby they think that they are giving us independence, but we know we are simply taking it - that will leave us no problems,'' Landsbergis added.

''We have no hate of the Russians, we know that they too have been victims of a cruel system. It is this system that must be destroyed, and we in Lithuania have destroyed quite a bit of it already,'' Landsbergis said.

The Lithuanian president went on to reject the notion that the Soviet Union could retain the Baltic port of Klaipeda as part of any agreement on full independence for Lithuania.

''According to the Treaty of Versailles in 1919, Klaipeda was separated from Germany. In 1924 Lithuanian sovereignty over the port was recognized by the world,'' Landsbergis said.

He said Soviet politicians were making ''a great mistake'' to think Klaipeda, Lithuania's only major port, could be a Soviet port ''simply because it was taken over as part of the Soviet Union.''

''If you accept that annexation, then you also have to re-draw Europe. It would make Hitler's annexation of (Poland's) Silesia and the anschluss with Austria still valid,'' Landsbergis said.

The Lithuanian president said that the most important element for Lithuania at present was to rewin control over its borders.

''At the moment there is a foreign army there. They must eventually go,'' Landsbergis concluded.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Pennsylvania's abortion law moved closer today to becoming a test case for a U-S Supreme Court review of the 1973 Roe-versus-Wade abortion ruling. A federal judge in Reading, Pennsylvania, today declared the state's law unconstitutional. The law... regarded as toughest in the nation... imposed a 24-hour waiting period before women can obtain an abortion. The measure also required wives to notify their husbands of their intent to get an abortion.

South Africa today announced a crackdown on strife-town black townships by imposing emergency laws on the hardest-hit areas, giving police sweeping powers of arrest. Officials say 27 black townships near Johnnesburg are affected by the emergency laws. More than 500 people have been killed and 15-hundred people injured in 12 days of violence between rival black factions.

Only about half of OPEC's 13 ministers signed up for an emergency weekend meeting in Vienna- a sign the cartel is deeply divided over the Persian Gulf crisis. Only six or seven OPEC minister plan to attend. The cartel canNOT make decisions on output quotas unless all members are present. Saudi Arabia wants OPEC to raise quotas to compensate for the four-Million barrels lost world-wide by the U-N trade embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude oil.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - The battleship USS Wisconsin steamed into the Persian Gulf Friday, increasing American firepower in the area, and the U.S. Central Command prepared to move its headquarters from Florida to Saudi Arabia.

The Wisconsin, with its nine 16-inch guns and 32 Tomahawk cruise missiles, can hit targets far inland. Its arrival raised the number of U.S. warships in the gulf to 10, including guided-missile frigates, cruisers and destroyers.

The Tomahawk missiles have a range of more than 1,500 miles and, if fired near the Iraqi coast, could hit any target in Iraq. The missiles can carry high-explosive conventional warheads or nuclear warheads.

The United States also has three aircraft carriers in the region, each carrying about 70 to 80 fighters and attack planes.

A fourth carrier, the USS John F. Kennedy, was in the Atlantic Ocean Friday and headed to the Mediterranean Sea.

The carrier USS Independence and its escort ships were in the Gulf of Oman near the mouth of the Persian Gulf, while the carrier USS Saratoga and its escorts were in the Red Sea, off the western coast of Saudi Arabia.

The carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, which had been in the Red Sea, was transiting the Suez Canal and headed toward the Mediterranean Friday.

Overall, the United States has about 40 warships and up to 240 carrier-based aircraft in the Middle East.

The U.S. Central Command - which is responsible for the Persian Gulf region and Operation Desert Shield - was preparing to move its headquarters from MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., to Saudi Arabia, U.S. officials said.

Also moving will be Army Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander-in-chief of the Central Command.

The United States is believed to have more than 45,000 troops on the ground in Saudi Arabia. A total of more than 100,000 troops are expected to be sent in the operation, aimed at detering an Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia.

U.S. officials in Saudi Arabia, according to a press pool report distributed at the Pentagon, said American military intelligence does not indicate that Iraq has moved Soviet-built Scud missiles into Kuwait, despite a news report to the contrary.

Iraq has 36 Scud-B launchers and has modified the weapon so that the missiles have a maximum range of more than 300 miles, but are believed to be inaccurate at that distance.

CINCINNATI (AUG. 24) UPI - An Ohio law requiring doctors to notify the parents of unmarried minors seeking abortions, upheld by the Supreme Court two months ago, is expected to take effect in about three weeks, officials said.

In a procedural move Thursday, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals formally vacated its 1988 ruling overturning the law.

The case now goes to U.S. District Judge Ann Aldrich in Cleveland, who first issued an injunction against the law in 1986. Once she removes the injunction, the law goes into effect.

Aldrich was to receive a copy of the ruling Friday, but she cannot act on it for three weeks, the period set for challenges to Thursday's ruling. Court officials said such a challenge was unlikely, since the appeals court was simply following instructions from the U.S. Supreme Court.

Rita Eppler, the assistant attorney general who successfully argued Ohio's case before the nation's high court, said she expected Aldrich to act quickly once the waiting period ends.

''There is not a whole lot of room for interpretation,'' Eppler said. ''The Supreme Court has spoken. The only thing left to do is to remove the injunction.''

The law, passed in November 1985, requires doctors performing abortions on unmarried minors to notify at least one parent or guardian 24 hours before the operation. The law allows a judicial bypass, in which the girl afraid of her parents' reaction can ask a judge to permit her to have the abortion without notifying her parents.

Those who favor the law say it will lead to better family communications and protect the health of minors by making sure someone is alert to possible post-abortion complications. They also note a minor may not have even routine medical or dental procedures performed without parental permission.

Opponents say the real purpose of such a law is to make abortions harder to obtain.

Since June 25, when the Supreme Court upheld the Ohio law on a 6-3 vote, forms for use by minors wishing to use the judicial bypass procedure have been distributed to court officials around the state.

Carole Rogers, a spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood Federation of Ohio, said some clinics have already been demanding minors involve their parents before performing an abortion, while others have been training people to help minors use the court bypass process.

VIENNA (AUG. 24) UPI - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim said Friday he hopes to win the release of Austrians and other foreigners trapped in Iraq and Kuwait during a weekend visit to Baghdad, but his government conceded the one-man humanitarian mission posed a ''very great risk.''

Waldheim arrived in Amman late Friday for talks with Jordan's King Hussein and was expected to travel to Baghdad on Saturday, the Austrian news agency APA reported from Amman.

The former U.N. secretary-general is expected to become the first Western leader to meet with Iraqi President Saddem Hussein since the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

''If no risks are taken nothing can be won,'' Waldheim said Friday before boarding a plane for Jordan. ''The fate of human beings is in question here, and I believe it is worth the risk.''

Waldheim announced on Thursday he planned to travel to the Middle East on a personal ''humanitarian mission.'' In comments Friday, he said he hoped to obtain the release of more than 100 Austrian citizens as well as other foreigners trapped in Kuwait and Iraq for more than three weeks.

The Austrian leader said he became acquainted with Hussein while serving as U.N. general-secretary, and he hoped to take advantage of this personal relationship to persuade the Iraqi leader to allow all foreigners to leave the country.

His decision drew fire Friday in the Austrian news media as commentators argued Waldheim's visit could be exploited by Iraq for propaganda purposes.

''Federal President Kurt Waldheim is taking on the greatest risk of his time in office, and perhaps his entire career,'' said the Vienna daily Kurier. It said Waldheim's individual action represented a break in solidarity with the United States and the rest of Europe in confronting the dictator.

If Waldheim obtained anything less than the unconditional release of hostages - an unlikely outcome - his visit would be a ''catastrophe,'' the Kurier said.

Austria's Socialist government said it supported Waldheim's mission to the Middle East, although Foreign Minister Alois Mock described the visit as ''a very great risk.''

A Foreign Ministry spokeamsn said the visit had no bearing on Austria's decision to honor U.N.-mandated trade sanctions against Iraq and Kuwait. He said Vienna also would continue to operate its embassy in Kuwait in defiance of Baghdad's order for the closure of all foreign missions in Kuwait City.

Permanently neutral Austria has not sent its own military personnel or equipment to the Persian Gulf, but has granted the United States fly-over rights to transport military aircraft through Austrian airspace.

Waldheim, whose role as president is mostly symbolic, has been shunned by most Western governments since his election as president because of revelations about his past as an intelligence officer in the German army during World War II.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - An outspoken critic of genetic engineering asked the government Friday to suspend consideration of all products made through gene-splicing techniques, claiming they may pose a public health danger.

Jeremy Rifkin of The Foundation for Economic Trends petitioned the Food and Drug Administration, citing a possible association between genetically engineered bacteria and a sometimes fatal blood disorder linked to the food supplement L-tryptophan.

"The middle course here is suspend review on any new products," Rifkin said. "It's the first time that a genetically engineered product of any kind has been linked to the death of people."

FDA spokesman Jeff Nesbit said the agency had 180 days to respond to the petition. But he noted the agency had not yet concluded its investigation into L-tryptophan.

The FDA in March recalled nearly all products containing L-tryptophan after the food supplement was linked to a disorder called eosinophilia-myalgia syndrome or EMS.

EMS can cause pain, fatigue, breathing problems and, in severe cases, heart failure and death. More than 1,500 cases of EMS have been reported in the United States, including 27 deaths.

L-tryptophan is a naturally occurring amino acid that has been long available over the counter for a variety of purposes, including alleviating insomnia and premenstrual syndrome.

Minnesota researchers reported Aug. 9 in The New England Journal of Medicine that the EMS outbreak appeared to have been caused by a chemical contaminant in L-tryptophan made by one company - Showa Denko K.K. of Tokyo.

The unidentified contaminant appeared to have been introduced by a 1988 change in the company's manufacturing process, including the use of a new strain of bacterium called "strain V."

"Strain V" was altered through genetic engineering techniques to produce greater quantities of L-tryptophan, suggesting the changes made to the organism's genetic makeup could have inadvertently produced the contamination, Rifkin said.

Rifkin called for the FDA to disclose the content of its L-tryptophan investigation and inform the public of all products made through genetic engineering techniques.

Genetic engineering or recombinant DNA technology involves altering an organism's genetic blueprint by inserting, deleting or changing genes. The technique has become commonly used to make bacteria that produce drugs or other substances in large amounts.

But Dr. Gerald Gleich of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., one of the authors of the Aug. 9 report, said the company had also reduced the amount of charcoal it used for purification. The contamination could have been caused by the new bacteria, the reduced charcoal, or a combination of the two, Gleich said. "One must be cautious in ascribing this to recombinant DNA technology gone awry," he said.

LANSING, Mich. (AUG. 24) UPI - A reporter's nonconfidential material gathered at a news event is not considered privileged information covered under the First Amendment and can be subpoenaed for use in court, an appeals court ruled.

The 2-1 decision Thursday by the Michigan Court of Appeals supported an insurance company's demand that it be allowed to obtain unpublished photographs of a fire taken by a photographer for the Ann Arbor News.

The insurer, American Employers Insurance Co., subpoenaed the photos in its defense in a civil case in which it sought to prove that arson was the cause of the 1986 fire at Mark Video Enterprises Inc.

Jonathon Rowe, attorney for Booth Newspapers, the parent company of the Ann Arbor News, argued that the First Amendment allows the paper to withhold the pictures unless the insurance company demonstrated a compelling need and that similar materials were unavailable.

He cited a New York Court of Appeals ruling that a news agency need not serve as a private information-gathering arm of private litigants, otherwise the press would be subjected to widespread discovery efforts.

Judges Richard Griffin and Elizabeth Weaver, however, said they did not believe that turning over nonconfidential material would inhibit news gathering abilities.

''In this regard, Booth relies upon a bald, self-serving conclusion, which is totally unsupported by any documentary evidence or empirical data,'' their ruling said. Civil rules of discovery offer enough protection to prevent the abuses cited by the newspaper's lawyers, the court said.

Dissenting Judge John Shepherd said the case involves private litigants intruding on press operations.

''I believe that even where the information sought is not confidential, significant First Amendment interests are implicated,'' he said. ''Allowing civil litigants unrestricted access to information gathered by the press which has not been published would disrupt reporters' news gathering activities and divert time and resources from journalistic efforts.''

Rowe said no decision had been made on whether to appeal the ruling. He said the decision could force newspapers to routinely destroy unused information and photographs to avoid subpoena situations.

''It really does change the function from neutral observers to adjuncts of civil litigants,'' Rowe said.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Most of the American workers from the U-S Embassy in Kuwait arrived today in Baghdad, where they expected to leave Iraq under the protection of diplomatic immunity. But a report says the group was told that they would be forced to remain in Iraq until Washington agrees to pull its remaining Embassy staff from Kuwait. In Kennebunkport, Maine, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater confirmed the presence of Iraqi troops around the U-S Embassy in Kuwait, where less than 10 Americans are believed to have remained. Fitzwater says the Iraqi troops ''have NOT made any moves on the Embassy or intruded in any fashion.''

The stage is being set for an almost certain appeal to the U-S Supreme Court for a review of the 1973 high court decision that legalized abortion. A federal judge today declared Pennsylvania's abortion law unconstitutional. The measure... viewed as the toughest in the nation... imposed a 24-hour waiting period before women can get an abortion... and required that wives notify their husbands before undergoing the procedure.

A spokesman for Pennsylvania Governor Robert Casey says the opinion is still being read, but an appeal to the nation's highest court is likely. A Democrat running for re-election, Casey signed the bill into law last November. The campaign manager for Casey's Republican opponent, Auditor General Barbara Hafer, says she ''would have vetoed the bill'' if she had been governor.

Nelson Mandela describes as ''totally useless'' a South African crackdown on black violence announced today. The African National Congress leader attacked the government move after an hour-long meeting today with President Frederik de Klerk. The white-minority government earlier imposed emergency laws in areas ravaged by factional black violence, giving police sweeping powers.

PORTAGE, OH (AUG. 24) UPI - An explosion at a gasoline distribution facility Friday critically burned a worker inside a 10,000-gallon tank and blew a section of the tank's roof across a highway.

A worker inside the tank emerged on fire but the flames were extinguished by co-workers from the K&M Co. of Lima. The fire inside the tank stopped once the vapors burned off.

The victim, identified by St. Vincent Medical Center as Doug Wireman, was taken to the Wood County Hospital and flown to the Toledo hospital where he was treated for burns that covered 80 percent of his body. A hospital spokeswoman said Wireman was in critical condition.

The eight tanks, owned by Keneco Distributors Inc. of Findlay, are used to distribute gasoline for the Marathon Oil Co.

''The top flew off like a flying saucer,'' said a Keneco employee who asked not to be identified.

A 12-foot-by-12 foot piece of the tank's top was blown 440 feet, shearing the top from a tree and landing next to a house along Ohio Route 25.

''It's just a freak thing. The vapor evidently just got to the point where it will explode. It doesn't take hardly anything,'' said David Haskins, Keneco's plant manager.

A witness said the victim was in flames when he emerged from the tank.

''He was burnt from head to toe. The skin on his arms was just hanging ... burned the shirt right off his body,'' said Jeannie Morris, who was visiting relatives in the area when the 11:30 a.m. explosion occurred.

''We felt the whole house shake,'' said Walt Flood, whose home lies down the street from the storage facility.

Keneco owner Ken Beilharz said the company hired a firm that was ''supposed to be experts'' in cleaning gasoline tanks. He said the company was cleaning the tanks in preparation for installing a coating to prevent leaks.

MIAMI (AUG. 24) UPI - A Coast Guard radar plane returning from a patrol for drug smugglers caught fire and crashed early Friday near a U.S. naval station in Puerto Rico, killing all four men aboard.

They were the first deaths for the Coast Guard since it began drug-smuggling interdiction work.

The E-2C Hawkeye, a twin-engine turboprop radar aircraft, crashed about 500 yards of the runway at Roosevelt Roads Naval Station at 12:21 a.m., said Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Karonis, a Coast Guard spokesman in Miami.

The naval station is in a remote area on the east coast of Puerto Rico.

The identities of the victims, who were based in St. Augustine, Fla., were withheld until relatives were notified.

The crew was coming in for a landing after completing its patrol and reported to military air traffic controllers that there was a fire aboard the aircraft, Karonis said. The crew also reported hydraulic problems.

''These are the first deaths that we've had in the drug war - since we've actively pursued drug interdiction in the early 1970s,'' Karonis said.

Chief Petty Officer Luis Diaz, also a Coast Guard spokesman in Miami, said the plane broke apart on impact.

''It burned and scattered all over the field,'' Diaz said. ''It was really torn apart.''

Military investigators had not determined the cause of the crash, Diaz said.

''The Coast Guard is small,'' said a Coast Guard official who asked to remain anonymous. ''Everyone realy knows each other. This really hits.''

Diaz said the Coast Guard station in Miami received calls from guardsmen as far away as San Francisco and Seattle, asking for information and the names of the fatalities.

''We are a very close, small service - like a family,'' Diaz said.

The Coast Guard uses four Hawkeyes, on loan from the Navy since 1987, to search for drug smugglers, Karonis said. If a suspected aircraft is spotted, the Hawkeye crew notifies the U.S. Customs Service or the Coast Guard to dispatch a plane to intercept the suspects.

All Coast Guard Hawkeyes, built by Grumman Corp., are based at the agency's air station at St. Augustine.

The E-2C is equipped with a 24-foot diameter rotating radar dome on top that allows the Coast Guard to survey nearly 3 million cubic miles of surrounding air space at sea, while monitoring 150,000 square miles of ocean surface.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - The Navy said Friday it has made arrangements to get letters to sailors from anyone to wants to drop them a morale-boosting letter, a program over and above regular mail service.

A spokesman said that letters addressed "Any Serviceman" and sent to a special fleet post office number would be sent in bulk to the aircraft carriers in the region and then divided up amongst the ships in the area. The letters will be delivered to servicemen at random by the postal operations on each ship. The mailing address is: Any Serviceman, Operation Desert Shield, FPO New York 09866-0006."

The mail must be sent first class, cannot weigh over 12 ounces and no packages of foodstuffs or other goods are permitted. Regular letters to crewmen from family and friends should be sent in the normal fashion, the spokesman said. The Army earlier this week set up special APO numbers to speed the delivery of mail to soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

Despite the new numbers, items addressed to soldiers' home stations will be sent on to Saudi Arabia but could be delayed. Generally, it will take about ten days for a letter to reach Saudi Arabia from the United States, the Army said.

There are some temporary restrictions on mail to aid delivery. The major limit is that personal mail is limited to first class, but can be up to 12 ounces and include audio cassettes. Local Postal Service offices can provide details on other restrictions. The numbers, units and military postal abbreviations:

101st ABN Div (AA) 09309

11th ADA BDE 09656

Soldiers and correspondents should address letters this way:

MIAMI (AUG. 24) UPI - The eighth tropical depression of the 1990 Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season formed Friday about 875 miles east of the island of Barbados in the Lesser Antilles, forecasters said.

At noon EDT, the depression was centered near latitude 13 north and longitude 46.7 west, said the National Hurricane Center.

The depression was moving west-northwest at near 10 mph and that motion was expected to continue for the next 24 hours, forecasters said.

Maximum sustained winds were near 35 mph, or 4 mph shy of tropical storm strength, and forecasters said the system could strengthen.

''We think there is a potenital for that to happen. We're not real confident, but this is the time and the place for it,'' said Miles Lawrence, a forecaster at the hurricane center.

If the depression reaches tropical storm strength it will be named Gustav.

OTTAWA (AUG. 24) UPI - Chiefs of the Six Nation Iroquois Confederacy prepared Friday to meet to discuss the growing power of the militant Warrior Society, which reportedly has used funds from gambling and weapons sales to support its drive for power.

Leon Shenandoah, chief of the Onandaga Nation, one of six tribal nations within the Iroquois Confederacy, said in an interview Friday that about 50 chiefs will meet Saturday out of concern about the Warrior Society's reported intention to replace traditional governing bodies on some of the Canadian reserves, including Kahnawake at Montreal, Kanesatake at Oka, Quebec and Akwesasne near Cornwall, Ontario.

Shenandoah said the course the Warrior Society is setting - including what he said was support for illegal gambling and drugs - has caused a loss of spirituality among the Iroquois nations and led to bitter internal strife on several reserves.

''They're after bingo. They're not concerned about the health of Mohawks '' he said.

The Canadian government recently offered an even harsher picture of the Warriors, describing its members as criminals who were armed with Russian Kalashnikovs, Uzi machine guns, M-16 military rifles and even Chinese guns.

The Warrior Society is made up mostly of Indians who served in Vietnam or who have recent experience as U.S. Marines, said Harry Swain, deputy minister of the Canada's Department of Indian Affairs.

The society is active in both Canada and the United States.

Swain said illegal smuggling of cigarettes from the United States into Canada provided most of the Warriors' cash, supplemented with revenues from illegal gambling and the sale of weapons to Canadian Indian reserves.

Shenandoah said chiefs of the Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga, Seneca and Tuscarora nations would meet on the Onondaga reserve near Syracuse, New York, to discuss the problem. However, he not certain the chiefs will find any solutions to ward off the inroads.

The Warriors ''got stronger and stronger because of the money,'' Shenandoah said. They got into cigarettes, bringing in liquor, illegal drugs. They were making millions (of dollars).''

At Akwesasne, Warriors won a bitter struggle against traditional Mohawks to maintain lucrative casino gambling on the U.S. side of the reserve.

At Oka, Quebec, where Mohawks are involved in a bitter dispute over a proposed golf course expansion on lands they claim are ancient burial grounds, members of the Warrior Society appear to have taken over negotiations with the Quebec and federal governments, according to Shenandoah.

The Warrior Society also blockaded the Mercier Bridge leading to Montreal and have insisted on maintaining roadblocks in the area even though more moderate Mohawks want them dismantled.

''If the government negotiates with the Warriors, it will make them even stronger,'' Shenandoah said.

Problems with the Warrior Society have been complicated by the confusing state of leadership within some of the Iroquois nations. In the Mohawk nation, the fight for leadership is between the Warrior Society and traditionalists in the so-called Longhouse, an organization that includes chiefs, clan mothers and natives dedicated to traditional ways.

At the Oka reserve, powerful clan mothers replaced the chief 22 times in 1988, making land negotiations extremely difficult.

Shenandoah doubts whether the leadership question can be resolved peacefully. He said the U.S. government failed to arrest the group's illegal activities perhaps because they felt the natives would be easier to control if they were weakened by internal strife.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - As the clock ran out Friday on the Iraqi deadline for closing embassies in Kuwait, the man on the spot for the United States was Ambassador Nathaniel Howell, a 50-year-old veteran of Middle East trouble spots.

Howell and about 10 other American diplomats were hanging on in Kuwait under orders to keep the flag flying over the embassy and to try to keep in touch with an estimated 2,500 Americans believed still in the Iraqi-occupied nation.

About a dozen Iraqi soldiers were outside the embassy, according to the State Department, and an embassy vehicle had been rolled across the gate, preventing anybody from going in. Only one man - a non-diplomat - was permitted to leave Friday. Food and water was reported to be in adequate supply.

Howell, a native of Virginia who speaks Arabic and French, waved goodbye to his wife, Margie, and more than 100 other Americans Thursday at the Iraqi border. The convoy of about 30 cars arrived Friday in Baghdad after a 19-hour journey marked by mechanical breakdowns and long waits at checkpoints.

Howell returned to Kuwait, with its sporadic telephone service - known to be tapped by Iraqis trying to locate Americans - and streets heavily patrolled by Iraqi troops.

The embassy set up a code system to communicate with the Americans without tipping off the Iraqis.

A career diplomat, Howell is a highly regarded specialist in Arabian affairs, having served in Cairo, Beirut and in Washington, where he was a special assistant in the State Department's Bureau of Near East and South Asian Affairs.

A burly, graying man with a close-cropped beard, Howell is regarded by his colleagues as one of the intellectuals of the foreign service. One colleague recalled that Howell was co-author of a prize-winning essay on strategy when he was a student at the National War College.

He also was given the State Department's Award for Valor for his work in Beirut, keeping in touch with the situation and Americans in Lebanon despite the civil war that was raging through the country.

Howell, who has served almost exactly three years as ambassador to Kuwait, was given full authority by the State Department to make decisions on the spot, including deciding who would remain behind with him.

The only other American in Kuwait identified by the department was William Colwell, the chief consular officer.

The U.S. Embassy compound in Kuwait also sheltered about 10 other U.S. diplomats, plus an unknown number of American civilians who have taken refuge there. The department refused to give any exact numbers in order to deny the Iraqis information they might not have.

Officials had the embassy's U.S. Marine guards leave Kuwait after deciding against a military defense of the embassy, opting instead to reduce the number of potential hostages.

In Kennebunkport, Maine, where President Bush is on vacation, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, ''The United States will maintain its embassy in Kuwait with a small staff, headed by Ambassador Howell, to look after the interests of the American community there and as a symbol of our rejection of Iraq's illegal occupation and annexation of Kuwait.''

He added, ''We call upon Iraq to observe international agreements protecting the activities and persons of diplomatic establishments in Kuwait.''

Iraq had warned that the staff of embassies remaining open would lose their diplomatic immunity after Friday and would be treated as ''normal citizens.''

Fitzwater, asked Friday if the United States would retaliate against Iraqi diplomats in the United States, said, ''No, it would not be appropriate.''

CINCINNATI (AUG. 24) UPI - Cincinnati first baseman-outfielder Ken Griffey, the last vestige of the 1970s Big Red Machine, was made available Friday to other teams that might want to claim him on waivers.

''At Ken Griffey's request, the Cincinnati Reds today asked irrevocable waivers for the purpose of granting him his unconditional release,'' said the team's general manager, Bob Quinn. ''This procedure will allow Griffey the option of pursuing alternative baseball opportunities if he so wishes.''

Griffey, 40, announced his retirement last Saturday. Under baseball rules, retired players are not eligible to end their retirement and play for another team for at least 60 days after retiring.

''We're basically giving him permission to unretire and making him available to other teams if they want to take him on waivers,'' said a Reds spokesman.

PRETORIA, South Africa (AUG. 24) UPI - The government imposed sweeping emergency regulations Friday in black townships where nearly two weeks of factional fighting has left more than 500 dead, handing police almost unlimited powers to arrest, detain and disarm the warring factions.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela immediately attacked the measures as ''totally useless'' and taken without consultation with the rival groups. He also warned that the broad powers given to police could lead to human-rights abuses and were tantamount to declaring a state of emergency in the areas.

Mandela, whose supporters have been locked in battle with migrant Zulus aligned with the rival Zulu movement Inkatha, met President Frederik de Klerk for an hour after the new regulations were announced. Despite the government's action, he said peace talks between the ANC and the minority white government remained on track.

De Klerk said in a dialogue with supporters of his ruling National Party on a pay television channel Friday that the emergency powers were to be ''short term'' and ''limited.'' But he said if they proved insufficient, they would be supplemented.

''We will not allow anarchy,'' de Klerk said, stressing the violence was black-on-black and not aimed at the state. ''We will try with every means at our disposal impartially to impose law and order.''

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok declared 19 magisterial districts encompassing 27 black townships, including the sprawling black city of Soweto, as ''unrest areas'' under the rarely used Public Safety Act of 1953.

He also invoked the Dangerous Weapons Act of 1968 to allow police to disarm the warring factions of 33 specified weapons ranging from spears and metal pipes, to pitchforks, screwdrivers, hammers, bricks and crossbows.

Police units backed by army troops will be ''drastically increased,'' Vlok said. A military spokesman confirmed Friday the army has mobilized reserve troops to help put down the fighting, ostensibly between Zulus living in hostels and permanent residents.

''Measures additional to the ordinary law of the land are necessary to enable the government to ensure the safety of the public and the maintenance of public order,'' Vlok said in a notice published in the official Government Gazette Friday.

He acknowledged at a news conference the imposition of the powers ''could be harmful to the image of the country'' but said the violence that has left more than 500 dead and 1,500 hurt in 12 days must stop.

''It is in the interest of South Africa that all its inhabitants that further bloodshed, disorder and chaos be prevented at all costs,'' he said.

It was unclear what effect the regulations would have on a worker and student boycott called for Monday by the ANC-linked Soweto Civic Association to coincide with a mass funeral for 11 residents killed in the carnage in Soweto, a city of 2 million southwest of Johannesburg.

The regulations are similar to those of a four-year nationwide state of emergency that was imposed in June 1986 to put down bloody anti-government rioting. That emergency was lifted in June this year, except in Natal province, the flashpoint of the protracted ANC-Inkatha conflict, which has now spilled into urban black areas surrounding Johannesburg.

Police are given special powers to forcibly disperse any groups ignoring orders to leave the area peacefully and to arrest and detain citizens without trial for at least 30 days but not longer than the 90 days. The regulations remain in force unless the regulations are extended.

Security forces may also search anywhere in the ''unrest areas'' without warrant, seal off the area, shut down businesses and take over essential services, impose curfews and place restrictions on any funerals or other gatherings.

National Police Commissioner Gen. Johan van der Merwe said the restrictions would not appy to the media, although the regulations clearly empower police to prevent access to areas of conflict.

Mandela said the new measures were not raised during his talks with de Klerk Friday in a meeting that focused on progress toward power-sharing negotiations between the white government and the black majority. But he told reporters after the talks the measures were unnecessary.

''It's totally useless,'' Mandela said. ''We have suggested a simple solution to the government as to how to resolve the whole question of violence.''

''The pattern has been very clear that the trouble comes from the (Zulu) hostels,'' Mandela said. ''What is necessary is that the police should monitor the hostels to prevent armed men from leaving the hostels and also to prevent residents from harassing hostel dwellers.''

MIAMI (AUG. 24) UPI - The Italian cruise operator Costa Crociere S.p.A. will form a new company, bring more ships to south Florida and expand staff to coordinate expansion plans for the North American market, a spokeswoman said Friday.

The Genoa-based company said Costa Cruise Lines N.V. will take the place Costa Cruises Inc., the company's marketing and sales arm in south Florida starting Nov. 1.

"This is an effort for us to have more control over what we do in this market," said spokeswoman Jennifer Lawrence. "Previously, as Costa Cruises we were the marketing and sales (arm) for Costa Crociere."

Lorenzo Pellicioli, chief executive officer of Manzoni S.p.A. in Milan, Italy, has been hired to head the new company. Bernal Quiros resigned as president of Costa Cruises to pursue other business interests, the company said.

The company said it was "dramatically enhancing" the size of its Miami staffin connection with the restructuring but provided no specifics. Lawrence said the company currently employs 125 people at its Miami headquarters.

Costa Crociere offers Caribbean cruises aboard two ships based in Port Everglades, Fla., and San Juan, Puerto Rico, and handles Caribbean and Alaska cruises with a third ship. A fourth is scheduled to arrive from Italy in December for the winter season, Lawrence said.

The company operates three other cruise ships from ports in Italy and has announced plans to build three additional liners. Each of those ships will be based in either Miami or Port Everglades, Lawrence said.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AUG. 24) UPI - Pro-Iranian Moslem extremists in Lebanon Friday freed Irish hostage Brian Keenan after more than four years in captivity, Moslem sources and Iran's official news agency said.

''Irish hostage Brian Keenan has just been set free in Lebanon,'' the Islamic Republic News Agency said in a brief dispatch from Beirut. ''Well-informed sources told IRNA in Beirut that Keenan was freed at 9 p.m. (2 p.m. EDT) local time.''

Keenan, an Irishman who also holds Britih citizenship, has been held in war-torn Lebanon since his abduction April 11, 1986, in Moslem west Beirut. He taught English at the American University of Beirut.

No group claimed responsibility for his abduction, but it is believed he was grabbed by Iranian-linked Shiite Moslem fundamentalists. Observers in Beirut said they expected the kidnappers to issue a statement as they usually do announcing the release of Keenan.

Shortly after the IRNA report, a Moslem militia source close to the Syrians told United Press International that Keenan was on his way to Syria.

The source, who requested anonymity, said Keenan was handed over to the Syrians at somewhere in Lebanon. The Syrians could not confirm the report.

Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Mahmoud Waezi was quoted by Iran's English-language newspaper Tehran Times Friday as saying Keenan's release was the result of several months of efforts by Iranian officials and Islamic groups in Lebanon. He thanked these groups ''who once more showed their goodwill toward the West.''

''We expect that the West will take similar steps for the freedom of Lebanese prisoners and Iranian hostages,'' Waezi said, ''such a move will make our efforts for the freedom of hostages easier.''

Syrian security sources had said earlier Keenan might be whisked to Damascus for a formal delivery to Irish diplomats.

''There have been intensive contacts involving Iranian, Irish and Syrian officials since yesterday,'' said one security source who requested anonymity.

Moslem fundamentalist sources said the possibility of paying a ransom to the kidnappers, who are believed linked to Iran, also was part of the clandestine diplomacy.

''I'm afraid we have no comment on all these reports,'' a British Embassy spokesman said by telephone before IRNA's claim Keenan had been released.

Reports that Keenan might be freed began to circulate Thursday from Iran. Similar reports about Keenan's possible release circulated in July without result.

An employee at the Irish Consulate in Beirut said by telephone, ''Nothing new, but we are still waiting. We hope that this time the news comes true.''

In Dublin, Keenan's sister Elaine Spence said, ''We are taking it mildly this time. We are still wary.''

Irish Foreign Minister Gerry Collins said he was ''cautiously hopeful,'' while Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey said ''there are good and positive signs'' Keenan would be released.

A spokeswoman for the Irish Foreign Office confirmed Declan Connelly, an Irish envoy, was in Damascus, Syria, in what officials described as a normal procedure.

Thirteen Westerners, six of them Americans, are still held by various extremist groups in Lebanon.

Demands by the kidnappers have included freedom for more than 350 Palestinians detained in Israel and the release of more than a dozen Arabs convicted in Kuwait of bombing various Western targets. The convicts' status is not clear since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the ouster of the emirate's government.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AUG. 24) UPI - Sudanese rebel radio said Friday its forces would allow immediate resumption of food shipments through the south of the country, potentially helping to avert the levels of famine of the late '80s.

Food-aid shipments bearing U.N. flags would be escorted by rebels through beginning Saturday, according to broadcasts by the clandestine radio station of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army, monitored in Nairobi.

One International Red Cross official, who asked not to be identified, said he understood a trainload of food provided by the U.N.'s Operation Lifeline Sudan had in fact already left Babanusa for the south.

The food will travel into northern Sudan up the river Nile by barge and south along a railway line not used since 1989.

The predominantly black, Christian SPLA rebels, who control much of southern Sudan, began a civil war against Islamic domination by the north in 1983.

''The SPLA wishes to assure the Sudanese people and the international community that the move (to allow food shipments) has been taken purely on humanitarian grounds,'' the radio affirmed.

The Red Cross official welcomed news of food shipments, but was unable to confirm the SPLA announcement.

''I'm quite surprised, but that would be very good news,'' he said.

An estimated 300,000 people died of hunger in southern Sudan between 1986 and 1989, with war-related transport problems viewed as a key reason for such large casualties. At its height, the death rate in food camps reportedly was four times greater than in neighboring Ethiopia's catastrophic 1984-5 famine.

Over the past year, irregular air supplies of food, medical equipment and seeds have been reaching afflicted regions of Sudan. No accurate estimates of the number of people potentially in distress have yet emerged, according to Western aid officials.

The rebels approved a U.N. proposal to ship food by barge from the government-held town of Kosti, 180 miles south of the capital, Khartoum, to Malakal, 260 miles further south up the White Nile, the radio said.

Train shipments from Babanusa, 450 miles southwest of Khartoum, to Aweil, 170 miles further south, would also be allowed to resume, rebel radio said.

Trains in 1989 carried up to 144,000 tons of food at a time, but were dogged by misadventure. Rebel hijackings, kidnapping, government interference, mechanical breakdowns and a lack of track maintenance resulted in only about five trains getting through.

The White Nile, over which many of the food shipments will travel, is among major transport arteries through the desert into southern Sudan.

The SPLA has controlled much of its upper reaches since it pushed government troops out of the key garrison of Melout, 370 miles south of Khartoum in May.

STRATFORD, CT (AUG. 24) UPI - Sikorsky Aircraft executives said Friday they were disappointed over Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's reduction of the $42 billion Light Helicopter program - but grateful he did not eliminate it.

"We are pleased to note that Secretary Cheney recognizes that the Light Helicopter is essential to the U.S. Army's future war-fighting capabilities,"said Sikorsky spokesman Foster Morgan.

He said Sikorsky and its partner in the project, Boeing Vertol, "were prepared to respond" to the extension of the demonstration phase of the contract for two years but would not comment on the economic effect of the slowdown.

Morgan said, "It would be too speculative at this time to comment on any effects this decision might have on Light Helicopter pricing or on future employment levels."

Cheney said he will slash production of the helicopters by nearly 40 percent, cutting a planned output over the next decade of 2,096 helicopters, to 1,292 helicopters, in order to save an estimated $7.8 billion. Reducing the size of the program to 1,292 helicopters represents "the minimum requirement for light helicopters in the force structure," Cheney said.

While cutting the total size of the purchase by 804 helicopters would reduce procurement costs by $8 billion, the extended development program will add $200 million to total research and development costs, resulting in net savings of $7.8 billion, the Pentagon said.

Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman, D-Conn., said Cheney's decision was "good news for Connecticut and Sikorsky and its workers and their families." Despite a reduction, "It is important to focus on the fact that over 1,200 Light Helicopters will be built with a Connecticut workforce."

"I also understand that if the needs of the Army increase, Secretary Cheney said the number of helicopters to be produced in Connecticut could be increased to 1,681.

Cheney said, "Helicopters must be versatile, with the ability to self-deploy to hot spots. These are all attributes of the LH not found in the current helicopter fleet."

The nation's four helicopter companies have formed two teams that are seeking the lucrative LH contract, pitting McDonnell Douglas Helicopters and Bell Helicopter Textron against Boeing Vertol and Sikorsky, which is a subsidiary of United Technologies Corp. in Hartford.

McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. of Mesa, Ariz., is a subsidiary of McDonnell Douglas Corp., St. Louis. Its partner, Bell Helicopter Textron Inc., of Fort Worth, Texas, is a subsidiary of Textron Inc., Providence, R.I. Boeing Vertol is a subsidiary of The Boeing Co., of Seattle.

HOUSTON (AUG. 24) UPI - A refinery accident Friday spewed a cloud of fine chemical dust into the air, injuring two workers, in the second accident in as many days at Houston Ship Channel petrochemical facilities.

The accident at the Lyondell Petrochemical Co. refinery Friday occurred about 27 hours after an explosion and fire rocked part of a Shell Oil Co. refinery, injuring three men. Both facilities are located along the Houston Ship Channel, home of the largest concentration of petrochemical plants and refineries in the nation.

"At 12 noon, Lyondell experienced an upset in the fluid catalytic cracker at the Houston refinery," said Lyondell spokesman R.C. Lumpkin. "This has resulted in a release of catalyst dust which appears to be smoke.

"The catalyst release is a fine powder material and poses no threat outside the refinery. No fire was associated with this release." The dust, described as a clay-like powder, was not toxic, he said.

The workers suffered minor injuries, apparently as they tried to flee the chemical cloud. They were treated at a refinery medical facility and released, Lumpkin said.

The accident occurred in a unit that converts heavy oil to gasoline. The unit, with a production capacity of 90,000 barrels a day, was shut down until officials can determine the cause of the accident and the extent of damage, said Lyondell spokesman W. Greg Dunleavy.

"Only the fluid catalytic cracking unit has been brought down," Dunleavy said. "The unit was operating normally (prior to the accident). We have not been able to get in the unit and cannot make an estimate (of damage)." The refinery, located about eight miles east-southeast of Houston, has a production capacity of 265,000 barrels a day.

Officials Friday also were trying to determine the cause of the Shell explosion and fire, which occurred in an oil distillation unit. One worker was hospitalized with burns, and two others suffered minor injuries in the Thursday accident.

The blast occurred about 20 minutes after naphtha began leaking from a ruptured line on the distillation unit near the center of the 1,500-acre petrochemical plant.

A crew was performing maintenance on the unit when the accident occurred, officials said. The firefighters let the blaze, fed by the naphtha, burn itself out. The fire was finally extinguished about ten hours after it began.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - Kuwait's ambassador to the United States, Sheikh Saud Nasir al-Sabah, says his country's resistance to the Iraqi invasion is increasing and is now able ''to make life miserable of the Iraqi army.''

But that resistance, he said, is also paying a cost in lives.

Al-Sabah, a member of the Kuwaiti ruling family that is now in exile in Saudi Arabia, spoke in an interview with United Press International this week in the spacious living quarters of the Kuwait Embassy in Washington.

Sipping sweetened tea and smoking a small cigar, he apologized for appearing in what he called his ''household robe,'' a long, white silken robe with a high collar.

Normally he is seen in impeccable London-tailored suits and white-collared shirts. Bags under his eyes and occasional breaks in his voice testified to his three hours of sleep per night and an almost unbroken series of meetings, interviews and conferences at the Pentagon, the White House and the State Department.

He said many young Kuwaitis, who had been out of the country when the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion took place, are being infiltrated back into the country to lead the resistance which, he said, ''is beginning to make life miserable for the Iraqi army.''

The resistance, he said, includes nighttime snipers and, two days ago, a woman who drove a suicide car-bomb into an Iraqi military headquarters.

It also includes, he said, ''kids who make graffiti during the night.''

''Unfortunately,'' he said, ''The Iraqis caught four of them two days ago and shot them, killed them. These are brutal people.''

Kuwait women, he said, are demonstrating and this week Iraqi forces opened fire on a street demonstration, killing six women and three children.

But he believes time is on the side of the resistance, and that Saddam Hussein, the Iraqi leader, is becoming increasingly isolated in the world community, faced with a possible rebellion at home and disaffection within the military forces.

The ambassador said that Saddam has had to pull back his elite Republican Guards, who composed the main invasion force, and replace them with untrained, undisciplined young troops ''who are just sitting there in the heat and waiting. They don't know why they are there. Iraqi morale is very very low.''

Iraqi troops, he said, used to patrol the streets at night, but snipers have put an end to that. When the sun goes down, he said, the Iraqis retire to their fortified headquarters and the streets belong to the resistance.

The Iraqi military authorities, he said, have begun to move in Iraqi civilians, who are taking over Kuwaiti homes. New military occupation identity cards are being issued to the entire population.

Al-Sabah, a handsome, balding man who has the Terry-Thomas gap in his front teeth characteristic of the ruling family, for the first time expressed doubts about his government's actions in the period before the Iraqi invasion.

The United Arab Emirates, like Kuwait a small, rich and vulnerable state that was also threatened by Iraq, chose to join with U.S. military forces in a joint training exercise in the tense period before the Iraqi assault. While Kuwait was taken over, the U.A.E. was not, and has now allowed American aircraft and troops to be based in the country.

''In hindsight,'' he said, ''Maybe we should have done what the U.A.E did.''

But, he said, ''We were given assurances by four nations that Saddam Hussein wouldn't attack. Never in our dreams did we believe Iraq would use force against us. Now this horrible nightmare has become horrible reality.''

He continues to believe that time is on the side of Kuwait, that Iraq will become increasingly isolated economically and politically, and that Saddam Hussein will be forced to pull back. But he doesn't know how that will happen.

''Whether it will be peacefully or by military means, I just don't know.''

But he is convinced that if the Iraqis decide to move against the approximately 60 foreign embassies in Kuwait city, ''That will be a clear act of war. These are going to be crucial days.''

SAN FRANCISCO (AUG. 24) UPI - To Dr. Lenore Terr, the stoic expressions of the British hostage children with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Thursday's video looked all too familiar - and frightened.

''Big-eyed, rather distant-looking, very serious and grim faces - that's typical of extreme fright,'' Terr said Friday.

The video showed Saddam trying to create a relaxed atmosphere in a meeting with clearly frightened children and adults being held as hostages against a U.S. attack in Iraq.

About 20,000 Westerners, including 3,000 Americans, have been prevented from leaving Iraq and Kuwait.

Terr is a specialist on children ''frightened beyond belief.'' Her recently published book, ''Too Scared to Cry,'' analyzed psychological damage to 27 children who survived a 1976 kidnapping in rural Chowchilla, Calif.

''Children don't lose control of their bodies'' in terror, Terr said. Instead, they gain a frightening, unnatural maturity.

The Iraqi videotape showed children in stiff body postures, seemingly devoid of childish curiosity, Terr said. She noted the tension in a small boy positioned next to Hussein. A small girl's fear also stood out in her mind: ''There was some official walking near her - she ran.''

Terr said children among the hostages held in Iraq could bear permanent psychological scars from the ordeal. She said children whose lives are overturned by terror often suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder.

First noticed in war veterans, post-traumatic stress disorder has had many names, including ''shell shock'' and ''combat fatigue.'' However, it was not clinically described until recent years.

The children in Iraq are already candidates for extreme fear, Terr said. ''There are certain events that will hit beyond anybody's threshhold,'' she said, and that includes being imprisoned by strangers and ''being told that you're human shields.'' They could also feel a sense of betrayal if Iraqi friends failed to help their families, she said.

Some children become cowering victims, others ''identify with the aggressor'' and become bullies. Many have ''specific fears of things that are very reminiscent of what was involved.'' The children may also create games that are reminders of what happened.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - The International Finance Corporation Friday said it has signed agreements for $130 million in loans to five banks in Zimbabwe for lending to export industries.

The financing for the Southern African nation consists of $65 million in loans from IFC's own account, coupled with an additional $65 million from eight European commercial banks.

The corporation identified more than $100 million in export-oriented project loans already being studied by local banks in Zimbabwe - or awaiting approval by the government - mainly in the industrial, mining and agricultural sectors.

The IFC-arranged loans will be used to help local companies finance the import of urgently needed capital equipment for the export projects. The IFC is the World Bank affiliate that supports the private sector in developing nations with loans, investments and technical advice.

BOSTON (AUG. 24) UPI - General Electric Co. said Friday it will cut 650 workers from its aerospace plant in Burlington, Mass. and shut another with 400 employees in Huntsville, Ala. by the end of next year.

GE blamed "a shrinking defense market" for its second major layoff announcement in little more than a week. Layoffs will account for most of the cuts, the company said, but some will be through retirement and other attrition and transfers to other company plants.

General Electric said about 200 Huntsville employees with certain necessary skills will be invited to relocate to its Daytona Beach, Fla. plant, more than 500 miles away. However, there will be no additional hiring at Daytona Beach, said GE spokesman Terrence Dunn. Only a small number of Burlington workers will get a similar offer to relocate to other GE operations, Dunn said.

The company said it is restructuring its automated systems department and will transfer the work currently performed in Alabama to the Daytona Beach aerospace facilities.

At the Burlington plant, GE said it expects the workforce to shrink to just 300 from the current 950 by 1992. The company said it is transferring some product lines to other GE aerospace locations that are compatible. However the company said, "These moves will not add to employment levels at the new locations."

The company said its restructuring will focus the Burlington plant "on strengthening the competitiveness of its core business - automated test equipment...." Also, the company said it plans to buy certain components now made in Burlington from outside suppliers.

Laid-off workers will receive one week's pay for each year of service with the company said Dunn. Those who transfer will get moving expenses, temporary housing, and help with closing costs when buying a new house, Dunn said.

Dunn said the cuts are due to reduced military spending by the U.S. government. "This announcement is really all about surviving in the shrinking defense business," he said.

While more layoffs are possible in the aerospace division, Dunn said, their timing and size would depend on what happens in military spending. Last week, GE's aircraft engine division disclosed plans to eliminate 1,500 jobs in Lynn, Mass. and Evendale, Ohio by the end of next year.

ORLANDO, FL (AUG. 24) UPI - The average price of a gallon of regular gasoline sold at self-service pumps nationwide rose 3.7 cents this week to its highest level since July 1982, the American Automobile Association said Friday. Altogether, gas prices have jumped 19.9 cents a gallon since Aug. 1, the day before Iraq invaded Kuwait and sent oil prices soaring on world markets.

AAA said the average price of regular gasoline nationwide rose to $1.274 by Friday, up 3.7 cents since Monday. The price was just 2.2 cents shy of the July 4, 1982 price of $1.296, the organization said. This week's rise compares with a hike of 2.1 cents last week, said Geoff Sundstrom, a spokesman for the AAA.

"We had seen prices back off a little bit last week as the president called on the oil companies to exercise restraint," Sundstrom said. "But crude oil prices have been rising this week and gas prices at the pump are now reflecting this."

Gas prices in the West were the highest in the nation, the AAA said. The average price for 11 western states was $1.359. Regional prices were the lowest in the Mid-Atlantic states, at $1.236 a gallon, AAA said. Texas had the lowest average statewide price, at $1.162 a gallon, while Hawaii showed the highest average price, at $1.486 a gallon, AAA said.

The average regional price in New England was $1.277 a gallon; in the Great Lakes, $1.289 a gallon; in the Midwest, $1.281 a gallon; in the Southeast, $1.24.9 a gallon; and in the Southwest, $1.241 a gallon, AAA said.

AAA said it based its gas price report on a survey of 5,000 stations conducted by Computer Petroleum Corp. of St. Paul, Minn.

TOULON, France (AUG. 24) UPI - Mediterranean winds Friday fanned the flames of France's worst forest fires in 26 years, killing one person and threatening several towns.

Flames up to 65 feet high roared out of control, burning more than 32,000 acres of southern France since Tuesday. A lack of rain and high winds have hampered the effort to control the flames.

A long dry spell and the steep mountain slopes has made controlling the fires difficult for the 2,000 firefighters and the airplane pilots who douse the fires by dropping gallons of water from planes.

Near the town of Cantaron, north of Nice, 1,125 acres have burned during the last two days, authorities say.

The village of Saint Guillaume in the Maure mountain range in southern France was nearly overrun by flames Thursday. Its 30 inhabitants helped firefighters fight the blaze.

Another fire destroyed 175 acres of forest Friday near the village of Mezos in the Landes department in southwest France.

Other fires started Friday in two departments near the city of Dijon, southeast of Paris. Authorities called in 120 firefighters to combat the blaze.

On Tuesday a major fire destroyed 12 villas and burned boats and automobiles in Cassis, a picturesque fishing port near Marseille that draws thousands of summer visitors.

One firefighter was killed earlier in the week and on Thursday four others were injured in an accident when their truck plummeted 66 feet into a ravine.

Authorities reported that a 500-year-old chestnut tree with a trunk 51 feet in diameter near the port city of Toulon was no expected to survive after it was badly burned.

SAVANNAH, GA. (AUG. 24) USAVANNAH, Ga. (AUG. 24) UPI - Relatives waved American flags and screamed ''I love you!'' as about 1,200 soldiers from the Army's 24th Infantry Mechanized Division boarded commercial jets Friday and began the long journey to join other U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia.

A Continental Airlines jet, the first of three Boeing 747's chartered by the Army, lifted off from Hunter Army Airfield around 4 a.m., followed by a United Airlines jet at 7:45 a.m. and a Northwest Airlines jet around 3 p.m. Two other 747s and two C-141 military transport planes were scheduled to leave Friday evening.

Maj. Don Keeling said it would take the jets, which can carry up to 400 passengers, up to 14 hours to reach Saudi Arabia.

''We're going to go over there and do the best we can and hopefully we'll all come home safe,'' said Spc. Terry Leggett, one of about 2,000 soldiers scheduled to leave Hunter Friday.

''We are prepared to defend the integrity of Saudi Arabia and will play a leading role in any operations directed,'' said Brig. Gen. James Scott, assistant division commander at Fort Stewart, the base of the 24th Infantry.

The 24th Infantry is trained for desert warfare. An advance party and most of the equipment, including armored vehicles, tanks and artillery for the division, left the Port of Savannah last week on Navy transport ships.

About 50 relatives began gathering on bleachers set up beside the runway around 7 a.m. As the soldiers left a hangar and walked across the tarmac to the Northwest jet, about 20 relatives left the bleachers and pressed against a rope barrier along the side of the tarmac, waving small American flags and screaming, ''I love you!'' in unison.

''I feel like they're doing their job and that's what they're trying to do. Of course I worry about them, but they were trained as well as they possibly could be trained,'' said Jonie Harrell, whose husband, Scott, was to be on the afternoon flight. ''I just want to see the plane leave.''

Harrell said she planned to tie a yellow ribbon on the bannister of their home for each day her husband is gone. She said that will enable the couple's pre-school age children, who have difficulty understanding time, to understand how long their father is gone.

''It helps the kids be a part of it,'' Harrell said.

Inside one hangar, soldiers lounged on metal bleachers or dozed, using their back packs as pillows. One soldier read a book, another clutched his rifle and a third waved an American flag at reporters.

Red Cross volunteers dished out soft drinks, doughnuts and other refreshments to the troops and their families while they waited for the planes to arrive.

''Basically it's just one last contact with the real world,'' said Red Cross spokeswoman Jeannine Usher.

John Garber and Mary Anne Edinger, two disc jockeys from WIXV Radio, a Savannah station, broadcast their morning program from Hunter to let the soldiers know the community supported them.

''We don't often get to use the benefit of radio to send a direct message to someone. This is our way to use radio to tell them how the community feels,'' Garber said.

Army officials piped WIXV's music, a mixture of patriotic rock tunes and love songs, into two hangars where the soldiers were processed for their trip. Garber said the most-requested song was ''Hussein'', a parody of Eric Clapton's ''Cocaine'' that poked fun at Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

RENO, Nev. (AUG. 24) UPI - A judge rejected a landmark product liability suit against the heavy metal band Judas Priest, ruling Friday that messages unintentionally embedded in the band's music did not lead two young men to commit suicide.

State District Judge Jerry Whitehead rejected the $6.2 million suit by the families of Raymond Belknap and James Vance, who claimed a subliminal message of ''do it'' on the album ''Stained Class'' made the two shoot themselves in 1985.

However, the judge awarded $40,000 in sanctions against CBS Records, which released the album and was sued along with the band, on grounds it attempted to withhold original master recordings for the album.

Whitehead said the families lost the case ''because they failed to prove that defendants intentionally placed subliminal messages on the album and that those messages were a cause'' of the suicide pact between Belknap and Vance.

The judge said in his 93-page ruling that the ''do it'' message heard on the song ''Better by You, Better by Me'' was a combination of a singer exhaling on one track and a guitar playing on another track.

Whitehead said ''the words 'do it' are the result of a chance combination of sounds: The words were not intentionally formed.''

The judge said there was ''credible factual support from a lay witnesss'' that the Belknap and Vance perceived the subliminal message. But he said other factors prompted the suicide of ''these troubled young men.''

For the families to collect money, Whitehead said, they would have had to show a ''clear, conscious and intentional act'' on the part of Judas Priest.

Whitehead listened to 43 witnesses during 19 days of testimony, which ended Aug. 10.

If successful, the product liability lawsuit could have had far-reaching effects of the record industry, forcing companies to screen lyrics or face the possibility of having to pay huge punitive damages in similar cases.

Kenneth McKenna, attorney for the Belknap family, said he was disappointed with the ruling but predicted, ''This will not be the last case. There will be others and sooner or later someone will win.''

But McKenna said he doubted there would be an appeal of Whitehead's ruling.

The band's lead singer, Rob Halford, praised the ruling, saying it was a ''great day for Judas Priest and for all the artists of America.''

''Artists of all kinds have learned enough in this trial to know that anything with the word 'subliminal' is like playing with a stick of dynamite,'' Halford said in a telephone interview from Mexico, where he is on vacation.

''There are going to be two-bit lawyers waiting in the wings to run out at any given opportunity to slap a lawsuit on any artist.''

The parents sued Judas Priest and CBS, claiming the subliminal messages drove the young men to make a suicide pact after listening to the music for several hours while drinking beer and smoking marijuana.

Halford denied there were any hidden messages on the album but admitted under cross-examination that he once recorded a backward message on another album as an artistic experiment.

Belknap, 18, and Vance, 20, listened to the Judas Priest album for hours as they drank and smoked marijuana on Dec. 23, 1985, before tearing up Belknap's room and taking a sawed-off shotgun to a nearby playground.

Belknap put the gun to his throat and pulled the trigger, killing himself instantly. Vance then shot himself - blowing away the lower portion of his face - but lived three years before dying of complications from his wounds.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AUG. 24) UPI - A federal grand jury Friday indicted five state legislators on charges of selling their votes during the 1990 legislative session and the five were immediately suspended from office.

U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel said more indictments are expected.

''The vast majority of our elected officials in the state Legislature are honorable men and women who serve the public in the finest sense of the term,'' said Daniel. ''Unfortunately, however, there are some legislators who have broken that trust. That is why we are here today.''

Sen. Rick Lee, R-Spartanburg, Rep. Luther Taylor, D-Richland, Rep. Robert Brown, D-Marion, and Republican House members Robert Kohn and Danny Winstead of Charleston County were accused of taking money to support a parimutuel betting bill.

Winstead, a member of the House Ethics Committee, was also charged with obstructing justice by trying to persuade Kohn, who is cooperating with the FBI, to commit perjury.

Taylor was hit hardest by the indictments. He faces one conspiracy charge and four counts of accepting a total of $3,800 for supporting the gambling bill. Taylor could face a maximum 120 years in prison and a fine of $1.25 million if convicted on all counts.

Winstead resigned his office, citing ''a family crisis'' and personal mistakes.

The other four members of the House were notified of their suspension and stripped of the perquisites of office, including payments from house funds.

They were told the privileges would be reinstated if they are cleared of the charges of vote selling, a violation of the federal Hobbs Act which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of $250,000.

Both Brown and Lee are accused of taking bribes of $2,000. Federal authorities claim Winstead accepted $1,000, and Kohn, according to an indictment charging him with conspiracy to violate the Hobbs Act, agreed to take money from Cobb in exchange for his support of the betting bill and his work to win the votes of other lawmakers. That's also the basis of the conspiracy count against Taylor.

Daniel said the investigation began 16 months ago when the FBI received tips of wrongdoing by government officials.

The FBI responded with a sting operation involving lawmaker-turned-lobbyist Ron Cobb, who worked undercover for the government and is in protective custody at an undisclosed location.

John Harley, special agent in charge of the FBI in South Carolina, confirmed that the bureau used video and audio surveillance and used a fictitious organization known as the Alpha Group of Atlanta as a business front.

Daniel said he expects additional charges to be filed but refused to be specific.

Kohn announced last week he was withdrawing his candidacy for re-election. Brown, chairman of the House Labor, Commerce and Industry Committee, announced his resignation Thursday.

Circuit Judge Tee Ferguson, who served as a state representative from Spartanburg until his election to the bench earlier this year, was placed on a paid leave of absence Thursday at his request. Ferguson's name has been mentioned in connection with the vote selling probe.

BOGOTA, Colombia (AUG. 24) UPI - President Cesar Gaviria said Friday he had reached agreement with the leaders of the nation's political parties to hold an election to approve a constitutional assembly.

Gaviria, who took office Aug. 7, said an election would be held early next year. Reform of the nation's battered justice system is expected to be a cornerstone of the constitutional assembly.

The justice system is widely considered to be paralyzed, overburdened by several million unresolved cases and threatened by powerful cocaine cartels.

Not specifically included in the announcement was the question of whether the assembly would take up the issue of extradition of suspected drug traffickers to the United States.

Extradition is widely opposed for nationalistic reasons and by those who believe Colombians are harshly treated by the U.S. justice system.

An election for the constitutional assembly was set for Dec. 9. Voters will be able to approve the assembly and chose its members. The measure appears to have widespread public support. If approved, the assembly would meet from Feb. 5 to July 4.

SYRACUSE, NY (AUG. 24) UPI - Gov. Mario Cuomo Friday announced a re-election strategy with a distinct national flavor, saying he would ask voters to support the environmental bond act, energy conservation and a cut in the Social Security tax.

The governor, on a flight to Syracuse where he cut a ribbon to open the State Fair, said he would campaign for a resurrection of the energy policies of President Jimmy Carter.

Cuomo said Carter ''may have failed to communicate, but he was right.''

Besides the $1.975 billion 21st Century Environmental Quality Bond Act, for which Cuomo has already campaigned extensively, the governor criticized the free market oil policies of Presidents Reagan and Bush.

He said the policies left the United States dependent on foreign sources for nearly half its oil.

Auto fuel mileage requirements and alternative energy programs initiated under the Carter administration should never have been ignored, he said.

''If we had done what we planned in the '70s Iraq and Kuwaiti oil would be irrelevent,'' Cuomo said.

Cuomo urged Congress to consider oil price controls, a windfall profits tax on oil companies and the enlarging of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

He also said the United States should exploit its coal reserves, and use the nation's technological base to develop ways to burn fossil fuel cleanly.

''We are the Saudi Arabia of coal,'' Cuomo said.

He also said Carter's conservation policies, such as the lowering of home thermostats to 68 degrees, should never have been abandoned.

''If you just saved and didn't waste, we could get rid of a lot of the Iraq and Kuwaiti need,'' he said.

Cuomo also said he is behind Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's proposal to roll back Social Security taxes to offer relief to the lower- and middle-class.

He said a reduction would leave an extra $1 billion in the paychecks of New Yorkers.

Cuomo again tried to portray himself as an underdog to GOP candidate Pierre Rinfret, although the underfinanced and inexperienced challenger has had trouble on the campaign trail.

Cuomo criticized Rinfret for insisting only he and Cuomo debate, shutting out the minor party candidates.

''I think it's gotten silly now. I don't think he wants to debate,'' Cuomo said.

WARSAW, Poland (AUG. 24) UPI - Poland and the United States signed Friday an agreement rescheduling the payment of $1.2 billion of Poland's foreign debt, Polish media reported.

The agreement postpones the payment of $518 million Poland owed the United States at the end of 1989 and of $684 million due in 1990 and in the first quarter on 1991, the Polish news agency PAP said.

''All these agreements mean that this year we will not have to make any payments of our debt toward our creditors,'' Maciej Boniuk of the Finance Ministry told Polish television news Teleexpress.

The $518 million now is due in 12 half-year installments beginning Dec. 31 1997. Payment of the $684 million is scheduled to begin June 30, 1999.

The resheduling agreement implements the provisions of a document signed between Poland and the so-called Paris Club, a group of creditor nations that offer government-guaranteed credits, on Feb. 16 this year.

Poland's debt to the West is $43 billion, a heavy burden to an economy undergoing a tranformation from communist to market-oriented. A third of the debt is owed in dollars and almost 25 percent in West German marks, Teleexpress said.

Due to the fall of the dollar, Poland's debt increased by about $500 million in the first quarter of this year, Teleexpress said.

Poland has already signed debt resheduling agreements with other Paris Club countries: Austria, France, Denmark and Switzerland, PAP said.

HARRISBURG, PA (AUG. 24) UPI - A federal judge declared the major provisions of Pennsylvania's abortion law unconstitutional Friday, setting the stage for an almost-certain appeal to the Supreme Court for a review of Roe vs. Wade.

U.S. District Judge Daniel Huyett III's 191-page opinion, filed in Philadelphia, upheld his previous injunctions against the law.

The law, regarded as the toughest state anti-abortion legislation in the country, was passed last November by the General Assembly and signed by Democratic Gov. Robert P. Casey.

It imposed a 24-hour waiting period before women can obtain an abortion and required wives to notify their husbands of their intent to get an abortion.

A spokesman for Casey, who opposes abortion and is running for election to a second term in November, said the opinion was still being read but an appeal to the Supreme Court is likely.

''We continue to feel the law is consistent with the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court,'' said Deputy Press Secretary John Taylor. ''I don't think there's any question that the decision will be appealed.''

Casey's Republican gubernatorial opponent, Auditor General Barbara Hafer, ''would have vetoed the bill'' if she were governor when it passed, said her campaign manager, Patrick Killian.

''I'm glad the courts saw the error of (the Legislature's) ways and threw out what is a very onerous piece of legislation as far as the women of Pennsylvania are concerned,'' Killian said.

Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr., saying he was ''disappointed but not surprised,'' vowed to file an appeal with the 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals within 30 days.

Supporters of the law hope it will lead to the overturning of Roe vs. Wade the 1973 decision that legalized abortion.

In Roe, the court found a right of privacy in the Constitution that guaranteed a woman's freedom to choose abortion. It has since been bitterly opposed, primarily by religious groups, who say the ruling ignored the rights of the aborted fetus.

Huyett observed that the right to abortion is not as secure as it appeared after the Roe ruling.

''A woman's privacy rights and individual automomy may soon be subjected to the vicissitudes of the legislative process,'' Huyett wrote. ''Therefore, the protection afforded will depend on the ballot box and the nature of the protection, if any, could vary from term to term depending on the composition of the Legislature.''

Apparently left intact after Huyett's ruling was a provision in the law barring so-called sex-selection abortions. The provision was not challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union, which filed the suit.

The ACLU also did not directly challenge the ban on abortions after 24 weeks, but instead objected to the term ''medical emergency,'' saying it was too vague to provide any real protection. By barring the term, Huyett said he had rendered the provision unenforceable.

During a trial that ended earlier this month in Reading, the American Civil Liberties Union asked Huyett to declare the 1989 law and a similar 1988 law unconstitutional.

Thomas Zemaitis, a Philadelphia lawyer for the ACLU, said in closing arguments that the laws ''deprive women of dignity.''

''There can be no doubt that the challenged portions (of the laws) interfere with a woman's fundamental right in precisely the way condemned by Roe vs. Wade and cases following that,'' Zemaitis said.

The restrictive provisions are either unconstitutionally vague or violate free speech, privacy and equal protection laws, Zemaitis said.

Senior Deputy State Attorney General Kate Mershimer argued that the controls were legitimately devised by the state to protect and promote the health of women without placing undue burdens on them.

Mershimer also contended both laws fall well within the guidelines prescribed by the Supreme Court when the court broadened the states' regulatory powers on abortion in last year's Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services decision.

Howard Fetterhoff, executive director of the Pennsylvania Catholic Conference which lobbied for the law, said the ruling was disappointing but not unexpected.

''I'm hoping, as most people on our side are, the law will be appealed to the Supreme Court and will get a more favorable decision,'' Fetterhoff said.

Linda Wharton, an attorney for the Pennsylvania ACLU, said the case

''could well offer the post-Brennan Supreme Court its first opportunity to overturn Roe vs. Wade. If that happens, we could wind up back in the days when abortion was unsafe and illegal.''

PORTLAND Ore. (AUG. 24) UPI - Private timberland owners in Oregon were ordered by the state Friday to refrain from logging at least 70 acres of forest around all nesting sites of the threatened northern spotted owl.

The Oregon Department of Forestry implemented an interim rule aimed at protecting the owl, which was declared a threatened species a month ago by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The action comes under the State Forest Practices Act, which allows the state to protect public resources on private land, such as wildlife. It also echoes similar moves under way in Washington and California to restrict logging of private lands where the owls nest.

''I believe this will be an effective interim strategy to provide protection to northern spotted owl resource sites on private land while also allowing timber harvest activity to continue,'' said State Forester James Brown.

Brown said all logging activity within one mile of a known spotted owl nest site must go through a prior approval process that involves formal discussions between landowners, the Department of Forestry and the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.

The landowners must work with the state officials to establish a 70-acre ''core area'' around all known nesting sites. Brown said that is about the size of 70 football fields.

Brown said the rule is an interim action that can be modified in the next two months, during which he will consult with his advisory committee and interested parties.

He added that compliance with the state rule may not comply fully with the federal Endangered Species Act, and some private land owners may have to place further curbs on logging.

About 10 percent of the known owl habitat in Oregon is on private land, Brown said. But the rule could impact many private timber owners in the western portion of the state because of the cherckerboard way private land is mixed in with land controlled by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Brown said owls located on federal land could affect logging on neighboring private land if the nests are less than a mile away.

The forester said the State Forest Practices Act gives his agency the authority to restrict the destruction of wildlife habitat on private land. For other bird species, he said, that usually means saving one or two trees.

''But in the case of spotted owls, they tend not to use the same tree every year,'' he said. ''They move around in stands of timber. They are birds of opportunity, using other birds' nests.''

''In this case, the resource is larger,'' Brown said.

The 70-acre ''core area'' is a guideline suggested by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in its recommendations for preventing the owls from dwindling further in numbers. However, Brown said it is only one of four guidleines.

He said the federal agency recommended saving an additional 500 acres of timber within the next seven-tenths of a mile from each nest and 40 percent of the trees within the next 1.3 miles. That totals about 1,365 acres for each nesting pair of owls.

Brown said the federal government can't force private land owners to adopt all of the guidelines. But he said it can prosecute them for causing ''the taking of owls,'' which has been defined by the courts as killing them or destroying their habitat in such a way that cannot survive.

The state 70-acre rule, however, is mandatory. The state has the power to require that trees not be cut, whether owls are harmed or not.

Brown also said the federal agency had notified the state it will not prosecute private land owners for ''incidental taking'' of owls through timber activity, if they observed the guidelines.

''If a landowner wants to avoid the risk, he should observe the guidlines '' Brown said.

Dennis Hayward, executive vice president of the North West Timber Association in Eugene, praised the state forester's ruling but warned that the problem for private landowners might become much worse than state officials now realize.

''It is gratifying that the state of Oregon has tried to take a more reasonable position than the states of Washington and California, which are going along with the wildest schemes in terms of spotted-owl protection from the Fish and Wildlife Service,'' Hayward said.

''I disagree that less than 10 percent of the habitat is on private lands '' he added. ''We're finding increasing numbers of owls everywhere we look.''

''A lot are on second-growth (rather than old-growth forests), and a lot of private lands are second growth,'' Hayward said. ''I believe this will become a larger problem than the state anticipates. Now that those private lands are maturing, they're going to be finding the owls all over the place.''

Hayward said the decision also provided more evidence that the owl-protection recommendations of a team of government biologists led by Jack Ward Thomas of La Grande will impact private lands, contrary to what some had predicted.

NEW YORK (AUG. 24) UPI - Mindful of the potential for sharp turns in the Persian Gulf situation over the weekend, currency market players bought back the dollar in New York trading Friday to push it up across the board.

Participants took protective stances by covering short positions - pledges to sell the dollar on the expectation it would descend even further - which could mean heavy losses if the dollar rallied on a Gulf clash.

Currency dealers are "just very nervous about the potential (for the dollar) to break higher based on some Mideast incident," said Linda McLaughlin, a Chemical Bank foreign exchange vice president.

"I think the bottom line is, you just can't afford to be short dollars over the weekend with the threat of military action," said Earl Johnson, a Harris Trust & Savings Bank vice president and currency analyst.

For the institutional investors shunting huge sums around the globe, he said, "the knee-jerk (reaction) would still be to go into dollars," even if the move to a U.S. financial safe haven might be short-lived.

In late New York trading the dollar was quoted at 1.5600 German marks, up from Thursday's price of 1.5445 - a record low closing price in the 42 years since the deutsche mark was created - and at 146.75 Japanese yen, up from 146.12.

McLaughlin said the U.S.-Iraqi standoff in Kuwait, where embassies refused to comply with Baghdad's order to close, helped the dollar as players expected a rush to the U.S. currency if a clash developed.

The dollar also found support in reports the U.N. Security Council might give Washington a mandate to halt shipping to and from Iraq.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2705 Swiss francs, up from 1.2555 the day before - also a historic low for the dollar; 5.2360 French francs, up from 5.1850 francs; and 1,159.50 Italian lire, up from 1,152. Britain's pound slipped to $1.9390 from $1.9559.

In Europe, the dollar rose in quiet trading against the major currencies as dealers covered positions before the weekend. But dealers said the tone of the U.S. unit was still weak on recession fears.

"The dollar is stronger, mainly due to ... short-covering," a Zurich trader said. U.S. gross national product figures had little impact.

The U.S. economy grew by a revised 1.2 percent in the second quarter, unchanged from an earlier government estimate. Private economists had looked for a revised 1.4 percent gain.

"The GNP had exactly no impact," said a Midland Bank dealer in London. "The dollar was helped mainly on news that Iraq was moving" on embassies in Kuwait City.

The dollar rose slightly in both Frankfurt, to 1.5500 marks from Thursday's close of 1.5468, and Zurich, to 1.2635 Swiss francs from 1.2585.

In London, the pound fell back to $1.9440 vs. $1.9515 Thursday. Dealers said the high-yielding pound nonetheless may trade at $2 by next week.

The dollar gained in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 5.2180 francs vs. 5.1905, 31.8950 Belgian francs vs. 31.70 and 1,159.15 Italian lire vs. 1,152.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar softened against the yen, closing at 145.70 yen vs. Thursday's 145.88. Market players were selling dollars for the Swiss franc and the pound, both braced by high interest rates.

Gold closed lower in Zurich at $411 an ounce vs. $412.50 and fell in London to $411 an ounce from $413.75.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $414.25 an ounce, up from $411.25 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $415 an ounce, also up $3 from $412.

Silver was unchanged in Zurich at $5.15 an ounce but declined in London to $5.14 an ounce from $5.18.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.205 an ounce, up from $5.135. Comex silver also finished higher, at $5.187 an ounce against $5.126.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced Friday he will slash production of the Army's $42 billion Light Helicopter program by nearly 40 percent to save an estimated $7.8 billion.

It was Cheney's final review this year of major new weapons systems in an attempt to find defense budget savings. While cutting back and slowing down programs, he did not terminate any of the expensive weapons.

Cheney said he will direct the Army to cut its planned buy of 2,096 Light Helicopters over the next 10 years to 1,292 - a reduction of nearly 40 percent. They will be produced at a rate of 120 per year instead of the planned 216 a year.

In addition, he said, the demonstration phase of the contract will be extended two years.

Reducing the size of the program to 1,292 helicopters represents ''the minimum requirement for light helicopters in the force structure,'' Cheney said.

While cutting the total size of the purchase by 804 helicopters would reduce procurement costs by $8 billion, the extended development program will add $200 million to total research and development costs, resulting in net savings of $7.8 billion, the Pentagon said.

''The changes in Europe do not alter the need for helicopters that can serve a versatile, more flexible force,'' Cheney said. ''Helicopters must be versatile, with the ability to self-deploy to hot spots. These are all attributes of the LH not found in the current helicopter fleet.''

The LH is intended to be a light, all-weather, night-attack helicopter that can destroy tanks and shoot down helicopters. More than 2,096 had been expected to be ordered over the next 10 years, entering service in 1997.

It is expected to replace the AH-1, OH-6 and OH-58 light tactical helicopters.

But many members of Congress have objected to spending $42 billion on a new helicopter program at a time when the defense budget is sharply declining and the threat from Eastern Europe has all but evaporated.

In addition, the LH has been criticized for failing to meet is 7,500-pound weight limit, for not being agile and fast enough to catch the Soviet KA-28 Hokum attack helicopter and for failing to meet its cost goal of $7.5 million each.

Pentagon officials said the per-unit cost of the LH has grown to $9.1 million, or $1.6 million over the Army's goal of $7.5 million.

The nation's four helicopter companies have formed two teams that are seeking the lucrative LH contract, pitting McDonnell Douglas Helicopters and Bell Helicopter Textron against Boeing Helicopter and Sikorsky Aircraft of United Technologies Corp.

The LH was the last of Cheney's reviews this year of major weapons systems.

On Aug. 13, Cheney culminated a four-month review of major new warship programs by announcing he would cut the number of Seawolf attack submarines and Arleigh Burke-class destroyers to be built, to save an estimated $7 billion through fiscal 1994.

Earlier this year, Cheney completed his review of major new aircraft programs in April by cutting the Air Force's $75 billion B-2 ''stealth'' bomber program from 132 to 75 planes and paring back other programs for an estimated savings of $34 billion through the early years of the next century.

As part of that review, Cheney also cut back the Air Force's C-17 transport plane and the Navy's A-12 ''stealth'' carrier-based attack plane and delayed production of the Air Force's stealthy, next-generation Advanced Tactical Fighter or ATF.

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AUG. 24) UPI - President Bush rejected a recommendation for hefty pay raises for federal workers Friday, proposing instead a 3.5 percent increase beginning Jan. 1.

In a letter sent to leaders of the House and Senate, Bush pointed to the increasingly desperate battle against the budget deficit as his rationale for overriding the recommendations of a presidential panel on federal pay.

''Pay raises of this magnitude are clearly unacceptable,'' Bush said in the letter released as he conferred with his budget advisers at his summer vacation home.

''They would be detrimental to our efforts to get government spending at levels that promote non-inflationary growth,'' he said.

Under the Federal Pay Comparability Act of 1970, Bush is required to make a pay decision on what if any adjustment is required for the next year.

The president's pay advisers had recommended increases ranging from 22.32 percent for the lowest grade employee to 39.55 percent for the highest level.

Bush, however, is empowered to present an alternate recommendation if economic conditions warrant. Congress then has 30 days to override the recommendation and the House has proposed a 4.1 percent increase for the federal workers.

Bush, also noting that massive across-the-board cuts in federal spending could go into effect soon if a deficit reduction package is not achieved, suggested increases of an overall percentage of 3.5 percent for each pay grade, with the increase to go into effect Jan. 1, 1991.

Bush's proposed budget for the next fiscal year also provided for the 3.5 percent increase.

NEW YORK (AUG. 24) UPI - Stocks resumed an early rally to close sharply higher in heavy trading Friday, boosted by a break in the surge in oil prices and bargain hunting after Thursday's selloff.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which plunged 76.73 Thursday, its third-largest loss this year, surged 49.50 to close at 2532.92.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.17 to 171.05 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 4.45 to 311.51. The price of an average share jumped 39 cents.

The broad market did not quite keep pace with the blue chips, however, as advances led declines 952-640 among the 2,011 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 199,040,000 shares, vs. 250,440,000 traded Thursday.

On the heels of Thursday's massive selling spree, the Dow opened Friday by spiking up about 40 points in the first half-hour of trading. But as the morning wore on, the average's gain was trimmed back to about 25 points, where it drifted until midday. Remarks by White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, speaking in Kennebunkport, Maine, then cut the gain to single digits, analysts said.

Fitzwater confirmed the presence of Iraqi troops around the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait and said Washington was in contact with Ambassador Nathaniel Howell. He said that it appeared people were not being allowed to leave the embassy but that the U.S. would not abandon it, as Iraq was demanding.

Iraqi forces had not moved against the embassy, Fitzwater added. Baghdad's troops surrounded several embassies in Kuwait as the midnight deadline to close all foreign embassies in the occupied city neared.

But in the last hour of trading, the blue-chip indicator bounced back in a big way from its midday slump. Analysts said the rally was reignited by a drop in oil prices, which closed down $1.02 a barrel, as well as by bargain hunting after Thursday's 76-point plunge and by program buying.

"It was also a case of that selling just slowed to a crawl," said John Burnett, senior vice president and head trader at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette. "Enough selling has taken place over the last several sessions that we're just sold out for now.

"People decided the market has already discounted (factored in) the end of the world," he said, referring to the possibility of armed forces being used in the Mideast.

Burnett warned, however, that any "horrific occurrences" in the crisis over the weekend could spark another selling wave. "At this point, anything but all-out war should keep the market up," he said. "People are saying the bad man (Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein) is isolated and will have to make a deal."

Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co., noted that the broad market's rally was not quite as powerful as the advance in the blue chips. Considering the Dow's 170-point decline in the previous three sessions, "it's better than a sharp stick in the eye and that's what we had this week," he said.

On the trading floor, Philip Morris was the most active issue, up 1 7/8 to 43 1/4. Wal-Mart followed, jumping 1 3/8 to 26 7/8. Fannie Mae was third, surging 2 3/8 to 29.

Among other rallying blue chips were: AT&T, up 1 3/8 to 31 7/8; IBM, soaring 3 1/2 to 100 3/8 amid reports it was expected to make a major mainframe computer announcement next month; General Electric, surging 2 7/8 to 61 3/8; Boeing, soaring 3 3/8 to 45 7/8; Coca-Cola, up 1 5/8 to 39; and General Motors, up 1 1/8 to 37 1/8.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 241,133,530 shares, compared with 298,286,560 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices rose in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 0.44 to 316.29. Advances led declines 319-292 among the 847 issues traded. The price of an average share added one cent. Composite volume totaled 24,619,695 shares, down from 28,439,100 traded Thursday. Salomon Inc. led the Amex issues, unchanged at 4 5/8 on its first trading day.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index jumped 7.11 to 367.33.

HARTFORD, CT (AUG. 24) UPI - United Technologies Corp. will make up the difference between military pay and the regular pay of its employees who are called to active military duty, the company said Friday.

All medical, disability, and other employee benefits also will be continued under the special leave program, which covers the period from the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait to Dec. 31, the company said.

UTC estimates about 1,000 of its 115,000 employees in the United States are reservists, a spokesman said. The company has a total worldwide workforce of about 200,000.

The leave program will be re-evaluated as events in the Middle East warrant, said Frankly A. Caine, senior vice president for human resources and organization at UTC.

"The people called for active duty will be supporting the United States, and we are going to do as much as we can to support them," Caine said in a statement.

"We hope this special program will help the families of our employees called to protect U.S. interests as a result of the Middle East conflict," he added.

UTC, the largest private employer in Connecticut, is a major defense contractor. Its units include Pratt & Whitney, which makes jet engines, Sikorsky Aircraft, which makes helicopters, and Norden, which makes radar systems.

The company's other major business lines include Carrier air conditioning systems, Otis elevators, Hamilton Standard space systems and UT automotive products.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 24) UPI - The Pacific Stock Exchange and the Taiwan Stock Exchange announced Friday they have set up formal links by becoming "sister exchanges," the first such agreement between American and Asian trading centers.

"The time has come for us to begin building bridges to the Far East," said Leopold Korins, chairman and chief executive officer of the Pacific Stock Exchange, at signing ceremonies on the exchange floor in downtown Los Angeles.

The agreement calls for the trading operations to "keep in close collaboration and work hand in hand" and "further their cooperative projects as well as market developments."

Korins said the pact is designed to produce expanded investment opportunities for investors in both countries and to improve the settlement and regulatory capabilities of both exchanges. American investors in the Taiwan securities market are currently limited to buying into a few mutual funds.

Korins said the agreement will make it easier for Taiwanese investors to buy American securities, particularly since the San Francisco-based Pacific Stock Exchange recently received government approval to offer electronic membership.

Chao Hsiao-Feng, president of the Taiwan Stock Exchange based in Taipei, said through a translator that the agreement is part of the government's program to internationalize its securities market. The final goal of that program is to allow direct investment by foreigners in local securities and the listing of foreign companies on the exchange, he said.

The agreement also will help the Taiwan exchange begin offering new products such as options and futures contracts, Hsiao-Feng said. Korins said the two exchanges have been working together on an informal basis and discussing a possible link-up for several years.

"In an international marketplace, the PSE's best opportunities seem to lie in and with the Far East," Korins said. "From our base in California's largest financial centers - and with their established and expanding interdependencies with that part of the world - we believe we are uniquely positioned among U.S. exchanges to take advantage of those opportunities."

Korins also said that such agreements are likely to become more popular, particularly with the dropping of trade barriers in Western Europe in 1992. He said that the Taiwan-Pacific agreement may be especially useful to exchange officials to learn the intricacies of regulations at overseas trading centers, specifically on settlement of purchases.

"As more and more exchanges talk about going to a 24-hour marketplace, there has to be discussion of how to standardize settlements," Korins said.

(AUG. 24) UPI - In what may be only a temporary reversal, oil prices plunged Friday as traders decided to take profits a day after markets reached record levels on the increases racked up since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery ended the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange at $30.91 a barrel, down $1.02 from Thursday's close, but this was still up $2.28 on the week.

Unleaded gasoline for September delivery lost 3.89 cents to $1.0466 a gallon -meaning gains came to 8.69 cents on the week and 40.39 cents since the invasion sent financial and commodities markets into turmoil.

September home heating oil dropped 5.27 cents to 90.86 cents a gallon, which was 10.42 cents higher than a week ago. WTI crude had traded as high as $32.35 a barrel Thursday on the Merc, equaling the exchange's all-time high reached Aug. 2, 1983.

"A lot of people are looking at yesterday's high as a resistance point. There's not a lot of fresh news (from the Mideast), and when the market gets up this high, it needs fresh news," said Bill Hinton of Stotler & Co. in New York.

"The market's overbought and needs to take a breather. I think we've seen the high for the whole move (since Aug. 2), unless there's a war," said Mary Haskins of Paine Webber Inc. in New York. While the market has been driven by Middle East news, "there weren't any headlines today" that it took its cue from, she said.

"It's been kind of a strange day. It started out with profit taking in London, where markets will be closed Monday for a holiday," said Tom Bentz director of trading at New York's United Energy Inc.

Bentz said the profit taking carried over to New York, where WTI for October delivery opened at $31.20 a barrel, down 73 cents from Thursday's close. "The market is still very nervous, waiting for new developments in the Middle East," Bentz said.

The news may be coming. Iraqi troops surrounded several embassies in Kuwait, reportedly preventing people from entering and leaving some missions, in the face of a deadline to close all foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait City.

Iraq also told U.S. diplomats in Baghdad they would not be allowed to leave Iraq as long as the United States defied its order and kept open its Kuwaiti embassy.

At a news conference in Kennebunkport, Maine, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater confirmed the presence of Iraqi troops around the U.S. Embassy but said, "They have not made any moves on the embassy or intruded in any fashion."

On the European spot market, the United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was down 80 cents to $29.60 a barrel. Dubai light was nevertheless up $4.90 a barrel on the week. Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent dropped $1.15 to $31 a barrel, $1.50 higher than last Friday.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI lost 80 cents from Thursday to $30.85 a barrel.

Sun Co., based in Radnor, Pa., as well as Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp., and Du Pont's Houston-based Conoco Inc. unit all lowered the posted price they will pay for crude at the wellhead to $29.50 a barrel for WTI. Sun's cut was $1.25 a barrel, while Marathon's and Conoco's came to 75 cents.

Hinton said the downward movement of markets was also influenced by talks between OPEC oil ministers set to take place in Vienna Sunday on proposals to raise production to make up for the 4 million barrels lost daily because of the Aug. 6 U.N. embargo of Kuwaiti and Iraqi exports.

But only about half the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had signed up for the talks - an indication of a split in the cartel over its response to the Persian Gulf crisis.

In Jakarta, Ginandjar Kartasasmita, Indonesia's mines and energy minister, said the informal talks could be upgraded to a full emergency meeting, able to formally raise the cartel's output, if ten members would give their support.

The outlook for a cartel increase, however, doesn't look good. OPEC analysts in Vienna said Saudi Arabia, which has led efforts to raise production, had decided not to attend the Sunday talks.

WAUSAU, Wis. (AUG. 24) UPI - A former dairy princess was sentenced Friday to life in prison, without possibilty of parole until 2003, for strangling a former homecoming queen in a fit of jealous rage over a farmer both women loved.

Lori Esker, 21, was convicted in June of first-degree intentional homicide for the September 1989 slaying of Lisa Cihaski, 21, who was strangled with a belt in a car outside a Wausau area motel.

Esker spoke in court for the first time Friday and apologized to the Cihaski family and others.

''I'm so sorry for all the pain and suffering I caused them, and my family and the whole community,'' she said while sobbing. ''I'll be punishing myself for every moment I live.''

Marathon County Circuit Judge Michael Hoover, after six hours of testimony and arguments from attorneys, decided not to set a parole eligibility date for Esker so the former Marathon County dairy princess automatically becomes eligible for release after 13 years and four months in prison.

''The heinousness of this crime speaks for itself,'' Hoover said. ''And in my mind, life in prison fits the crime.''

Esker's attorney, Stephen Glynn of Milwaukee, said he would appeal the conviction based on statements admitted in the case. He did not elaborate and said the average length of incarceration for a conviction on first-degree intentional homicide was 16 years.

''I feel great she's got parole eligibility,'' Glynn said. ''I feel rotten she could spend the rest of her life in prison. This woman is genuinely in her remorse over what she did.''

Marathon County District Attorney Greg E. Grau, who asked that Esker not be eligible for parole until at least 2010.

''I think the record is clear - there is an evident lack of remorse,'' Grau said.

Esker, who resigned as dairy princess after being arrested, and Cihaski, a former homecoming queen at Birnamwood High School, fought over Eland dairy farmer Bill Buss, who was planning to marry Cihaski and previously had dated Esker.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board's policy-making panel cleared the way for lower interest rates at its July meeting because the economy and credit conditions appeared to be deteriorating, it was disclosed Friday.

Actions of the influential Federal Open Market Committee, headed by Fed chairman Alan Greenspan, are withheld from public dissemination for six weeks to insulate the world's financial markets from its decisions.

But it was clear by the actions of the nation's central bank, which sent interest rates dropping in mid-July, that the panel most likely had set the stage to ease credit conditions at its July 2-3 session.

The Fed, concerned about the underlying level of inflation, has been keeping a rather tight grip on interest rates for most of the year.

''At the conclusion of the committee's discussion, all of the members indicated that they favored or could accept a directive that called for maintaining the existing degree of pressure on reserve positions for at least a short period after this meeting,'' a meeting summary said.

''Subsequently, some slight easing of reserve conditions could be implemented unless incoming data on the monetary aggregates and the economy evidenced greater strength,'' the summary said.

At the time of the July session, U.S. economic growth appeared to be expanding rather slowly, and some lenders appeared to be setting tougher standards for borrowers.

''Because of the minor firming that appeared to have occurred in general credit conditions, such easing in the availability of reserves would in effect serve to maintain the overall degree of monetary restraint that the committee had sought to implement since late 1989,'' the summary also said.

After credit conditions deteriorated further, Greenspan surprised the Senate Banking Committee at a hearing July 12 by revealing that the Fed would most likely act to loosen credit policy and bring down rates.

Less than 24 hours later, the Federal Funds rate on inter-bank loans declined to 8 percent from 8.25 percent as the Federal Reserve Bank of New York pumped more money into the banking system.

KATMANDU, Nepal (AUG. 24) UPI - Twenty-two persons were arrested Friday for protesting and stoning a limousine carrying Queen Aishwarya, two of her children and her sister, authorities said.

The royal family, which was en route to the Temple of Pashupati Nath for the festival of Teej, was not injured in the incident Thursday, although the queen's vehicle was badly damaged, the Home Ministry said.

Leaders of two political parties in the interim government denounced the incident.

''Such incidents, which devalue democratic values, individual freedom and respect, are uncivilized and deplorable,'' said Ganesh Man Singh, the leader of the Nepali Congress. ''Such incidents will only help elements who want to destabilize the new democracy,'' he said.

Jibraj Ashrit, leader of Nepal's Communist Party, also called the attack ''a deplorable act.''

Police, who said officers fired their weapons into the air to disperse the protesters during the nighttime attack, estimated the slogan-shouting mob at about 60 people. One security officer was wounded when hit by a stone, police said.

The crowd shouted ''down with the queen'' and denounced groups loyal to King Birendra, the world's only Hindu monarch.

''No civilized government can brook such disgraceful activities carried out in the name of unrestricted individual liberty under multi-party democracy,'' Home Minister Yog Prasad Upadhaya said Friday in a statement linking the protests to widespread demands for increased democracy in the kingdom.

''We will identify such disruptive elements and take sternest action against them,'' the home minister said, in an apology to the royal family ''for the inconvenience caused.''

The festival to which the queen was en route in one in which Nepalese Hindu women undertake a 24-hour fast for the longevity of their spouses.

The attack on the queen's vehicle came amid rising tension in the Himalayan kingdom where a constitutional revision commission is at work on plans to re-introduce multi-party democracy.

Nepal's multi-party democracy was banned 29 years ago and replaced by a partyless political system answerable only to the king.

But six weeks of nationwide pro-democracy protests and rioting that broke out Feb. 18 and claimed scores of lives forced the king to relinquish some of his near-absolute powers and agree to a return of political parties.

Officials placed the death toll from clashes between protesters and police at 52, while other sources said fatalities totaled more than 100.

An interim plan for a new constitution was scheduled to be introduced by Aug. 31 and authorities said they planned to cancel all police leave to deal with possible violence. Another source said leave for military personnel also would be canceled before the announcement.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - The Pentagon said Friday it has made arrangements to get copies of Stars and Stripes, the military's unofficial daily newspaper, delivered to troops in Saudi Arabia.

In news accounts sent back by reporters in Saudi Arabia soldiers have expressed frustations at not being able to keep up with world events.

Stars and Stripes, which publishes both Pacific and European editions, carries a broad spectrum of world news and U.S. news based on wire service reports and its own network of reporters. The troops will get the European edition of the paper.

The Pentagon said some 15,000 copies of the paper will be distributed to the troops on the ground and another 2,300 papers will be sent to Navy ships in the region. The number of copies will be increased as requested by the U.S. Central Command, which is running Operation Desert Shield.

The newspaper, a 28-page tabloid, will be distributed free of charge to soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines. It normally costs 25 cents a copy.

Stars and Stripes has a daily circulation of about 142,000 in 42 countires in Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. In addition to national and international news, the paper carries sports, features, entertainment, comics and syndicated columns.

NEW ORLEANS (AUG. 24) UPI - A seven-alarm fire destroyed a two-block-long riverfront wharf Friday and sent a black plume of burning rubber and smoke towering over the Mississippi River downtown.

The port captain closed traffic on the river for about two hours because of dense smoke from the fire obscuring visibility. One firefighter was treated for burns on the neck and two others for smoke inhalation.

Fireboats and scores of firefighters struggled in 90-degree weather to prevent the intense Orange Street Wharf blaze from spreading beyond firewalls to adjacent wharves.

The Coast Guard dispatched a 41-foot utility boat and a 55-foot aid to navigation boat to the scene.

The fire began about 12:30 p.m. and quickly spread through the wharf. It took firefighters about four hours to bring the blaze under control.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney Friday invoked a little-known law Friday to allow the Pentagon to spend more money than was approved for the year to pay for Operation Desert Shield.

The statute - known as the ''Feed and Forage Act'' and dating back to the days of the cavalry - was invoked because of the soaring costs of the effort to put troops and weaponry into Saudi Arabia.

Cheney's action ensures that money is available until Congress returns to session in September and can pass a special appropriations bill to get the Pentagon through the remaining weeks of the fiscal year.

Initial Pentagon estimates put the cost of the operation at $1.2 billion through the end of September - the end of fiscal year 1990 - but costs have begun to rise with the activation of units of the reserves and National Guard.

By the end of September officials expect as many as almost 50,000 guard and reserve personel will be on active duty to support the operation and drawing pay that will boost monthly costs by $100 million.

The law lets the Pentagon spend money for clothing, food, fuel, housing, transportation and medical and hospital supplies.

A Pentagon statement said the action ''ensures that the Department of Defense can provide full support to U.S. military personnel deployed for Operation Desert Shield and those conducting maritime intercept operations around the Arabian peninsula.''

''Because the Middle East operations were not foreseen when the defense budget for the current fiscal year was enacted, the budget did not include funds to cover the increased cost of the operations,'' the statement said.

NEW YORK (AUG. 24) UPI - The stock market weighed in with its second-worst week of the year and sixth straight weekly loss this week as investors, nervous about an escalation of tensions in the Persian Gulf, dumped their holdings.

The Dow Jones industrial average ended the week on an up note, surging 49.50 Friday to close at 2532.92, but lost 111.88 points - 4.2 percent - on the week. Its worst weekly loss this year came in the week ended Jan. 26, when the blue-chip indicator fell 118.67 points. This week's loss was the eighth biggest weekly loss ever for the Dow.

Broader market indexes followed suit, with Standard & Poor's 500-stock index losing 16.32 to end the week at 311.51 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index falling 9.14 to close the week at 171.05.

Declines thumped advances 1,785-219 among the 2,166 NYSE issues traded this week. Weekly Big Board volume totaled 949,523,020 shares, compared with 739,842,760 a week earlier and 829,815,720 shares a year ago.

Prices closed mixed Monday in very light trading as the Mideast crisis seemed to reach a stalemate. The biggest development of the day saw President Bush call the Americans trapped in Kuwait hostages. The administration had avoided the ''H'' word until that point.

But that was the calm before the storm. Over the next three days, the Dow plunged 173.01 points as fears of a war in the Persian Gulf gripped the market.

On Tuesday, reports of Iraqi missiles said to be deployed near the Saudi border sent the Dow tumbling more than 50 points. On Wednesday, at a news conference, President Bush refused to rule out the use of force in the region.

And on Thursday, with no dramatic developments from the Mideast, investors had plenty of time to work themselves into a stew over the week's events to that point. The 76-point plunge in the Dow that day was the third-biggest loss of the year, coming on the third-heaviest volume of the year, and took the Dow down to its first close below 2500 since July 1989.

But as the week ended, a break in the surge in oil prices and bargain hunting after the debacle Thursday sparked a 50-point rise in the blue-chip index, but only made a dent in the week's loss.

As for the drop below 2500, Ron Doran, director of institutional trading at C.L. King and Associates in Albany. N.Y., said he did not think it was particularly significant.

''There's still a lot of uncertainty about what will happen in the Mideast but I think most people think the market will always bounce back and that this fall will be no different,'' he said.

''I'm hopeful, but I don't know if that's realistic,'' said Doran. ''There are some great values out there, but there's a lot of reluctance by portfolio managers to dive in and be aggressive. They're paralyzed a little and rightfully so.''

Doran said one factor that has weighed in the market's favor even during this plunge, which has taken the Dow down more about 415 points, or 14 percent, since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, is that investors have not rushed to dump shares in mutual funds as they did during the market's crash in 1987.

But Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co., said even a peaceful resolution of the Gulf crisis may not mean the market is free and clear to resume a long-term rally.

''Even if it is all resolved, we could rally 100 points in the short-term, but when you're down 500 points (from the highs reached in July) what does that mean?'' Jarrett asked.

''And whatever happens there will be critical to the price of oil. The longer it takes to resolve, the longer oil prices will stay high and then the economy and inflation will have to be reassessed (in that context),'' he said. ''We're not out of the woods even once this is resolved.''

On the trading floor this week, Philip Morris was the most active issue, off 2 to 43 1/4.

Wal-Mart Stores followed, off 1 1/8 to 26 7/8. General Electric was third, down 2 5/8 to 61 3/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T lost 1 1/2 to 31 7/8, IBM fell 1 to 100 3/8, Boeing tumbled 2 5/8 to 45 7/8, Exxon slumped 3 1/4 to 48 7/8 even as oil prices fell sharply this week, Eastman Kodak fell 2 to 38 3/4 and Coca-Cola sank 3 to 39. All the 20 most active issues on the Big Board this week lost ground.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index sank 17.32 to close Friday at 316.29. Declines pummeled advances 769-113 among the 1,011 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 93,796,575 shares, compared with 69,436,080 traded a week earlier and 68,410,090 traded in the same week a year ago.

Salomon's put warrants on the Tokyo market's Nikkei index led the Amex actives, up 2 1/2 to 16 5/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index plummeted 26.16 to end the week at 367.33.

NEW YORK (AUG. 24) UPI - Government securities kept falling in value and the yield on the 30-year bond seemed headed for 9 1/4 percent Friday, spurred by fears of war in the Persian Gulf and the far-reaching inflationary effects stemming from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

''The market is at its lows of the year,'' said Michael Moran, trading manager for Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. Friday's selling was less intense than the two previous days, but ''there was some liquidation going on,'' he said.

Moran's choice of terms was apt, because investors sought greater safety for their portfolios by boosting liquidity - converting to cash for time deposits or shifting over to Treasury notes or bills with shorter maturities.

Long bonds, those with maturities running from two out to 30 years, suffered the most as a result of this crisis-weathering strategy.

The key 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 of 2020, ended at 95 27/32 with a yield of 9.16 percent, compared with 98 and 8.94 percent a week earlier. The loss of 2 1/8 points on the week translates into $21.25 for every $1,000 face value.

The long-bond yield was the highest seen since April 1989. Moran looked for it to hit 9.25 percent or even 9.50 percent if Gulf tensions keep mounting but noted a peaceful resolution would ''cause a stampede into our market.''

At the same time, he acknowledged a quick resolution ''is probably not in the cards,'' so yields will have to rise high enough to draw buyers. What is keeping them out at this point is mainly the threat of booming inflation.

Bond investors fret about inflation in the best of times. But in recent days apprehension about how inflation could leap if a Gulf war cut off oil supplies and drove prices even higher has assumed epic proportions.

''The bond markets are responding to unbridled fears,'' said Philip Braverman, DKB Securities Corp.'s chief economist, in his weekly market report. Braverman cited worries about ''significant war damage to the oil fields.''

Bond investors get nervous at signs of inflation, because it eats away at the fixed return from bonds and lowers their market value.

Along with oil-fueled inflation, investors have been worrying about how much the United States will have to spend to finance what could be a lengthy stay by U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia to fend off an Iraqi threat.

Before the Gulf crisis flared with Baghdad's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, bonds were rallying on the prospect of an agreement between the Bush administration and Congress to pare back the federal deficit - but Gulf events have made theWashington budget talks moot.

More and more economists are saying a recession already is in progress. Such sentiment usually pushes prices higher for fixed-return bonds, which are among the surest investments in economically troubled times.

But the bond market will probably have to wait for the Gulf crisis to be resolved before it sees the Federal Reserve counter recession by guiding short-term interest rates down. Easing by the Fed usually helps bond prices.

But the Fed, in timing that decision, and investors, in deciding when to get back in the market, must both reckon with inflation. The hope of both is that recession, by checking spending, will choke off inflation.

''We expect Fed policy to remain relatively restrictive until we are at least ankle-deep in a recession,'' said Smith Barney analyst Douglas Schindewolf.

Ten-year Treasury notes ended at 98 03/32 to yield 9.04 percent vs. 99 21/32 and 8.80 percent one week before. Five-year notes ended at 99 03/32 to yield 8.71 percent vs. 100 1/32 and 8.47 percent.

Three-year Treasury notes closed at 98 26/32 to yield 8.46 vs. 99 12/32 and 8.24 a week earlier. Two-year notes were at 99 16/32 to yield 8.28 percent vs. 99 26/32 and 8.10 percent, Salomon Brothers said.

Six-month Treasury bills were discounted at a rate of 7.47 percent to yield 7.86 percent, compared with a 7.41 percent discount and 7.80 percent yield a week earlier. Three-month T-bills ended at a 7.45 percent discount and a yield of 7.69 percent, vs. 7.48 percent and 7.72 percent.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.'s index of long-term Treasury bonds lost 24.04 points in the week, or 1.97 percent, ending at 1,218.60.

The federal funds rate, charged on bank-to-bank overnight loans of reserve funds, finished the week at 8 1/16 percent, slightly above its current perceived target rate of 8 percent.

The Fed funds rate, a building block for U.S. interest rates, is one means by which the Federal Reserve carries out monetary policy.

(AUG. 24) UPI - Thunderstorms dumped heavy rain over the Atlantic Coast states Friday, triggering flash floods in New York and West Virginia, while fierce winds lashed parts of Georgia, Arkansas and the deserts of California.

Heavy rains fell along the East Coast from New York state and the southern half of New England to Florida, the National Weather Service said.

Storms dumped 5 inches of rain over Islip, N.Y., causing extensive local flooding. Heavy rain on Long Island also spawned severe floods, impairing traffic on major roads and disabling vehicles in high water.

Rainwater also flooded streets and highways in Bridgeport, Conn., and 4 inches of rain fell over Norfolk, Va.

Flooding in West Virginia followed storms that dumped more than 3 inches of rain in two hours, washing out at least three area roads, officials said. No injuries were reported and flash flood warnings lapsed at mid-morning.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami reported a tropical depression formed from a tropical wave east of the Lesser Antilles and at midday Friday was about 750 miles east of Barbados.

Skies were clear Friday over much of the West Coast, but wind advisories were posted over the gusty and dusty deserts of California, from Kern County to the Mojave Desert and the Antelope Valley.

Earlier, winds downed trees in Georgia's eastern Adams County and thunderstorm gusts reached 60 mph at Fort Smith, Ark. Golfball-size hail fell near Lincoln, Neb., during the morning hours.

In the Great Plains, storms left heavy rain over eastern Texas and the Gulf Coast, Oklahoma, western Iowa. Showers also were scattered over Iowa, central North Dakota, Wisconsin and lower Michigan in the Great Lakes region.

FARGO, N.D. (AUG. 24) UPI - The third of three former pilots convicted last week in federal court of flying a Northwest Airlines jet while drunk pleaded guilty Friday to state charges stemming from the same incident.

Flight engineer Joseph Balzer, 34, of Antioch, Tenn., pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor state charge of flying while intoxicated. Capt. Norman Prouse, 51, and First Officer Robert Kirchner, 36, pleaded guilty to the same count Thursday.

All three received suspended 30-day jail sentences and $1,000 fines.

The pilots face up to 15 years in prison following their felony conviction in Minneapolis of flying a Boeing 727 while intoxicated. The March 8 Boeing 727 flight from Fargo to Minneapolis with 91 passengers aboard was conducted without incident.

Prouse, of Conyers, Ga., admitted to alcoholism during the jury trial. He had a level of 0.12 percent when tested more than two hours after landing the passenger jet at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport.

Kirchner, of Highland Ranch, Colo., and Balzer had lower levels but were still found to be in violation of federal law. Most states consider motorists with blood-alcohol levels above 0.10 to be legally intoxicated.

According to testimony at the trial, Prouse consumed at least 15 mixed drinks and the other two men split six pitchers of beer at a Moorhead, Minn., bar the night before the early morning flight.

Defense lawyers contended the cockpit crew members were not impaired because they completed the flight flawlessly, but the jury sided with prosecutors who contended that the very fact that they got into the cockpit and took off showed that their judgment was affected.

(AUG. 24) UPI - In what may be only a temporary reversal, oil prices plunged Friday as traders decided to take profits a day after markets reached record levels on the increases racked up since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery ended the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange at $30.91 a barrel, down $1.02 from Thursday's close, but this was still up $2.28 on the week.

Unleaded gasoline for September delivery lost 3.89 cents to $1.0466 a gallon -meaning gains came to 8.69 cents on the week and 40.39 cents since the invasion sent financial and commodities markets into turmoil.

September home heating oil dropped 5.27 cents to 90.86 cents a gallon, which was 10.42 cents higher than a week ago.

WTI crude had traded as high as $32.35 a barrel Thursday on the Merc, equaling the exchange's all-time high reached Aug. 2, 1983.

''A lot of people are looking at yesterday's high as a resistance point. There's not a lot of fresh news (from the Mideast), and when the market gets up this high, it needs fresh news,'' said Bill Hinton of Stotler & Co. in New York.

''The market's overbought and needs to take a breather. I think we've seen the high for the whole move (since Aug. 2), unless there's a war,'' said Mary Haskins of Paine Webber Inc. in New York.

While the market has been driven by Middle East news, ''there weren't any headlines today'' that it took its cue from, she said.

''It's been kind of a strange day. It started out with profit taking in London, where markets will be closed Monday for a holiday,'' said Tom Bentz, director of trading at New York's United Energy Inc.

Bentz said the profit taking carried over to New York, where WTI for October delivery opened at $31.20 a barrel, down 73 cents from Thursday's close.

''The market is still very nervous, waiting for new developments in the Middle East,'' Bentz said.

The news may be coming. Iraqi troops surrounded several embassies in Kuwait, reportedly preventing people from entering and leaving some missions, in theface of a deadline to close all foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait City.

Iraq also told U.S. diplomats in Baghdad they would not be allowed to leave Iraq as long as the United States defied its order and kept open its Kuwaiti embassy.

At a news conference in Kennebunkport, Maine, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater confirmed the presence of Iraqi troops around the U.S. Embassy but said, ''They have not made any moves on the embassy or intruded in any fashion.''

On the European spot market, the United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was down 80 cents to $29.60 a barrel. Dubai light was nevertheless up $4.90 a barrel on the week.

Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent dropped $1.15 to $31 a barrel, $1.50 higher than last Friday.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI lost 80 cents from Thursday to $30.85 a barrel.

Sun Co., based in Radnor, Pa., as well as Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp., and Du Pont's Houston-based Conoco Inc. unit all lowered the posted price they will pay for crude at the wellhead to $29.50 a barrel for WTI. Sun's cut was $1.25 a barrel, while Marathon's and Conoco's came to 75 cents.

Hinton said the downward movement of markets was also influenced by talks between OPEC oil ministers set to take place in Vienna Sunday on proposals to raise production to make up for the 4 million barrels lost daily because of the Aug. 6 U.N. embargo of Kuwaiti and Iraqi exports.

But only about half the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had signed up for the talks - an indication of a split in the cartel over its response to the Persian Gulf crisis.

In Jakarta, Ginandjar Kartasasmita, Indonesia's mines and energy minister, said the informal talks could be upgraded to a full emergency meeting, able to formally raise the cartel's output, if 10 members would give their support.

The outlook for a cartel increase, however, doesn't look good. OPEC analysts in Vienna said Saudi Arabia, which has led efforts to raise production, had decided not to attend the Sunday talks.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - Thrift regulators Friday closed Golden Circle Savings Association FSB in Corsicana, Texas, and approved paying off the institution's insured deposits.

The thrift had assets of $13.1 million and liabilities of $14.5 million.

Deposits totaled $14.4 million in about 800 accounts. Regulators said uninsured deposits were believed to be minimal and would consist primarily of accrued interest on deposits in excess of the $100,000 deposit insurance limit.

The Resolution Trust Corp., created last year to clean up the thrift industry, said it received no bids for the institution and decided to pay off insured deposits.

Depositors are asked to contact the institution for information on the method of payment.

Uninsured depositors and other general creditors will share proportionately with the RTC in the proceeds from the liquidation of the thrift's assets. RTC estimated its cost of the transaction at $2.7 million.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady Friday welcomed Venezuela's proposed plan to reduce its commercial bank debt by 20 percent and said it already has been accepted by almost all of the nation's creditor banks.

The Venezuelan government of President Carlos Andres Perez Tuesday said in Caracas it had reached agreement with its creditor banks on about $20 billion out of $28 billion of the South American country's public foreign debt. Venezuela's total foreign debt stands at approximately $35 billion. Once a country reaches agreement with the banks' steering committee, the committee has to present the package to all creditor banks for approval.

"The Department of the Treasury welcomes the preliminary results of the government of Venezuela's offer of various financing options to its creditor banks," Brady said in a statement.

"Based on responses from banks representing 90 percent of outstanding exposure, the banks' choices will produce an estimated 20 percent net reduction in Venezuela's stock of commercial bank debt and a 50 percent annual cut in external debt-service payments to banks," he said. Acceptance by such high proportion of banks makes the success of the agreement virtually certain.

Brady noted that the two principal financing options selected by banks were par bonds - to be exchanged for old debt - and new money totaling $1.15 billion. The Venezuelan government also said it expected a $3 billion debt reduction through debt-for-equity swaps.

Venezuela originally demanded from its commercial bank creditors a 50 percent debt reduction. After a year of difficult negotiations, an initial debt reduction agreement in principle was reached between Venezuela and the banks in March on a much lower figure than 50 percent.

Early last year, Brady announced an initiative to reduce the bank debt of developing countries with the support of financial packages from the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. Both multilateral institutions have provided Venezuela with large loans, part of which can be used to guarantee the commercial debt reduction.

Under Brady's plan, Mexico, the Philippines and Costa Rica have achieved significant reductions in their debt. Morocco reached agreement with its creditor banks for another debt reduction package.

The Treasury has said it expects other major debtor countries, such as Brazil and Argentina, with foreign debt of $120 billion and $65 billion, respectively, to obtain debt reduction packages from their commercial bank creditors.

UNITED NATIONS (AUG. 24) UPI - The Soviet Union said Friday it has agreed with the United States that use of ''minimum force'' could be applied to ensure the implementation of U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

Soviet deputy permanent representative Valentin Lozinskiy told reporters that the Soviet Union still wants to use diplomatic channels to solve the crisis caused by the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi troops.

''The main thing is a political dialogue (with Iraq),'' Lozinskiy said after daylong discussions with U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Thomas Pickering and the representatives from France, Britain and China.

''While it is necessary to ensure the implementation of the sanctions resolution, very limited means of force can be used,'' he said.

Pickering said the consultations between the representatives would keep going into Friday night.

The United States has proposed that a ''minimum force'' can be applied to force countries that have been trading with Iraq to adhere to the worldwide economic and military embargo.

The sanctions were imposed after Iraq defied a demand by the Security Council to withdraw immediately and unconditionally from the small emirate that is rich with oil.

Lozinzkiy said there had been changes in the draft resolution that Pickering has offered to his counterparts for discussions.

The five countries are the permanent members of the 15-nation Security Council with the right to veto any resolutions they consider against their national interests.

China has voiced its opposition to the use of military force to ensure respect of the sanctions, but it said it will abstain whenever the council votes on the draft resolution.

Lozinskiy said, ''It is my intention to vote yes, but we have to see the final text'' of the resolution.

Lozinskiy said ships plying the Persian Gulf or Red Sea could be stopped for inspection whenever the Security Council adopt the new resolution.

He said Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's personal message to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein Friday stressed the importance to resolve the crisis through diplomacy.

In that message, Gorbachev urged Saddam to fulfill ''without delay'' U.N. resolutions pertaining to the invasion.

''Evading the fulfilment of the resolutions will inevitably compel the Security Council to adopt corresponding extra measures,'' Gorbachev warned Saddam.

Pickering, who has been holding private discussions with representatives of the four countries this week to win their support for the military option, told reporters he had ''useful'' discussions with his colleagues. He also met with non-aligned countries Friday, urging them to support the U.S.-led military option.

AMMAN, Jordan (AUG. 24) UPI - King Hussein returned to Amman Friday after visits to Yemen and Sudan in his latest diplomatic efforts to avert a Middle East war, and his country agreed to reopen its border with Iraq.

It was unclear when Hussein would embark on another round of visits to Arab capitals, but he has said he would continue efforts to resolve the Gulf crisis, which erupted with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Last week, Hussein met with Iraq's President Saddam Hussein and President Bush.

Jordan closed its border with Iraq at Ruweished, about 220 miles east of Amman, at midnight Wednesday after officials said they could not accommodate the refugees fleeing from Iraq and occupied Kuwait. Jordan has received nearly 200,000 refugees since the crisis began, with 42,000 of them arriving Wednesday.

But the order failed to stop the flow of thousands of refugees. Thursday, with the Iraqi-Jordanian border officially closed, 26,000 refugees, most of them Arab nationals, flooded across.

Jordan agreed to reopen its border with Iraq Friday and allow a maximum of 20,000 refugees a day into the kingdom, an official source of the Ministry of the Interior said. Arrangements were taken to set up a camp at Ruweished to receive the refugees, the source said.

Despite attempts by Jordan to provide facilities for the refugees - many of them destitute Egyptian laborers - adequate housing, food and water had not been available. The lack of transportation for thousands of Egyptians to return home also exacerbated the situation, and rioting has erupted near Ruweished and the port of Aqaba.

In Brussels, the European Community granted an emergency fund of $1.3 million Thursday to help finance an airlift home of thousands of Egyptian refugees from the Iraqi-Jordanian border. West Germany said it would send 4.2 million tons of food to the refugees in Jordan.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 24) UPI - Officials from Nike Inc. and the civil rights group Operation PUSH met Friday at Georgetown University without resolving differences over the company's hiring, promotion and advertising practices.

Chicago-based Operation PUSH has accused Nike of discriminating against minorities, particulary blacks, and two weeks ago began a national boycott of Nike sneakers.

PUSH President, the Rev. Tyrone Crider, had said Nike must buy advertising in black-owned media outlets and add a black director to its board before the boycott would be called off.

Nike President Richard Donahue and Chairman Philip Knight met through the afternoon Friday with Crider and PUSH founder, Jesse Jackson, at the behest of Georgetown's basketball coach, John Thompson.

Friday's four-hour meeting was the first direct contact between the two sides since discussions about minority involvement in the company broke down July 31.

Jackson has openly criticized Thompson, Chicago Bulls basketball star Michael Jordan and other athletes under contract to Nike for defending the company.

In a news conference following the meeting, participants said no agreement had been reached on substantive issues but that they would meet again.

''Nothing has changed,'' said Crider. ''We will still challenge the shoe industry and Nike specifically.''

Crider lambasted the Beaverton, Ore.-based company for what he called the ''zero factor: zero on the board, zero vice presidents, zero dollars in our banks, zero use of affirmative-action advertising agencies.''

Jackson said PUSH was seeking an affirmative-action plan.

But Donahue defended the company's hiring practices and said that since the first of the year minorities have comprised 21 percent of new employees and that 21 percent of the next 1,000 hired also would be minorities.

''We have announced that within 12 months we will appoint a minority director and in 20 more months we will appoint a minority vice-president '' said Donahue, who denied the boycott has had any affect on business.

On Monday, Crider accused the company of practicing ''apartheid'' after Nike officials refused to meet with PUSH members until the organization explained its relationship with the shoe company's No. 1 competitor, Reebok International Ltd.

Nike officials claim PUSH started pressuring them after Canton, Mass.-based Reebok placed a $6,000 advertisement in a monthly PUSH-supported magazine.

Oregon has put forest land off limits to logging by private timberland owners if it is near nests of the northern spotted owl. State Forester James Brown said logging is prohibited in a 70-acre zone around a known nesting site. In addition, any logging within one mile must be approved in advance by state authorities. The federal government declared the northern spotted owl a threatened species a month ago.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (AUG. 24) UPI - A judge Friday ordered the provisional detention of a soldier testifying in connection with the Nov. 16 slaying of six Jesuit priests, but the man fled the courtroom, judicial sources said.

Judge Ricardo Zamora also asked the Defense Ministry to provide a list of officers attending a meeting of the Salvadoran armed forces High Command the night of the killings and denied a defense motion asking that the case be transferred to another court.

A spokesman for the supreme court said Zamora was questioning Sgt. Oscar Solorzano and decreed his detention when Solorzano ''was caught giving false testimony and contradicted himself several times.''

''As soon as the judge gave the order for his detention (Solorzano) managed to get away and he fled,'' the court spokesman said.

In declarations to police investigators, several of the eight military men charged with murder in the case mentioned Solorzano as a participant in the operation in which the priests were killed.

Court sources said the defense attorneys were expected to appeal Zamora's decision not to move the case. They said the appeal would freeze the ongoing judicial investigation of the controversial case for up to two months, and that transferring the case would entail additional delays.

The supreme court spokesman said defense attorneys immediately objected to Zamora's request for information about the High Command's meeting on the night of the killings, but the judge stuck to his decision. ''The judge ordered that the court ask the Defense Ministry to provide a list of commanders who participated in the meeting of the Joint Chiefs-of-Staff on Nov. 15, 1989,'' the court spokesman said.

Col. Guillermo Alfredo Benavides, charged with ordering the murder of the Jesuits, their housekeeper and her teenage daughter, is known to have attended the Nov. 15 meeting in which top military officers say they decided on an all-out counterattack against a massive rebel offensive centered on San Salvador.

Assertions by several military sources that Benavides could not have decided on his own to kill the prominent Jesuits have led to speculation that he was ordered to do so during the meeting.

Despite Benavides' arrest, church officials here contend that the ''intellectual authors'' of the crime have yet to be discovered.

A preliminary report in April by Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., head of a congressional commission monitoring the case, said ''a series of questions about the possible involvement of higher officials in ordering the crimes remain unanswered ... The investigators have not questioned senior officers about a meeting of the armed forces High Command, at which Col. Benavides was present, on the night of the murders.''

One of the lieutenants charged with leading the ''mission'' to kill the Jesuits told investigators he received a radio call Nov. 15 to regroup his troops for the mission at about 10:15 p.m.

Who sent the transmission has not yet come out in the judicial proceedings but at the time of the radio call, Benavides was still at the meeting with the High Command. Benavides recently testified that the High Command was tied into the radio network used to reassemble the troops for the mission to the Jesuits' home, on the University of Central America campus.

BOSTON (AUG. 24) UPI - A small twin-engine plane piloted by a major developer crashed between two houses early Friday, erupting into flames and killing all three people aboard, authorities said.

The pilot was identified as Michael Spear, 49, president of The Rouse Co. of Columbia, Md. His wife, Judith, 47, and their daughter Jodi, 19, were also killed in the crash.

No one on the ground was seriously hurt, officials said.

The twin-engine turbo-prop Piper Cheyenne was bound for Logan International Airport from the Cape Cod town of Chatham, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

Spear aborted his first approach to Logan about 6:24 a.m. because he could not slow the plane, the FAA said. Controllers told him to climb while circling west over Boston but Spear responded that his left engine was on fire.

The plane dropped off radar at 6:33 a.m., crashed and burst into flames in the driveway between the two single-family homes in the city's Mattapan section, setting both houses on fire, authorities said.

Neighbors said the occupants of one house were away on vacation and that five people in the other house fled to safety. Neighbors said a man who lived in the house helped two women and two children escape out a window and suffered minor injuries in the process.

Residents said they heard the plane coming in low about 6:30 a.m. and that its engines seemed to be ''grumbling'' as if it were in trouble.

''I was putting out the trash and heard a plane coming in low, about treetop level,'' said one neighbor. ''The engine cut off and I heard a big bang.''

Another resident, Alice Grant, said she saw something streaking out of the sky.

''I heard a loud noise and then saw a fireball burst into the sky,'' she said. She said the engine was ''grumbling, as if it was in trouble.''

Because the plane was making an instrument approach to Logan in fog at the time, the FAA closed Logan closed to incoming flights for about two hours so the facilities' instruments could be checked.

The plane was trying to land on the airport's only open runway amid heavy fog, said Massachusetts Port Authority spokesman Phillip Orlandella. The runway is specially designed for instrument-only landings.

Spear never declared an emergency but controllers treated the flight with the same urgency as if he had, FAA spokesman Michael Ciccarelli said.

The FAA investigation is expected to last at least a month, Ciccarelli said.

Officials said Spear was an experienced and commercially certified pilot.

The Rouse Co. is a major developer of malls across the country and was the primary builder of Columbia, a planned community about 25 miles north of Washington, D.C.

Police and fire units went to the scene as neighbors were roused from their homes. Mayor Raymond Flynn also went and complained again about allowing small aircraft to use Logan during peak periods when larger aircraft are landing and departing.

But Logan Director Patrick Moscaritolo said Flynn's complaints are with federal law, not airport regulations.

On June 26, 1987, a twin-engine Piper Seneca on a flight from New Jersey crashed into a Dorchester neighborhood, killing the pilot. At least three homes were burned and three people on the ground were hurt.

BRISBANE, Australia (AUG. 24) UPI - A schoolgirl who watched American singer Bobby Brown simulate sex on stage was later allegedly raped by the singer's father, police said in court Friday.

A Brisbane magistrate's court preliminary hearing heard charges alleging that Herbert James Brown, 60, a Korean War veteran from North Ridge, Calif., raped and deprived the 16-year-old girl of her liberty and assualted her older girlfriend.

The girl who claims she was raped appeared in closed court, but her friend later testified in open court.

The court heard that both girls had attended Bobby Brown's concert last month and later met and danced with Herbert Brown at a city nightclub.

Both girls drank alcohol and accompanied him to his hotel room, where both girls drank from separate bottles of champagne.

Under cross-examination by defense lawyer, Adrian Gunderlach, the girl agreed that her friend had been ''turned on'' by Bobby Brown's stage antics, which included simulated sex.

She agreed her friend had gone to the concert wearing jeans and a see-through shirt and it was alleged she was also carrying a condom.

It was also alleged the girl had sex with the bass guitarist in Brown's band in the elder Brown's hotel room and that photographs had been taken of her having sex.

Neither of the girls met Bobby Brown during the incident.

The court heard that police went to the hotel room and that the girl who claimed she was raped at first denied being sexually assualted by the elder Brown.

The hearing was adjourned to January, when the bass guitarist is to give evidence.

Herbert Brown has been allowed bail of $40,000 and the court was told he intended to return to the United States for a kidney operation.

Brown has not been required to enter a plea at the hearing, which is to determine if there is sufficient evidence against him to commit him for trial.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (AUG. 24) UPI - The United States is expected to deliver $118 million in aid to Nicaragua next month as part of the aid package President Bush promised the country's new government, the U.S. ambassador said Friday.

The money, which will arrive in the form of a bank transfer, is the second and largest installment of the $300 million in aid approved last May by Congress.

''The exact purposes and conditions of the aid are yet to be worked out,'' U.S. Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman told United Press International in an interview. ''We believe it will come in September.''

Shlaudeman said about $50 million of the installment will be earmarked to pay off part of the approximately $240 million Nicaragua owes to the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank.

He said the United States was encouraging other Western donor countries to also deliver aid soon for the same purpose.

Shlaudeman oversaw the delivery Friday of $2 million worth of fruit and vegetable seeds that was donated by private U.S. companies to help individuals in Nicaragua survive the deep recession affecting the country.

The donated seeds, which will be distributed for private garden purposes, were arranged by U.S. Rep. Cas Ballenger, D-N.C., and by the Portland, Ore.-based Mercy Corps, a private development corporation.

''We're very anxious to see this process of democratization work here,''

Shlaudeman said of President Violeta Chamorro's 5-month-old government. ''We recognize the tremendous difficulties the government faces ... and we will do what we can to help.''

He criticized the Sandinistas for ''damaging efforts to revitalize the economy.''

''They're penalizing the whole country,'' Shlaudeman said of the Sandinistas, who lost elections to Chamorro Feb. 25 and have since been fighting her plans to change the socialist economy in favor of Western-style capitalism.

Chamorro's economic recovery plan has been suffering under Sandinista strikes and other efforts to stymie her projects. A Sandinista coalition of gasoline station operators threatened Friday to shut down their stations on Monday if Chamorro doesn't lift a newly imposed 4 percent tax.

The gasoline operators, who control the wide majority of stations in the Managua area, complained that the 4 percent tax reduces their profit per gallon to 2 percent, not including operating costs.

Like many countries, Nicaragua has been hard hit by the crisis in the Persian Gulf. Nicaragua used to receive its oil from the Soviet Union but since July 1 has been buying it from Venezuela, which along with other OPEC countries has been jacking prices.

A large portion of the remaining aid was allocated for the disarmament and resettlement of the U.S.-backed Contra rebels. They completed their disarmament in June under U.N. supervision but many continue to be fed and sheltered with the U.S. money, which has virtually dried up.

NEW YORK (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - America's 10 most beautiful women range in age from 18 to 56, from Winona Ryder to Shirley MacLaine, and most of them have to work at looking lovely.

These women include, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, Ryder, MacLaine, Isabella Rossellini, Kelly Lynch, Andie MacDowell, Farrah Fawcett, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Janet Jackson, Julia Roberts and Meg Ryan.

They follow regimens that range from Ryder's eat-anything diet to Jackson, who has switched desserts from strawberry Haagen-Dazs to a tiny cup of green wheatgrass juice.

Farrah Fawcett, 43, who bounced onto the television screen 14 years ago in "Charlie's Angels," started doing 60 sit-ups a day when she was 12. While once she had pecan pie for breakfast and mustard sandwiches for lunch, now she prefers fruits, vegetables, grilled fish and chicken. She said of herself: "There are a few lines I wish weren't there, and I could probably have less stress in my life. But Ryan (O'Neal, her off- screen companion) said something wonderful. He thinks I look better because I have character in my face and that it's very sexy."

Isabella Rossellini, 38, top model and screen star, tends to stay home at night and get eight hours of sleep ("I'm not that social") and tries to eat three meals a day. "I'm European," she said, "so I'm not obsessed with dieting."

Kelly Lynch, 30, grew up water-skiing, roller skating and windsurfing and said, "When you start out life that way, it takes a minimum amount of maintenance to keep trim." Lately she has taken up running. "You should never run so fast you can't carry on a conversation," she said, adding, "If I don't run, I tire early. When I do, I find I have much more energy."

Andie MacDowell, 32, knows she is not perfect. "My eyes are small, but I don't worry about them," she said. "I just have to wear light eye makeup. If I put on too much, it makes them look worse."

Jennifer Jason Leigh, 28, goes to a gym two to four hours a week. About diet, she said, "I avoid dairy foods, red meat, salt, sugar and white four. The diet is mostly vegetables, proteins and fruit. But eating that way gives me a lot more energy."

MacLaine, 56, exercises at least and hour a day, but she prefers to concentrate on feeling beautiful. "I'm at my best when I'm in a natural setting -- a mountain landscape with a babbling stream filled with clean, cold water." she said.

Janet Jackson, 24, organizes her exercising to keep people around her in softball or volleyball games or a group visit to a roller-skating rink. "I still have a lot of kid left in me," she said. For her perfect complexion, she swills 12 glasses of room-temperature water a day and sticks to spartan vegetarian meals, ending with that wheatgrass juice.

Julia Roberts, 22, has a personal trainer and never forgets to exercise. "I need it for my mind as well as my body; it keeps me focused and strong " she said.

Meg Ryan, 26, said "Beauty has to do with how much you like yourself, how you perceive yourself," and added, "I also understand that's easy to say but sometimes hard to do." Good health matters more to her than looking glamorous. She tries to exercise daily and drinks lots of water for her complexion.

Winona Ryder, 18, stays out of the sun, which protects her complexion, but as she told Harper's Bazaar, she is no fan of low calorie cuisine. "I love ice cream, pasta and Italian food, " she said, "and my metabolism allows me to eat what I want. I don't need to exercise to control my weight, but I should, because I have more energy and sleep better when I do."

TORONTO (AUG. 25) UPI - Residents of Vulcan, a small town in the western Canadian province of Alberta, want pointy-eared Mr. Spock of ''Star Trek'' fame to come home.

Although the Vulcans from the farming and ranching town of 1,500 aren't from Spock's dusty planet in the 1960's science fiction show, they want to arrange a large Star Trek convention next summer to celebration the show's 25th anniversary and invite Leonard Nimoy, the actor who played Spock.

The town's Economic Development Committee decided Vulcan, named more than 80 years ago for the mythical Roman god of fire, needed a gimmick to draw tourists, Mayor Bill Yee said.

''Our town, for the last 10 to 20 years, has been standing still,'' Yee said.

''We want to get our town on the map of North America,'' Yee said. ''We got the name of Vulcan and we're going to use it.''

Paramount, which owns the licensing rights to the shows, is discussing the possibility of giving the town some rights, a spokesman said.

''Right now we're at the discussion state,'' said Jonathan Zilli, Paramount director of International Licensing.

Greg Deitz, who has spearheaded part of the town's campaign, said besides inviting Nimoy to a Trekkie convention, there may be other gimmicks.

A theatre may run Star Trek repeats or the town may have a model of the starship USS Enterprise, Deitz said.

Most of the town's residents own their own pair of made-in-Hong Kong Spock ears, modeled after the ears of the fictitious Spock who had green blood.

Peter Pickersgill, editor of the local newspaper The Vulcan Advocate, which has a pair of Spock ears on the masthead, said ''it's a fun thing.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 25) UPI - The Federal Election Commission sued the National Republican Senatorial Committee for making illegal contributions totaling millions of dollars to GOP Senate candidates in 1986.

The lawsuit, filed Friday in U.S. District Court, came after the NRSC refused to accept a penalty that would require it to pay the federal government up to $2.7 million it had collected from individuals and improperly turned over to the Republican candidates.

In court papers, the FEC contends that the committee exceeded lawful contribution limits through a scheme in which it promised to ''earmark'' solicited individual donations for 12 candidates but then funneled the money to Republicans it determined needed the money most.

The suit says that in some cases candidates received tens of thousands of dollars in excess of federal limits, which cap at $17,500 the amount that political committees may contribute to federal candidates.

Officials with the Republican committee were unavailable for comment.

FEC spokesman Fred Eiland, said, ''We tried to negotiate with them, (but) could not.'' He added, ''There were serious indications of violations here.''

Ironically, the FEC refused to take action against the committee when Common Cause, a lobbying group, filed a complaint in October 1986 alleging that the scheme was improper.

Although the FEC did agree that the Republican committee violated federal law by failing to count the cost of the direct mail solicitations of the 12 candidates toward the $17,500 limit, the six FEC commissioners, three Republicans and three Democrats, split along party lines on whether to proceed on the larger complaint.

Common Cause then sued the FEC, asserting that the commission's dismissal of the complaint was ''arbitrary and capricious and contrary to law.''

In January, U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell essentially agreed with the charge and ordered the commission to reach a settlement with the Republican committee.

But the FEC failed to act, and Gesell, at the request of Common Cause, ordered the commission to explain the delay at a Sept. 7 hearing.

On Friday, Roger Witten, a Washington lawyer representing Common Cause, said, ''I believe the commission's (latest) position is well founded.'' Witten called the NRSC scheme ''outrageously in violation of the rules.'' He added, ''This was a stew of their own making.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 25) UPI - Kuwait's ambassador to the United States, Sheikh Saud Nasir al-Sabah, says his country's resistance to the Iraqi invasion is increasing and is now able ''to make life miserable for the Iraqi army.''

But that resistance, he said, is also paying a cost in lives.

Al-Sabah, a member of the Kuwaiti ruling family that is now in exile in Saudi Arabia, spoke in an interview with United Press International this week in the spacious living quarters of the Kuwait Embassy in Washington.

Sipping sweetened tea and smoking a small cigar, he apologized for appearing in what he called his ''household robe,'' a long, white silken robe with a high collar.

Normally he is seen in impeccable London-tailored suits and white-collared shirts. Bags under his eyes and occasional breaks in his voice testified to his three hours of sleep per night and an almost unbroken series of meetings, interviews and conferences at the Pentagon, the White House and the State Department.

He said many young Kuwaitis, who had been out of the country when the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion took place, are being infiltrated back into the country to lead the resistance which, he said, ''is beginning to make life miserable for the Iraqi army.''

The resistance, he said, includes nighttime snipers and, two days ago, a woman who drove a suicide car-bomb into an Iraqi military headquarters.

It also includes, he said, ''kids who make graffiti during the night.''

''Unfortunately,'' he said, ''The Iraqis caught four of them two days ago and shot them, killed them. These are brutal people.''

Kuwait women, he said, are demonstrating and this week Iraqi forces opened fire on a street demonstration, killing six women and three children.

But he believes time is on the side of the resistance, and that Saddam Hussein, the Iraqi leader, is becoming increasingly isolated in the world community, faced with a possible rebellion at home and disaffection within the military forces.

The ambassador said that Saddam has had to pull back his elite Republican Guards, who composed the main invasion force, and replace them with untrained, undisciplined young troops ''who are just sitting there in the heat and waiting. They don't know why they are there. Iraqi morale is very very low.''

Iraqi troops, he said, used to patrol the streets at night, but snipers have put an end to that. When the sun goes down, he said, the Iraqis retire to their fortified headquarters and the streets belong to the resistance.

The Iraqi military authorities, he said, have begun to move in Iraqi civilians, who are taking over Kuwaiti homes. New military occupation identity cards are being issued to the entire population.

Al-Sabah, a handsome, balding man who has the Terry-Thomas gap in his front teeth characteristic of the ruling family, for the first time expressed doubts about his government's actions in the period before the Iraqi invasion.

The United Arab Emirates, like Kuwait a small, rich and vulnerable state that was also threatened by Iraq, chose to join with U.S. military forces in a joint training exercise in the tense period before the Iraqi assault. While Kuwait was taken over, the U.A.E. was not, and has now allowed American aircraft and troops to be based in the country.

''In hindsight,'' he said, ''Maybe we should have done what the U.A.E did.''

But, he said, ''We were given assurances by four nations that Saddam Hussein wouldn't attack. Never in our dreams did we believe Iraq would use force against us. Now this horrible nightmare has become horrible reality.''

He continues to believe that time is on the side of Kuwait, that Iraq will become increasingly isolated economically and politically, and that Saddam Hussein will be forced to pull back. But he doesn't know how that will happen.

''Whether it will be peacefully or by military means, I just don't know.''

But he is convinced that if the Iraqis decide to move against the approximately 60 foreign embassies in Kuwait city, ''That will be a clear act of war. These are going to be crucial days.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 25) UPI - As the clock ran out on the Iraqi deadline for closing embassies in Kuwait, the man on the spot for the United States was Ambassador Nathaniel Howell, a 50-year-old veteran of Middle East trouble spots.

Howell and about 10 other American diplomats remained in Kuwait Friday under orders to keep the flag flying over the embassy and to try to keep in touch with an estimated 2,500 Americans believed still in the Iraqi-occupied nation.

About a dozen Iraqi soldiers clustered outside the embassy, according to the State Department, and an embassy vehicle had been rolled across the gate, preventing anybody from going in. Only one man - a non-diplomat - was permitted to leave. Food and water was reported to be in adequate supply.

Howell, a native of southern Virginia who speaks Arabic and French, waved goodbye to his wife, Margie, and more than 100 other Americans Thursday at the Iraqi border. The convoy of about 30 cars arrived Friday in Baghdad after a 19-hour journey marked by mechanical breakdowns and long waits at checkpoints, but the Americans were not allowed to leave the Iraqi capital.

Howell returned to Kuwait, with its sporadic telephone service - known to be tapped by Iraqis trying to locate Americans - and streets heavily patrolled by Iraqi troops.

The embassy set up a code system to communicate with the Americans without tipping off the Iraqis.

A career diplomat who holds a Ph.D. in government and foreign affairs from the University of Virginia, Howell is a highly regarded specialist in Arabian affairs. He has served in Cairo, Beirut and in Washington, where he was a special assistant in the State Department's Bureau of Near East and South Asian Affairs.

A burly, graying man with a close-cropped beard, Howell is regarded by his colleagues as one of the intellectuals of the foreign service. One colleague recalled that Howell was co-author of a prize-winning essay on strategy when he was a student at the National War College.

He also was given the State Department's Award for Valor for his work in Beirut in 1977, keeping in touch with the situation and Americans in Lebanon despite the civil war that was raging through the country.

One colleague, who preferred not to be identified, said, ''Howell is a pro. He's been under fire. He'll do fine.''

George Jones, a vice president of the American Foreign Service Association said, ''This is what the Foreign Service does, to obey the president's instructions. If he wants us to stay there, that's what we do.''

Howell, who has served almost exactly three years as ambassador to Kuwait, was given full authority by the State Department to make decisions on the spot, including deciding who would remain behind with him.

The only other American in Kuwait identified by the department was William Colwell, the chief consular officer.

The U.S. Embassy compound in Kuwait also sheltered about 10 other U.S. diplomats, plus an unknown number of American civilians who have taken refuge there. The department refused to give any exact numbers in order to deny the Iraqis information they might not have.

In Kennebunkport, Maine, where President Bush is on vacation, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, ''The United States will maintain its embassy in Kuwait with a small staff, headed by Ambassador Howell, to look after the interests of the American community there and as a symbol of our rejection of Iraq's illegal occupation and annexation of Kuwait.''

He added, ''We call upon Iraq to observe international agreements protecting the activities and persons of diplomatic establishments in Kuwait.''

Iraq had warned that the staff of embassies remaining open would lose their diplomatic immunity after Friday and would be treated as ''normal citizens.''

Fitzwater, asked if the United States would retaliate against Iraqi diplomats in the United States, said, ''No, it would not be appropriate.''

In Kuwait, all but two or three of the 65 embassies appeared to be defying the closure order. The Soviet Union evacuated all its diplomatic personnel but said it had not legally closed its now-empty embassy.

(AUG. 25) UPI - Some 700 Romanian riot police Friday night quelled a demonstration by several hundred rock-throwing protesters in Bucharest. It was the largest show of force since June 14th... when security forces broke up a seven-week-old protest by anti-government demonstrators. Friday's disorganized rally was the third consecutive night of anti-government protests.

The battle to dramatize the plight of those stricken with AIDS is receiving support from a somewhat UNexpected source- the nation's Rotary Clubs. Three California Rotarians tell their stories in a 30-minute documentary to be aired Monday night. One of the Rotarians is a gay man, another got AIDS through a blood transfusion and the third lost a son to the disease.

VIENNA (AUG. 25) UPI - Only about half of OPEC's 13 oil ministers have signed up for weekend emergency talks in Vienna in an indication of a split in the cartel over raising oil production in response to the Persian Gulf crisis.

A spokesman of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries confirmed that ''consultative talks'' would be held Sunday in the Austrian capital but said it was unlikely all 13 countries would be represented.

''So far only six or seven have said they will come,'' said the spokesman Friday, who declined to be identified by name. The official said other countries could sign up for the meeting up until the last minute.

In Jarkata, Indonesia's Mines and Energy Minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita said the informal talks could be upgraded to an emergency meeting if support could be gained from 10 of the 13 OPEC members.

Ginandjar told reporters before his departure for Vienna that the convening of an emergency OPEC meeting depends on the results of Sunday's session.

The OPEC spokesman said the cartel cannot make decisions on oil production quotas unless a quorum of 10 is present.

Among those who have indicated they will attend were Algeria, Qatar, Indonesia, Nigeria, Iran and Gabon. OPEC had not received confirmation from Saudi Arabia or Venezuela.

OPEC analysts in Vienna said Saudi Arabia, which failed earlier in the week to win support for a formal conference, had decided not to attend the informal talks.

Saudi Arabia has proposed a formal meeting to raise quotas to compensate for the 4 million barrels a day lost worldwide by the U.N. embargo of Kuwaiti and Iraqi crude - imposed in response to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The Saudis have threatened to increase their oil production unilaterally unless OPEC collectively approved a rise.

OPEC President Sadek Boussena Monday rejected the Saudi proposal for a formal meeting on the grounds that it was not supported by a majority.

U.S. industry sources said the Saudi proposal was opposed by a majority of seven members - Algeria, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Libya, Ecuador and Nigeria.

Three of these - Ecuador, Indonesia and Nigeria - are believed, however, to wavering in their opposition, the U.S. sources said.

Supporting the Saudi proposal to raise output are Venezuela, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Gabon and Kuwait, whose representation within the cartel may be debatable because its output is currently controlled by Iraq.

The OPEC spokesman in Vienna said Sunday's talks would consist of a series of informal, private meetings in the hotel rooms where the various delegations were staying.

OPEC President Sadek Boussena, the Algerian oil minister, was in the Saudi Arabian city of Jeddah Friday for talks with his Saudi counterpart, Hisham Nazer, OPEC's official news agency OPECNA said.

''Boussena ... will discuss with Nazer the current situation in the oil market and how best to deal with the loss of 4.6 million barrels a day of oil from Iraq and Kuwait,'' OPECNA said.

Oil prices fell early Friday, influenced partly by the prospects that the Sunday meeting would lead to a rise in OPEC production.

HARRISBURG, Pa (AUG. 25) UPI - A federal judge declared the major provisions of Pennsylvania's abortion law unconstitutional, setting the stage for an almost-certain appeal to the Supreme Court for a review of Roe vs. Wade.

U.S. District Judge Daniel Huyett III's 191-page opinion, filed in Philadelphia Friday, upheld his previous injunctions against the law.

The law, regarded as the toughest state anti-abortion legislation in the country, was passed last November by the General Assembly and signed by Democratic Gov. Robert P. Casey.

It imposed a 24-hour waiting period before women can obtain an abortion and required wives to notify their husbands of their intent to get an abortion.

A spokesman for Casey, who opposes abortion and is running for election to a second term in November, said the opinion was still being read but an appeal to the Supreme Court is likely.

''We continue to feel the law is consistent with the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court,'' said Deputy Press Secretary John Taylor. ''I don't think there's any question that the decision will be appealed.''

Casey's Republican gubernatorial opponent, Auditor General Barbara Hafer,

''would have vetoed the bill'' if she were governor when it passed, said her campaign manager, Patrick Killian.

''I'm glad the courts saw the error of (the Legislature's) ways and threw out what is a very onerous piece of legislation as far as the women of Pennsylvania are concerned,'' Killian said.

Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr., saying he was ''disappointed but not surprised,'' vowed to file an appeal with the 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals within 30 days.

Supporters of the law hope it will lead to the overturning of Roe vs. Wade the 1973 decision that legalized abortion.

In Roe, the court found a right of privacy in the Constitution that guaranteed a woman's freedom to choose abortion. It has since been bitterly opposed, primarily by religious groups, who say the ruling ignored the rights of the aborted fetus.

Huyett observed that the right to abortion is not as secure as it appeared after the Roe ruling.

''A woman's privacy rights and individual automomy may soon be subjected to the vicissitudes of the legislative process,'' Huyett wrote. ''Therefore, the protection afforded will depend on the ballot box and the nature of the protection, if any, could vary from term to term depending on the composition of the Legislature.''

Apparently left intact after Huyett's ruling was a provision in the law barring so-called sex-selection abortions. The provision was not challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union, which filed the suit.

The ACLU also did not directly challenge the ban on abortions after 24 weeks, but instead objected to the term ''medical emergency,'' saying it was too vague to provide any real protection. By barring the term, Huyett said he had rendered the provision unenforceable.

During a trial that ended earlier this month in Reading, the American Civil Liberties Union asked Huyett to declare the 1989 law and a similar 1988 law unconstitutional.

Thomas Zemaitis, a Philadelphia lawyer for the ACLU, said in closing arguments that the laws ''deprive women of dignity.''

''There can be no doubt that the challenged portions (of the laws) interfere with a woman's fundamental right in precisely the way condemned by Roe vs. Wade and cases following that,'' Zemaitis said.

The restrictive provisions are either unconstitutionally vague or violate free speech, privacy and equal protection laws, Zemaitis said.

Senior Deputy State Attorney General Kate Mershimer argued that the controls were legitimately devised by the state to protect and promote the health of women without placing undue burdens on them.

Mershimer also contended both laws fall well within the guidelines prescribed by the Supreme Court when the court broadened the states' regulatory powers on abortion in last year's Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services decision.

Howard Fetterhoff, executive director of the Pennsylvania Catholic Conference which lobbied for the law, said the ruling was disappointing but not unexpected.

''I'm hoping, as most people on our side are, the law will be appealed to the Supreme Court and will get a more favorable decision,'' Fetterhoff said.

Linda Wharton, an attorney for the Pennsylvania ACLU, said the case ''could well offer the post-Brennan Supreme Court its first opportunity to overturn Roe vs. Wade. If that happens, we could wind up back in the days when abortion was unsafe and illegal.''

RENO, NV (AUG. 25) UPI - A judge rejected a landmark product liability suit against the heavy metal band Judas Priest, ruling that messages unintentionally embedded in the band's music did not lead two young men to commit suicide.

State District Judge Jerry Whitehead rejected the $6.2 million suit Friday by the families of Raymond Belknap and James Vance, who claimed a subliminal message of ''do it'' on the album ''Stained Class'' made the two shoot themselves in 1985.

However, the judge awarded $40,000 in sanctions against CBS Records, which released the album and was sued along with the band, on grounds it attempted to withhold original master recordings for the album.

Whitehead said the families lost the case ''because they failed to prove that defendants intentionally placed subliminal messages on the album and that those messages were a cause'' of the suicide pact between Belknap and Vance.

The judge said in his 93-page ruling that the ''do it'' message heard on the song ''Better by You, Better by Me'' was a combination of a singer exhaling on one track and a guitar playing on another track.

Whitehead said ''the words 'do it' are the result of a chance combination of sounds: The words were not intentionally formed.''

The judge said there was ''credible factual support from a lay witnesss'' that the Belknap and Vance perceived the subliminal message. But he said other factors prompted the suicide of ''these troubled young men.''

For the families to collect money, Whitehead said, they would have had to show a ''clear, conscious and intentional act'' on the part of Judas Priest.

Whitehead listened to 43 witnesses during 19 days of testimony, which ended Aug. 10.

If successful, the product liability lawsuit could have had far-reaching effects of the record industry, forcing companies to screen lyrics or face the possibility of having to pay huge punitive damages in similar cases.

Kenneth McKenna, attorney for the Belknap family, said he was disappointed with the ruling but predicted, ''This will not be the last case. There will be others and sooner or later someone will win.''

But McKenna said he doubted there would be an appeal of Whitehead's ruling.

The band's lead singer, Rob Halford, praised the ruling, saying it was a ''great day for Judas Priest and for all the artists of America.''

''Artists of all kinds have learned enough in this trial to know that anything with the word 'subliminal' is like playing with a stick of dynamite,'' Halford said in a telephone interview from Mexico, where he is on vacation.

''There are going to be two-bit lawyers waiting in the wings to run out at any given opportunity to slap a lawsuit on any artist.''

The parents sued Judas Priest and CBS, claiming the subliminal messages drove the young men to make a suicide pact after listening to the music for several hours while drinking beer and smoking marijuana.

Halford denied there were any hidden messages on the album but admitted under cross-examination that he once recorded a backward message on another album as an artistic experiment.

Belknap, 18, and Vance, 20, listened to the Judas Priest album for hours as they drank and smoked marijuana on Dec. 23, 1985, before tearing up

Belknap's room and taking a sawed-off shotgun to a nearby playground.

Belknap put the gun to his throat and pulled the trigger, killing himself instantly. Vance then shot himself - blowing away the lower portion of his face - but lived three years before dying of complications from his wounds.

Lawyers for the parents argued that ''Stained Class'' contains subliminal messages and other hidden phrases that can only be heard when the album is played backward. They also maintained the masked messages can be unscrambled by the subconscious mind, no matter which direction the record is played.

They said the message ''do it'' was concealed in ''Better by You, Better by Me.'' But Halford maintained the so-called subliminal message was the exhalation of his breath and a combination of other studio sounds.

Halford performed part of the song in court, singing the lyrics, ''Better by me, better than you. You can tell her what I want it to be.'' He said the exhalations demonstrated in court were the same he uses when performing.

In at least three previous cases - in California, Georgia and New Jersey - fans of heavy metal have killed themselves after listening to the album ''Suicide Solution'' by the rock singer Ozzy Ozbourne, another artist who has recorded for CBS.

The California case was dismissed before coming to trial when a court ruled that song lyrics were protected by the free speech provisions of the First Amendment. The Georgia case is still pending, and heavy metal is no longer a factor in the New Jersey case.

PASADENA, CA (AUG. 25) UPI - NASA engineers are trying to understand why they twice lost contact with the valuable Magellan space probe orbiting Venus and brace for the problem to occur again.

The scientists released Friday new images of the surface of Venus, including a picture of a crater 20 miles in diameter, collected by Magellan before trouble began as a sample of will be produced once the problem is finally solved.

But in the meantime, technicians pored over data from the spacecraft's memory in search of the cause of the glitches and assembled emergency plans in case it happens again.

''We're concerned that we're dealing with a problem that is not an isolated failure. We're concerned that there is something external that is initiating these probelms and it may happen again. So we're getting ready '' said project engineer John Slonski.

''It's our job now to look at all the possibilities and pick the ones that are the most likely and then protect ourselves against recurrence,'' he said at a news conference at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Slonski stressed the craft appears to be in good shape, is safe and has been able to keep itself in a stable configuration while out of touch with its handlers about 145 million miles away on Earth.

''The spacecraft is pointing at the Earth, the solar panels are pointing at the sun and the spacecraft is stable,'' he said.

Engineers are studying a variety of theories, including the possibility of a glitch ''lurking in the software'' or that the craft's a solid rocket motor failed to completely separate when the probe went into orbit around Venus Aug. 10, said project manager Anthony Spear.

''What we know is the computer ran away, ran amok'' at that point, Spear said.

But until they uncover the cause, workers were compiling a list of commands to send to the craft to restore contact if the problem occurs again and moving the craft into a less intense safety mode to give them added protection.

''In case we never find the exact cause of this problem I want a safing action that the spacecraft takes to establish quick communications to Earth. My heart can't stand this 17-hour loss of signal,'' Spear said.

Engineers had hoped to begin 243 days of mapping the cloud-shrouded surface of Venus Sept. 1 using Magellan's high-tech radar. But the work now will probably not begin until mid-September at the earliest, Spear said.

''This is very contingent on what the problem is and how many more problems we're going to get hit by,'' he said.

Scientists involved in the $551 million project hope detailed images of Venus will help them understand what created the planet's hellish environment and provide insights into what could happen to Earth.

Test images taken before the spacecraft lost contact showed a tortured planet wracked by volcanos, lava-filled valleys and giant fault systems indicative of frequent ''venusquakes.''

''We're really milking the data,'' Spear said. ''However ... we're going to turn the spigot on soon once we get this ... spacecraft incident squared away.''

Engineers were testing the radar system Aug. 16 when the spacecraft went into a state of protective hibernation. Magellan was out of contact with Earth when the event occurred and contact was not restored until the following day.

Workers were studying what put the spacecraft into hibernation when Magellan's radio signal faded again Tuesday. Ground controllers ordered the craft to ignore certain aspects of its protective computer programming and search for Earth, restoring contact after about 17 tense hours.

While Magellan was out of contact Tuesday, the 2 1/2-ton craft burned an unusual amount of fuel and a master computer switched back and forth, indicating the craft had moved back and forth like a ''pendulum'' for some reason, Slonski said.

WOODBURY, N.Y. (AUG. 25) UPI - The safety chain or lock on a ride at a church fair broke, catapulting a 6-year-old boy from his seat on the ''Swinger'' and into a fence, police said Saturday.

David Green, of Oyster Bay, was treated and released at Syosset Hospital for head contusions and abrasions after the 10 p.m. Friday accident at the Holy Name of Jesus Church Fair, said Nassau County police.

The little boy was riding in a swing-type seat on the ''Swinger'' ride, which is suspended by chains and swings the rider in a 360-degree circle, police said.

''The safety chain or lock on the youth's seat broke, and the boy was sent into the air, striking a fence,'' a statement from police said.

A spokesman for police said it was not known if anyone was riding with the little boy when the accident occurred.

The ride, owned by Louis J. Newton & Sons, of Northport, was shut down following the mishap, and an investigation into the accident was continuing.

(AUG. 25) UPI - The United States introduced a draft resolution to the U-N Security Council late Friday night... calling for military forces in the Persian Gulf to use- quote- ''measures commensurate to the specific circumstances as may be necessary.'' Previously, the U-S-offered measure called for the use of ''minimum force'' to ensure compliance with U-N sanctions against Iraq. The new wording appears to be a compromise to win the support of the Soviet Union.

Earlier on Friday, Moscow voiced support for the use of force to ensure the success of the U-N embargo against Iraq. However, Moscow said it still hopes to achieve a negotiated end to the standoff in the Middle East. The new proposal is expected to be hammered out by the 15 members of the Security Council and voted on before dawn Saturday. Approval calls for nine affirmative votes with NONE of the five permanent members vetoing.

Judicial sources in the Salvadoran capital say a soldier ordered held in the November massacre of six Jesuit priests dashed out of the courtroom Friday. The soldier in question offered false testimony and was implicated as a participant by several soldiers detained for the slayings. Also Friday, the judge hearing the case refused a defense motion to transfer the case. The defense is expected to appeal the ruling... which could stall the slow-moving investigation.

The U-S ambassador to Nicaragua says some 118-Million dollars in U-S aid is expected to arrive in the Latin American country next month. Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman told U-P-I Friday that the terms of the aid have NOT yet been worked out, but says 50-Million dollars has been earmarked to offset a 240-Million-dollar debt Nicaragua has with international lendors. The package is the second and largest installment of assistance from Washington since Violeta Chamorro became president.

(AUG. 25) UPI - Sudanese rebels, concerned about another famine, are allowing food shipments to resume through the southern part of the African nation. Between 1986 and 1989, an estimated 300-thousand people died of hunger in the region... with transportation problems related to the war blamed as a key reason. A Red Cross official says he understands a trainload of food is already headed for the open border.

A New York medical professor has a new idea for encouraging organ donations. Dr. Felix Rappaport told a conference of transplant specialists meeting in San Francisco Friday that organ donors should be honored as ''Heroes of the Nation'' and ''given equal status with war veterans.'' Rappaport says Mexico is already considering a program to provide burial costs and special recognition to organ donors.

(AUG. 25) UPI - In the middle of a pennant race, the Boston Red Sox turned to a rookie who was coming off his worst start of his career to keep the Blue Jays from flying into a tie for first.

Dana Kiecker, starting in place of Boston ace Roger Clemens who was given an extra day's rest, did the job by scattering five hits over eight innings to lead Boston Friday night to a 2-0 victory over Toronto at the SkyDome.

With the win, Toronto fell to two games behind the AL East leading Red Sox.

Kiecker, 5-6, who entered the 1990 season with no-major league service, benefited from run-scoring singles by Mike Marshall and Tom Brunansky in the top of the ninth inning which broke a scoreless tie.

Jeff Gray retired the side in the ninth to earn his fifth save.

Duane Ward, 2-7, who allowed both runs on four hits over two innings of relief, took the loss.

Kiecker's performance impressed Boston Manager Joe Morgan.

''This was a game, even with Roger pitching tomorrow, we really couldn't afford to lose,'' Morgan said. ''It was a big effort by us and an even bigger effort by Kiecker.

''He threw harder tonight than I thought he could throw, and we had just enough offense to win, didn't we?''

Kiecker might have had enough offense but he was happy the Red Sox had enough faith in him. Kiecker failed to retire a batter in his last start, on Aug. 21, a 9-5 loss against Baltimore in which he allowed four runs.

''When you come off a start like I had, you want to get back in there as soon as you can,'' Kiecker said. ''It gave Roger and Greg (Harris) another days rest, but I appreciated getting the opportunity to get back in there right away.''

This time Kiecker stayed in the game after throwing 121 pitches.

Clemens, 18-5, will start against Toronto on Saturday, will have to work hard to improve upon Kiecker's performance.

Looking ahead, Gaston added a final thought.

''It won't be easy tommorrow against Roger. We've definetly got our work cut out for us now.''

Kiecker constantly frustrated Toronto, despite getting in trouble by walking four Jays, but proved good enough to blank them through eight innings.

''My job, especially on the road, is to keep us in the game as long as I can,'' Kiecker said. ''Sometimes it's not pretty, but as long as we win, that's the main thing.''

Meanwhile Marshall, who was traded from the Mets to the Boston in late July, downplayed his contribution and gave all the credit to the 29-year old right-hander.

''Dana Kiecker won this game for us tonight. He pitched a great eight innings and without him, we lose this game.''

(AUG. 25) UPI - Iraq encircled the U.S. Embassy and some 20 other foreign missions in occupied Kuwait Saturday, cutting off their water, power and telephone links and using troops and tanks to prevent food supplies entering the compounds, diplomats said.

At the United Nations, the Security Council voted early Saturday to back a U.S. proposal to use limited military force to implement the worldwide U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

The resolution, backed by the Soviet Union and a surprise vote by China, in effect would allow the United States and other nations to stop, by force if necessary, vessels trying to violate the U.N. embargo against Iraq.

Iraq blocked more than 100 American diplomats and their dependents from leaving the country. Iraqi officials said in Bagdhad they would keep male diplomats hostage but allow their families to leave.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Friday called on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to remove his occupation forces from the tiny emirate or face the consequences.

''The Iraqis are blockading the embassies and trying to starve the diplomats out,'' a West European diplomat monitoring the Kuwait situation from the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain said in a telephone interview.

''(Saddam) has condemned the U.N. embargo on Iraq but he is doing exactly the same thing to the diplomats in Kuwait,'' the envoy said. ''The Iraqis have cut power and water off to many compounds. In this heat, we don't know how long they will be able to last and who will crack first.

''The Iraqis have also cut the telephone and telex links of some embassies ... only those with radio communications can get messages through, the rest are in the dark ... they can only listen to the radio.''

It was not immediately clear how long diplomats in embassies of the United States, members of the 12-member European Community, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, China, Sweden, Poland, Yugoslavia, Canada and Bangladesh were required by their governments to resist the blockade.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher asked the four remaining British diplomats in Kuwait to stay put for as long as possible, and warned that individual Iraqi soldiers and civilians would be held responsible if any harm befell either the envoys or British citizens held ''as guests'' in the emirate.

It appeared unlikely, however, that Iraqi troops would storm embassy compounds and use force after a midnight deadline passed for all missions to shut down and transfer their operations from Kuwait to Baghdad.

Some missions took the Iraqi siege in their stride. The Foreign Office in London said the British ambassador in Kuwait and three remaining British diplomats were sipping champagne by candlelight in the absence of water and power.

Other missions such as those of Yugoslavia were apparently frustrated by their inability to communicate with the foreign ministry in Belgrade to receive fresh instructions.

The Japanese, Indian and Soviet missions evacuated their staff for fear of possible Iraqi retaliation.

In Amman, Jordanian Crown Prince Hassan called in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. for a lull in the campaign against Iraq, to give diplomacy a chance to find a peaceful solution. Jordan's King Hussein was expected to visit Baghdad in a last-ditch attempt to reach some form of compromise.

The vulnerable Hashemite kingdom, whose borders touch militarily powerful Iraq, was the first to obey Baghdad and close down its Kuwait mission.

Jordan on Friday reopened its border with Iraq to allow 20,000 mostly Egyptian refugees to stream through daily. There were still more than two million Egyptian, Yemeni and Western workers in Iraq and Kuwait.

Damascus Radio reported Saturday that thousands of Egyptian workers escaping from Iraq and Kuwait through Jordan would be allowed to return home through Syrian ports. Damascus, together with Egypt and Morocco, has sent troops to Saudi Arabia as part of a pan-Arab force to defend the kingdom from Iraqi attack.

In Ankara, Turkey said it might be forced to close its border with Iraq to prevent an outflow of refugees. Ankara, which abided by U.N. sanctions and stopped the flow of Iraqi oil through a Turkish overland pipeline, said it could not cope with a large refugee influx.

In the gulf, shipping sources in Dubai said they spotted the battleship USS Wisconsin - an Iowa-class vessel with nine 16-inch guns and 12 five-inch guns - steaming through the Strait of Hormuz toward the central Gulf.

The veteran ship's heavy guns, which can fire 1-ton shells, could be used to bombard targets in Iraq in case hostilities erupt between Baghdad and U.S.-led forces gathered in Saudi Arabia to deter Iraqi aggression.

Egyptian shipping officials said the U.S. carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower was reported to have left the Red Sea and returned to the Mediterranean through the Suez Canal with two accompanying U.S. warships.

The shipping officials said the U.S. aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and supporting vessels were expected to replace the Eisenhower in the Red Sea.

In London, the wife of a British diplomat who fled Kuwait said Western nationals trapped in the oil-rich emirate wanted the U.S. military to intervene.

''Get the Americans in here fast,'' the woman told Britain's Independent Television News.

Baghdad Radio reported Saturday that Austrian President Kurt Waldheim arrived in the Iraqi capital from Amman for talks aimed at defusing the crisis that erupted after Iraq siezed Kuwait in a lightning attack Aug. 2.

Iraq announced its decision to allow families of diplomats of countries that have not complied with Iraq's decision to close its embassies in Kuwait, to leave Iraq. Baghdad Radio quoted an Iraqi official spokesman who said the decision was taken on humanitarian grounds and in response to an appeal by Jordan's King Hussein.

The spokesman, however, specified the decision did not pertain to men who would be forbidden from leaving Iraq until their countries complied with the closure order.

In another political move, Moscow invited Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid for talks. Egypt has taken the leading role in the Arab role to try to force Iraq out of Kuwait.

The United States, the 12-member European Community, China, Japan, Yugoslavia, Austria and other nations have refused the order to close the embassies, saying it would be a tacit admission that Iraq's announced annexation of the oil-rich emirate was valid.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States had evidence Iraq was attempting to violate U.N. economic sanctions by arranging shipments of war materials and chemical weapons.

Fitzwater said he did not know how many of the 62 embassies in Kuwait would remain open, but the majority of nations indicated they would comply with a U.N. resolution that deemed the annexation of Kuwait illegal.

Lebanon, however, recalled its ambassador for consultations while India said it would close its mission and Brazil said it would close temporarily.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh said Friday that the Soviet Union had pulled all of its embassy personnel from Kuwait and closed its doors, although legally the mission remains open.

''The situation made it impossible for them to do their work there,'' he said.

UNITED NATIONS (AUG. 25) UPI - The U.N. Security Council decision early Saturday to authorize limited force against ships breaking the Iraqi economic embargo was seen as a hard fought victory for the United States.

Washington, which has stationed about 40 warships in the Persian Gulf, initially said it would unilaterally use force to prevent Iraqi ships from loading or unloading shipments, but then laid low, waiting for a U.N. vote that would present a united front to Iraq.

The council voted 13-0 to approve the use of ''minimal force'' - which it did not define - against suspected embargo violators after a week of negotiations between the five permanent members of the council, which includes the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China. Non-permanent members Cuba and Yemen abstained from the final vote, saying evidence showed the embargo was working without the use of force.

Britain and France were strong supporters of the measure, having sent warships to the area to join the U.S. forces in implementing the sanctions. But sources said China and the Soviet Union had to be convinced of the measure's merit in long negotiating sessions. The final vote came at 4 a.m. EDT.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering said his government was ''gratified'' by the vote, which he called ''historic and significant.''

He said the resolution gave sufficient authority for a broad use of ''minimum force'' on the high seas to prevent ships from breaking the embargo.

Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amair Al-Anbari told the council that the resolution was ''unjustifiable'' and ''very dangerous'' because it did not give the Security Council or the U.N. secretary-general ''any real authority in supervising the use of force by states.''

The resolution set ''no real limits, boundaries for the use of force in high seas,'' Al-Anbari said.

The United Nations imposed the embargo Aug. 6 to punish the government of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for rejecting a Security Council demand that he withdraw his more than 100,000 troops from Kuwait. Iraq invaded the emirate, the third largest oil exporting country in the world, on Aug. 2.

Saturday's resolution, the fifth measure against Iraq since the invasion, allowed countries that cooperate with Kuwait and which have maritime forces in the area to ''use such measures commensurate to the specific circumstances as may be necessary under the authority of the Security Council to halt all inward and outward maritime shipping.''

It warships can stop ships suspected of breaking the embargo but did not specify how the ships could be stopped. The United States lobbed warning shots across the bows of two Iraqi oil tankers last week, but did not stop them when they proceeded on course.

French Ambassador Pierre-Louis Blanc said the use of minimum force should be applied ''at the last resort'' to verify cargoes and their destinations.

Along with the five permanent members, the non-permanent members which supported the U.S. proposal were Canada, Colombia, Finland, Malaysia, Ethiopia, Ivory Coast, Zaire and Romania.

Soviet deputy U.N. permanent representative Valentin Lozinskiy accused Iraq of continued defiance of U.N. resolutions and for taking ''steps contrary to the U.N. Charter and to challenge the international community.''

''The Soviet Union cannot fail to have serious concern with regards to violations by Iraq,'' Lozinskiy said of Moscow's former strong ally.

''While it is necessary to ensure the implementation of the sanctions resolution, very limited means of force can be used,'' he said.

The wording in the adopted document was a compromise to win support from the Soviet Union, which said that it would only join a multinational naval force set up by the Security Council.

YOKOSUKA, JAPAN (AUG. 25) UPI - A flotilla of Greenpeace boats tried Saturday to block a U.S. warship with nuclear capability from reaching its new home port, but was held aside by government patrol boats, the environmental group said.

Greenpeace dispatched 13 boats to protest the arrival of the U.S. destroyer Hewitt to its new homeport at the U.S. Naval base in Yokosuka, 30 miles south from Tokyo, Greenpeace spokesman Naoki Ohara said.

About a dozen Maritime Safety Agency patrol boats blocked the Greenpeace vessels, keeping all out of the path of the U.S. warship as it made its first entry into the port, Ohara said.

Greenpeace launched its ''Nuclear Free Seas'' campaign July 6 after the aircraft carrier USS Midway, which is capable of carrying nuclear weapons, docked at Yokosuka following a pair of explosions onboard, he said.

The U.S. Navy, adhering to a longstanding policy, would not confirm if the Hewitt was carrying nuclear weapons.

ADDIS ABABA, ETHIOPIA (AUG. 25) UPI - Almost half a million Liberian refugees have fled to three countries adjacent to strife-torn nation, a fact-finding group from the Organization of African Unity reported Saturday.

Back from a tour of west African countries, the OAU mission said it estimated there were now 300,000 Liberian refugees in Guinea, 60,000 in Sierra Leone and 117,000 in the Ivory Coast, most of them women and children escaping Liberia's 8-month-old brutal civil war.

Acting secretary general of the 51-nation OAU, M.T. Mapuranga, called on all west African countries to help resolve the burgeoning refugee problem.

The OAU, Africa's oldest cooperative international organization, headquartered in Ethiopia, pledged at its annual heads of state summit in July to try to solve the plight of the continent's estimated 5 million refugees and 12 million displaced persons.

Tens of tousands of Liberians have died, most the victims of grisly massacres, since rebel leader Charles Taylor led a band of heavily armed men and women into eastern Liberia on Christmas Eve last year.

Taylor, who vowed to end the 10-year rule of President Samuel Doe, fought his way to the suburbs of Liberia's capital Monrovia. But his movement stalled when Doe launched a last-ditch resistance and when his own band split into two factions.

More and more members of the Gio and Mano tribes that supported Taylor have been fleeing Liberia because Doe's troops have targeted them for reprisal massacres, officials said.

The OAU also announced Saturday it would send an observer to Gambia to attend talks aimed at stopping the Liberian conflict.

On Friday, Taylor said he would attend the talks, sponsored by the Economic Community of West African States, ECOWAS, despite his pledge to take up arms against an ECOWAS peace-keeping force currently trying to enter Liberia.

PARIS (AUG. 25) UPI - Four Iraqi pilots arrested after having ''escaped'' from a French air base remained restricted to the military compound Saturday, authorities said.

The four were among 12 Iraqi pilots whose training missions in France were suspended following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Police at Orly Airport arrested one of the pilots Friday as he attempted to board a Royal Jordanian flight for Amman. Authorities said he left the training base at Rochefort, in western France, telling officers that he was visiting a girlfriend in a nearby town.

The three other pilots were arrested Thursday night on a train bound for Paris, apparently with the intention of returning to Iraq, officials said.

None of the pilots were carrying passports, according to authorities.

The presence of the Iraqis has posed a diplomatic dilemma for French authorities. Officials have declined to call the pilots captives or hostages for fear of comparisons with Westerners held by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, but have nonetheless declined to allow them to return home.

Defense ministry officials said the pilots would be restricted to the air base but that they would be ''free to circulate within the base.''

Interior ministry officials said police acted on the authority of a 1946 law that limits the validity of a foreign national's residence permit according to his or her activity. The pilots' residence permits are valid only for the air base and they would therefore require safe-conduct passes from French military authorities to leave the country, officials said.

Up to now, there has been no formal Iraqi request for the return of the pilots, according to officials.

Defense officials said the pilots have been transferred to another location at the base ''for their own security'' where they can be more closely watched.

(AUG. 25) UPI - Around the world... around the clock, U-P-I has the latest news.

The U-N Security Council is considering a U-S-sponsored resolution that would allow military force to make sure U-N economic sanctions against Iraq are enforced. The proposal would permit countries with military forces in the Persian Gulf to use limited force if necessary to impose the economic embargo.

MOSCOW (AUG. 25) UPI - Hundreds of people demanding better supplies of food and consumer goods in the Siberian city of Chelyabinsk stormed the local police headquarters in mass riots, injuring an undisclosed number of people, the Soviet news agency said Saturday.

The unrest in Chelyabinsk, a major western Siberian industrial center of 1.1 million people in the southern foothills of the Ural Mountains, began Thursday when a store refused to sell alcohol but mushroomed into an insurrection against local authorities.

''At midnight (Friday), protesters held a rally outside the (local Communist) Party headquarters demanding better supplies of food and consumer goods,'' Tass said.

An estimated 1,500 rioters also demanded increased supplies of cigarettes. A wave of protests over tobacco shorages has swept the country in recent weeks, and Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov said on television late Friday that the government had taken steps to increase imports and production.

The Chelyabinsk regional party chief, government head and other officials tried to calm the crowd ''but were met with jeers and curses blurted out through bullhorns,'' Tass reported.

Several local deputies persuaded police not to use force, saying they would take responsibility for maintaining law and order, but the throng ''marched on, smashing several cars and an ambulance on its way,'' Tass said.

The rioters went to the city's Interior Ministry building, where they demanded the release of previously detained protesters and tried to storm it but were repulsed by local police, the news agency said.

The latest Tass report said ''new casualties have been reported and more people were detained'' as a result of the rampage against police headquarters.

In an earlier report, Tass said 17 policemen and one rioter had been hurt in rampages in which ''drunken youths armed with sticks and stones'' smashed police cars and broke bus windows. A total of 138 people were arrested, it said, but the agency did not disclose the number of casualties.

Local officials in Chelyabinsk said they were receiving dozens of phone calls demanding an end to the riots, and workers were forming vigilante brigades to enforce the law, the news agency said.

Chelyabinsk, founded in 1736 as a Russian frontier outpost, is a major stop on the trans-Siberian railroad. It is a center of ore processing, steel production and farm-machinery manufacturing.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AUG. 25) UPI - The Brazilian government has hatched a new plan to help save the Amazon jungle - the ''lungs'' of the Earth - from systematic destruction that is believed to be contributing heavily to global warming.

But some worry the forest protection initiative will end up a failure, like so many other plans involving a wilderness half the size of the United States.

The new plan is to eliminate tax breaks now given to farmers in the Amazon basin who are making money by chopping down the very forests the government says it is trying to save.

The assumption is that by eliminating the subsidies, farmers will find it more profitable to move elsewhere instead of chopping down trees for lumber and burning hundreds of thousands of acres to make way for ranches and fields of cotton, sugar cane and other products.

But Brazilian environmentalists are skeptical.

They say the plan won't help turn back the erosion caused by settlers and corporate interests, whih have already wiped out an area roughly twice the size of Connecticut this year alone.

The destruction of the Amazon has caused an international furor because scientists believe the vast jungle plays a key role in regulating the Earth's ecosystem, particularly in regard to carbon dioxide, the key ''greenhouse'' gas linked to global warming.

Through the process of photosynthesis by trees, the Amazon soaks up enormous quantities of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and converts it to life-sustaining oxygen, much like the lungs replenish oxygen in the body.

In addition to losing that exchange capacity, deforestation releases carbon stored in wood that escapes when trees are burned or are chopped down and decay.

A recent report by the World Resources Institute, an environmental think-tank based in Washington, recently estimated that deforestation contributes 33 percent of annual carbon dioxide emissions caused by humans.

Citing these statistics, environmentalists have repeatedly urged the Brazilian government to protect the Amazon, where an estimated 10 million to 20 million acres a year are lost. Scientists believe 15 percent of the forest is already destroyed.

Agriculture Minister Antonio Cabrera Filho told reporters Aug. 23 that government subsidy cuts would deter would-be Amazon settlers, thus protecting the jungle against further encroachment.

''The lack of agriculture subsidies in the Amazon constitutes a drastic action to protect the region,'' Cabrera said, explaining that without price supports, farming the Amazon would not be cost effective.

Subsidies were cut on cultivation of wood, cotton, sugar cane and cattle, among others, said agriculture spokesperson Angela Nobrega Friday.

But in order to guarantee the 12 million inhabitants of the Amazon would not go hungry, Cabrera said the government would maintain subsidies and complete tax exemptions to farmers growing or gathering basic food stuffs, among them rice.

''The idea is the subsidies farmers to produce only those products native to the Amazon like the guarana (a tropical fruit), rubber, chesnuts or jute,'' used for making bags and ropes, Cabrera said.

The minister said the government would not give tax breaks or subsidies to farmers exporting products out of the Amazon, a practice which had enabled the goods to sell for artificially low prices in other parts of Brazil.

Cabrera said the government measures would continue ''until man knows the region well, and is capable of using it rationally.''

He said keeping some subsidies in Brazil was not unreasonable in view of the subsidies, which he estimated at $250 billion a year, that Western industrialized nations pay to their farmers, directly or indirectly.

But Brazilian environmentalists were skeptical of the plan, and one, Anivaldo Padilha, said that eliminating subsidies may in fact cause greater destruction by driving farmers deeper in the forest in search of potentially lucrative pursuits like gold prospecting.

SAUDI ARABIA (AUG. 25) UPI - ''The American soldiers are lost in the sands,'' crackled the female voice speaking on the radio from Iraq. ''Go home, American occupation troops, home to your wives and children, before you are swallowed up by the sands of Saudi Arabia.''

U.S. Marines deployed in Saudi Arabia to protect it from a potential Iraqi attack pay about as much attention to this sort of daily broadcast by ''Baghdad Bertha'' as they did to ''Tokyo Rose'' and ''Hanoi Jane,'' employed by earlier enemies of Washington.

''Makes you want to shoot whoever is at the mike,'' sneered a marine sergeant named Tony from San Diego. ''So we are occupying Saudi Arabia? And they are just visiting Kuwait. Gimme a break will ya?''

The first overnight visit by four reporters to units deployed closest to Iraqitroops revealed a widespread desire among the troops to prove their military prowess against the armies of President Saddam Hussein.

Saddam's hostage-taking, his personification of nastiness has given many exactly what they want: the first chance to again establish the Marine Corps' legendary battle honors against a clear-cut and formidable enemy since their ignominious 1983 retreat from Beirut after more than 200 were killed in a suicide bomb attack on the U.S. Marine Compound.

Grenada and Panama would be mere skirmishes compared with this potential conflict, and the typical marine's confidence is clearly rooted in knowledge that he is well trained to use top-line equipment believed to be superior to the Soviet-supplied Iraqi military.

''You don't want to risk your life, but you want to test your training,'' explained a lance corporal from Milwaukee named John, 26. ''They have been telling us for years that the U.S. Marine Corps is the best in the world, and this could be our final exam. There ain't nobody in the world that is invincible. But we could be the closest thing to it.''

Unlike the lightly armed airborne divisions that swiftly landed after Washington decided to commit troops to defend Saudi Arabia, the Marine Expeditionary Brigade arrived ready to fight a war on its own for 30 days without resupply.

The group, which normally has about 16,500 men, has Sea Harriers and F/A-18 fighters, Cobra helicopter gunships, armor, artillery, anti-tank jeeps, and a massive inventory of support vehicles to give the force total mobility.

Most of their equipment is like new, having been stored, unused, for several years in the Maritime Preposition Force stationed at the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia for exactly such an event in the Middle East.

The Marines are scattered across the desert dunes ready for orders to advance toward Kuwait or to defend Saudi Arabia should there be an invasion by the Iraqi force in the emirate of more than 170,000 men and some 1,000 tanks.

Col. Carl Fulford said some U.S. special forces were near the Kuwaiti frontier to assist in directing U.S. air and naval fire support for troops from Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Morocco and other Arab nations if Iraq invades.

But he said his battalion of 7,000 marines, scattered in an arc across a stretch of desert that cannot be named for security purposes, represented the effective front line of the U.S. ground forces deployed so far, an estimated total of about 40,000 personnel.

''The lethality of this battlefield in the matter of one day can outshine the entire Vietnam War,'' said Fulford, who served in the Asian conflict.

Saddam ''has missed his window of opportunity,'' Fulford said. ''One week or 10 days ago he could have occupied the area. Now he would have a real fight on his hands.''

His boast was born out by the troops, who to all appearances have made themselves at home in one of the planet's harshest enviornments.

They have gone to ground, living rough to acclimatize themselves with the grime and heat that at noon usually rests at 113 degrees F.

There are no luxuries and little glamor, but the soldiers are highly mobile and fitted out to be able to sever the umbilical supply line and fight autonomously for several days.

Training is nearly constant during nighttime hours, when the natural oven turns down and dust will not indicate where the Marines are stationed.

Tracked armored personnel carriers grind across desert mounds and hollows during nocturnal maneuvers like giant steel beetles.

The speed and sureness of the drivers seem inexplicable until one puts on night-vision goggles and scans the desert, which is transformed into green landscape as clear as day.

Somewhere in the distance hums the wafting clatter of U.S. gunships on night missions to test terrain-hugging flight tactics.

Daylight proves the theater to be far less surreal, with marines under orders to rest beneath camouflage shrouds set on the bleak moonscape, cleaning their weapons and constantly guzzling water.

Sustenance comes in a brown plastic bag, a ''Meal, Ready to Eat,'' about 3,500 calories of fodder prepared sometime ago in Cincinatti, Ohio.

There are favorite MREs and scorned MREs, but among the most desired marine cuisine is a lurid concoction of a pork patty, cheese spread, salt, tobasco sauce, and crushed crackers, all rehydrated into a mushy mix with a splash of water.

In the desolate region there is virtually no local population, and the Marines go about their tasks unseen and unheard by Saudi citizens.

The Marines are ready to do what Washington requests, but many said they hope this does not mean long-term deployment in the sands because of a political stalemate with Baghdad.

''Tell the mothers of America that their family names will be upheld,'' chuckled one officer. ''There is no beer, no women. ... And we certainly won't be leaving any Amer-Arabs behind.''

This Marine unit was based at 29 Palms, California, a desert training school which members said makes them well suited for this Middle East mission.

They have been issued special equipment required for confronting Iraq, particularly its known arsenal of chemical weapons.

A horn suddenly sounds and the marines instantly spring to action, shouting ''gas, gas,'' as they pass on the message to don protective masks a drill that takes nine seconds.

At one location, about 30 marines practiced with rubber boots and gloves and full body suits, charcoal-impregnated uniforms that prevent chemical agents from seeping through, but give the soldiers the appearance of Michelin men in camouflage.

The exercise is done at noon on top of a sand dune, and the soldiers practice sipping water through tubes leading into their gas masks. After 10 minutes they are ordered to defrock, and the men gasp as they tear off the masks, revealing sweat-soaked crewcuts. They hold their gloves upside down to pour out streams of perspiration.

''I think (Saddam) will use chemical weapons if we hit it,'' said a private named Robert, 22, from Clearwater, Fla. ''He is crazy enough, but we are really paranoid about chemical weapons. Heat is not going to be the killer.''

Experts have said heat would dissipate most toxic substances, and the Marineswill have protection and sufficient mobility to move out of the area of toxic attack.

Chemicals also could be used as an area-denial tactic to precede an Iraqi armored assault, and much of the Marines' armory is dedicated to tank busting.

A battery of 155-mm howitzers lay strewn around one small oasis of palm trees, under the gaze of a herd of wild camels.

Advancing Iraqi tanks would be greeted by barrages of copperhead shells, newly developed rounds that cost $34,000 each because of they contain sophisticated homing devices that can hone in on targets that have been identified by forward observers equipped with lasers.

Incoming shells would be tracked by state-of-the-art TPQ36 fire-finder radar, which can pinpoint the the location of the source and where shells will strike.

Baghdad's armies also would have to contend with roaming squads of Humvee jeeps and armored vehicles mounted with TOW anti-tank missiles, weapons troops claimed had near-total accuracy.

''First shot. First kill. No question,'' said a sergeant named Richard, 23 from Boston, Mass. ''If anything, we have been overtrained.''

NEW YORK (AUG. 25) UPI - Police hunted a fifth suspect Saturday in the killing of a mentally retarded man who suffocated after being bound, gagged and locked in a closet for days while his attackers partied and sold off the contents of his Bronx apartment.

The dead man's girlfriend, the sister of one of four people already arrested in the slaying, was also similarly imprisoned, but she survived the torturous six-day ordeal and was evenutally freed, police said.

Detectives Saturday were looking for a fifth suspect in the suffocation of Freddie Thomas, 32, who was found bound in telephone cord, his face completely covered with duct tape and his body wrapped in a shower curtain.

''They know who they're looking for,'' said Sgt. Mary Wrensen, a police spokeswoman, declining to release further details about the manhunt.

A young man and three teenagers were charged Thursday afternoon with homicide, robbery and unlawful imprisonment in the incident, said Lt. Anthony Vitaliano of the 47th Precinct.

The episode began the night of Thursday, Aug. 16, when Hope Kelly, 16, and her boyfriend, William Fennell, 21, allegedly decided ''to assume control'' of the Bronx apartment that her mentally retarded sister shared with Thomas, Vitaliano said.

Kelly had stayed on and off with her sister, Oprah Sanders, 34, and Thomas both of whom were living on Social Security checks for mental disabilities, the lieutenant said.

''On that night, Kelly, her boyfriend and others, armed with a shotgun, went to the (teen's sister's apartment). Kelly gained entry, and went back to the door and let the whole group enter,'' Vitaliano said.

The group hit Thomas with the shotgun, and bound him up in telephone wire, covering his face with silver duct tape, Vitaliano said. They then threw him into a small closet, and padlocked it, he said.

''When they entered, Kelly snuck up on Sanders and covered her eyes only with tape, and tied her up and threw her into another closet,'' the lieutenant said.

''To our knowledge, Thomas never got fed. We think he probably died sometime Saturday night (Aug. 18),'' he said. ''Miss Sanders was given some food and liquids.''

After the couple was locked up, the suspects caroused around the apartment and sold off the victims' electronic equipment ''to buy food and drink.

''People were partying, coming in and out,'' Vitaliano said.

Thomas's corpse was pulled from the closet on Sunday, Aug. 19, and the group began leaving the apartment for longer periods, bringing back products to hide the worsening odor, Vitaliano said.

At 6 p.m. Wednesday, Kelly and Fennell left ''suitcases and all,'' and untied Sanders, who crawled down a fire escape to a neighbor's apartment, Vitaliano said.

''She told the tenant she had been held captive since Thursday, and then we got to the scene, which led to the four arrests,'' Vitaliano said.

Vitaliano said after their arrests Thursday, the four young suspects ''were jovial while we had them, laughing and smiling.''

The shotgun used in the incident has not been recovered.

The other two teens arrested were identified as Samuel Rivera, Barbara Redding, both 17-year-old Bronx residents.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 25) UPI - Although the approval rating for President Bush in the Persian Gulf crisis is running high - more than 70 percent in recent polls - some notes of doubt and criticism are beginning to creep in.

Some of the critics fault the administration for past actions such as not recognizing the potential dangers of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein before the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. Others raise questions about how the United States is going to pull its forces out of the Middle East without destabilizing the region or going to war.

And still others criticize him for operating on a double standard - invading Panama in December 1989 but then responding with military force to another nation's invasion of a small country.

But the critics remain the distinct minority, even among such traditional opponents as the Heritage Foundation, a Washington conservative think tank.

James Phillips, a Middle East analyst with the foundation, said, ''Bush has operated flawlessly in the crisis so far, although I'm a little nervous about the future.''

Phillips said, ''Where I would fault him is for giving Saddam Hussein the benefit of the doubt for too long. We continued our policy of using him as a force for containing Iran for too long. Perhaps a sharp word of warning from Bush before the invasion could have headed Saddam off.''

Minorities in the United States are critical of the president, according to a recent Wall Street Journal-NBC poll, for overreacting militarily to the crisis at the expense of social programs.

The poll showed that 74 percent of whites approved the sending of U.S. military forces to the Persian Gulf, but only 41 percent of blacks approved, while 49 percent of the blacks disapproved of the action.

The reasons given in the responses showed that blacks tend to be more sympathetic with Arabs, the Third World and non-whites, while the whites who supported the president saw the need to curb aggression.

On the political left, The Nation magazine wrote a wry commentary in its current issue which began: ''Why does it sound so familiar? The undisputed bully of the region, seeking to protect and extend his hegemony, launches a midnight attack on a small but strategically located country to his south, in his 'backyard.'''

The commentary then compared the December U.S. invasion of Panama to Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait and said that Bush avoided using the United Nations for peacekeeping. ''The reason, of course, is that his aim is not peacekeeping but warmaking.''

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., was the strongest voice of dissent on Capitol Hill, saying he would not risk a single American life for the restoration of the royal family to power in Kuwait. Now that the deterrence of Saddam has been accomplished, he said, the United States should begin a troop withdrawal from the Middle East.

Within 24 hours of Sanford's statement, the administration announced the call-up of nearly 50,000 military reserves.

One of the sharpest criticisms came from the Center for Defense Information, a Washington think tank involved in defense matters headed by former military officers who have frequently argued that recent U.S. military build-ups have been excessive and needlessly provocative.

''The president got off to a good start, bringing in the United Nations and drawing a defensive line in the sand. But from that moment, it has become a U.S. show and forces are now clearly structured for an attack,'' said retired Rear Adm. Eugene Carroll.

Carroll referred to the sending of a squadron of F-117A stealth fighters that can evade radar defenses. ''A stealth fighter is not a defensive weapon.''

He predicted, ''It will take six weeks to get everything in place, and then it will get unstable. Bush has set into motion a structure that will start a war.''

The Gulf of Tonkin incident in 1964, he suggested, would be a model. ''Their fighters attack, or an incident can be contrived to be an attack by their planes. The longer the build-up, the greater the danger that it becomes a U.S. operation, a showdown between George Bush and Saddam Hussein.''

If that comes, he predicts, international support will evaporate. ''They didn't invite us in to kill Arabs.''

But Carroll noted, ''I admit we're in the 25 percent minority here.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 26) UPI - A scientific expedition has discovered one of the richest ecosystems on Earth in a remote northern Bolivian rain forest that is home to at least 403 species of birds, 204 plant varieties and 45 types of mammals, including a rare wild dog, an environmental group said Saturday.

The expedition, the first in a series of innovative ''rapid assessment'' field studies by Conservation International, roamed for four weeks this spring through a largely unexplored region along the Peruvian-Bolivian border where the Amazon jungle meets the foothills of the Andes.

The team of wildlife experts found a remarkably undisturbed wilderness of river valleys, mountain forests, bamboo thickets and savannas teeming with parrots, spider monkeys, raccoon-like kinkajous, ocelots and tapirs, large, hoofed creatures that resemble hogs with elongated, flexible snouts.

Among the more exotic animals sighted were an as-yet unnamed species of parrot only recently discovered in nearby Peru and the short-eared dog, one of the most elusive animals in the Amazon jungle.

''This is apparently the first reliable recorded sighting (of the dog) by any scientist,'' said Conservation International's draft report on the expedition. ''In one sighting, the dog had a large frog in its mouth, which is the first record of food habits for a wild individual.''

While the dog was the major find, perhaps the strangest animal seen during the trip was a wayward arctic tern spotted along a riverbank. While the bird does migrate south from its North Pole home, the report said it was the first time the ocean bird has been seen in the interior of South America.

Another mystery was the ''extraordinarily high'' number of spider monkeys and tapirs. Scientists on the expedition have extensive experience in the tropics, but they said in the report: ''None of us have previously seen an area with so much evidence of tapirs or a primate fauna so dominated by spider monkeys.''

In both cases, the scientists said the healthy populations were probably due to the absence of local indigenuous tribes, who typically find both tapirs and spider monkeys easy hunting prey.

Botanists on the expedition spotted a number of previously unknown plants in a jungle that appeared almost primeval, with an unusually high density of large lianas, tropical vines that are a key indicator of pristine rain forest. Overall, the report said: ''Results for this area of Bolivia indicate a high diversity of flora and fauna that rivals the richest known sites on the globe.''

The report said the cornucopia of life in the study area was probably due to the large variety in terrain, the general ''species richness'' of Amazon and Andean forests, high rainfall and minimal human disturbance.

Currently, the Bolivian government provides no protection for the region, located north of the Bolivian capital of La Paz in Provincia Iturralde along the upper reaches of Heath, Madidi and Tuiche rivers.

The report said such protection was clearly merited by the findings of the expedition. It said while the field study was far from comprehensive, ''It is clear that longer-term, systematic biological inventory efforts will confirm northern La Paz as a repository of impressive biological diversity that is of global significance.''

For birds alone, the report predicted more than 1,000 bird species - an astounding 11 percent of all bird species on Earth - will eventually be documented in northwestern Bolivia.

Brent Bailey, coordinator of Conservation International's biological programs, said the expedition to Bolivia marked the beginning of his organization's ''rapid assessment program,'' which quickly identifies areas of likely biological importance deserving protection.

Bailey noted traditional scientific practice is to conduct lengthy, detailed field studies stretching over a period of years before reaching conclusions about the conservation value of a given ecosystem.

''The problem is, there isn't time for that in some areas in need of conservation,'' Bailey said. ''The rate of habitat destruction is proceeding much faster than traditional scientific exploration. There are too many things disappearing without us even knowing what was there.''

Bailey said the rapid assessment studies are a preliminary ''first-cut assessment'' of a region's animal and plant life.

''We are not saying this is a thorough inventory,'' he said. ''This is coarser information, but still credible enough to create momentum for greater conservation efforts.''

For the Bolivia study, the scientists first examined satellite photos of the region to find key areas to visit. They followed up with overflights in small planes and helicopters to establish base camps for exploration by foot.

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA (AUG. 25) UPI - The failure of peace talks to produce any agreement over changes in the Salvadoran military has left open the threat of a new rebel offensive sometime this fall.

A San Jose-based diplomat told United Press International that preparations are already under way, with Salvadorans trained in Cuba and Nicaragua gradually filtering back into the mountains of El Salvador.

Ana Guadalupe Martinez, a leader of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, left no doubt that the rebels are gearing up for another offensive.

Their last major offensive in November of last year left more than 2,000 people dead over a two-week period of heavy fighting.

''For various months now, we have been preparing for an offensive,'' Martinez told UPI in an interview, adding that the peace talks appeared to be heading nowhere. ''It is our only recourse now to advance our position in the talks.''

The recent round of peace talks, held Aug. 18-22 at a resort hotel outside of San Jose, failed to produce a single agreement. The talks concentrated on rebel demands for changes in the size and structure of the armed forces but the military's reluctance to budge and the rebels' insistence on sweeping reforms prevented consensus on anything.

Observers and diplomats in Central America agree a rebel offensive is in the offing. It is not known when it could be launched.

But with the Salvadoran government and army coming under considerable international criticism over the military's alleged involvement in the slayings last November of six Jesuit priests, there is reason for the rebels to hold off on launching an offensive that could generate sympathy for the government.

In addition, the U.S. Congress is still debating an $85 million military aid bill for El Salvador that would be guaranteed to pass if the rebels launched a new strike.

A U.S. embassy source in San Jose warned: ''A new offensive would trigger the release of any funds that were held back.''

In San Salvador, U.S. embassy spokesman Jefferson Brown said, ''They've been threatening an offensive for a long time ... but we don't know if they have made that political decision at this point. It would seem to make no sense at this time.''

In preparing for an offensive, the rebels are at an obvious disadvantage this year without the support of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, which lost elections in February.

Martinez said the rebels continue to receive support from Cuban leader Fidel Castro and from various socialist movements around the globe.

''But Cuba is far away,'' she said. ''Our international support is much worse than it was a year ago, and we are losing more.''

She said the FMLN's relations with the Sandinistas are still strong.

''The relations are less tense ... now that we are both opposition organizations, but we are not talking very often because they are busy with their reformation,'' she said.

U.S. officials, who back the new Nicaraguan government of President Violeta Chamorro, have accused the Sandinista army of secretly continuing to aid the FMLN, citing as an example two FMLN members arrested earlier this summer in Managua with a truckload of guns and missiles.

Martinez admits to conducting ''clandestine operations'' in Nicaragua, but said they are done without the knowledge or help of the Sandinistas.

''The fact that Sandinista police arrested those two men shows that they are not helping us,'' she said. ''All the government bodies in Nicaragua have instructions to prosecute us if we are caught.''

Despite their lack of international support, Martinez said the leftist rebels do not have the obvious weaknesses and disadvantages that the Salvadoran and U.S. governments seem to think they have.

''They do not understand our country,'' she said of the U.S. government. ''The struggle of the FMLN was not initiated with international support. It was initiated because of the internal situation, by the people. Now more than ever, the people think of the army as assassins and that the army has to change.

After the talks, the rebels said they would now concentrate on their own methods of persuasion: political, social and military.

The Salvadoran military, which exercises considerable control over the U.S.-backed civilian government of President Alfredo Cristiani, has been accused of commiting thousands of murders, either openly or by death squads, over the past 10 years. The frequency of the killings has decreased markedly since the early 1980s, but Amnesty International said last month that 17 people had been killed by death squads this year. Others have put the toll much higher. To this date, no member of the military has ever been convicted.

''If they can't convict those responsible for executing six popular Jesuit priests, how can we ever expect them to take responsibility for the executions of ordinary Salvadorans?'' Martinez asked.

ANNAPOLIS, MD (AUG. 25) UPI - The dropout rate among Naval Academy plebes this summer was relatively high, despite a ''kindler, gentler'' orientation program instituted in response to allegations of sexism and harassment of minorities.

At the close of the seven-week ''plebe summer'' that gives incoming midshipmen a gruelling first exposure to military life, 55 of the 1,232 freshmen had dropped out, including 10 of the 136 first-year women, officials said.

The 4.5 percent attrition rate is the fourth-highest at the Annapolis academy in the past 10 years, though lower than last year, when 66 students had left the academy by this time.

Academy officials said they were not sure why this year's attrition rate was relatively high, since students give different reasons for leaving.

While all the military academies expect to lose first-year students, the Naval Academy has attempted this year to improve conditions for plebes and guarantee equal treatment for women and minorities after criticism about what on any other college campus would be deemed ''hazing.''

Naval Academy spokesman Cmdr. Mike John said that, given the figures, the academy's efforts obviously have not done much to help attrition so far this year.

''But I think we've made it a kinder, gentler training program and maybe a little more realistic,'' John said.

Academy officials have instituted new rules banning ''horseplay'' between midshipmen and prevented physical contact between upperclass midshipmen and plebes.

Changes at the academy followed the resignation of a female plebe, Gwen Dreyer, who said last spring she left in protest over the way women are treated. Dreyer said she once was dragged from her room, handcuffed to a urinal in a men's bathroom and photographed while classmates teased her.

Her allegations, plus complaints about harassment of women and minorities, triggered a half-dozen government and congressional investigations into the academy and prompted new classes for midshipmen on human rights.

John said no hazing incidents were reported during the plebe summer. Most upperclass midshipmen report for class on Monday.

''We are extremely happy how plebe summer went,'' John said. ''We had a great summer.''

BOULDER, CO (AUG. 26) UPI - A prison escapee suspected of killing four people while at large was arrested early Saturday with another man suspected of taking part in two of the slayings.

Boulder County Sheriff's Lt. Joe Gang said Michael G. Bell, 36, was taken into custody outside a bar about 12:38 a.m. Bell was shot once in the lower jaw by a deputy and was in stable condition at Boulder Community Hospital.

''He contacted an accomplice, who came to us and told us that Bell wanted him to deliver a car to the bar,'' Gang said. ''Our officers took a car to the scene. Bell approached the car but realized the driver was not his friend and tried to flee. He was shot and taken into custody.''

Gang said Bell will be charged with four counts of first-degree murder and three of aggravated robbery. Theodore Oliver, 22, was charged with two counts of first-degree murder and one of aggravated robbery.

Bell escaped Aug. 5 from the minimum security Four Mile Correctional Facility near Canon City. Authorities said he was serving a 12-year term for theft and fraud by check and earlier served five to 10 years for attempted murder in Illinois.

Police said Bell accosted five people Friday in Left Hand Canyon west of Boulder. Two were killed but their names were withheld until relatives could be notified. Two others were wounded and the fifth man sufferd a knee injury trying to flee.

Gang said Bell and Oliver also are suspected in the recent shooting deaths of Leslie Thomas, 36, and William Lewis, 18. The body of Thomas, a transient from Washington state, was found Tuesday in Boulder Canyon. Lewis, 18, a convenience store clerk in Broomfield, was shot to death Aug. 16 during a robbery.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (AUG. 25) UPI - At least 13 people died and 200,000 fled to safer ground during floods and heavy rains spawned by a tropical storm in the capital and surrounding provinces, officials said Saturday.

Also Saturday, suspected rebel soldiers seeking the overthrow of President Corazon Aquino exploded a bomb at a Toyota sales office in the capital's financial district Saturday night, damaging six cars but causing no injuries, police said.

The blast was the 11th in the capital since rebel soldiers announced Aug. 15 they would resume hostilities after Aquino rejected their call for a cease-fire in the face of the devastating July 16 earthquake and the Gulf crisis.

No one has claimed responsiblity for the attack, but police sources said the incident was similar to the previous bombings blamed on military dissidents.

The Manila Weather Bureau located the storm Saturday afternoon 345 miles east of Aparri town on the northern tip of the main Luzon island, with peak winds of 40 mph.

The military Office of Civil Defense said 13 people were killed by flooding in the capital, either by drowning or being pinned by a collapsed wall at the height of the rains Friday. Five others were reported injured, relief agencies said.

The Social Welfare department said 212,577 people in the capital and in the rice-producing provinces of Tarlac and Bulacan, north of Manila, sought refuge in evacuation centers.

Most of the evacuees were from metropolitan Manila slum districts, relief agencies said.

Weathermen said the storm unleashed heavy rains that combined with high tide in the afternoon to create one of the worst floods in recent years.

Thousands of commuters were stranded late into the night and hundreds of workers and students slept in their offices and schools as transport drivers refused to ply flooded streets.

Security in the capital has been tightened since last week after reports circulated rebel soldiers led by fugitive army Col. Gregorio Honasan were plotting another uprising.

Honasan, 41, led the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt in which 119 people were killed and more than 500 were wounded. The rebellion was the sixth since Aquino took power in a civilian-backed military revolt in 1986.

The 159,000-member Armed Forces of the Philippines has been placed on red alert - the maximum state of preparedness - and approaches to the capital have been tightly secured.

An additional army battalion has reinforced some 16,000 police and constabulary units in metropolitan Manila.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos said Thursday the bombings could be a ''prelude to something more serious,'' inclouding assassinations before another power grab.

Ramos said he did not think the rebels have the capability to mount a serious coup attempt but the military was not taking any chances and was taking necessary precautions.

SRINAGAR, India (AUG. 25) UPI - An Indian army truck loaded with troops bound for the troubled northern Kashmir Valley went out of control and plunged into a deep river gorge, killing 22 soldiers and injuring 13 others, a government official said Saturday.

News of the accident came as separatist violence left at least five people dead, including three Moslem militants killed along the Indo-Pakistan border during an exchange of gunfire with security forces, a government spokesman said.

Separatists in Kashmir are fighting Indian troops for independence for their mostly Moslem state, which is closely allied with neighboring Moslem Pakistan. The militants charge the Hindu-dominated Indian government has been insensitive to their needs.

In Anantnag, about 30 miles south of Srinagar, militants hanged an unidentified man and in the border town of Kupwara militants shot dead a Moslem civilian, suspected of being a government informant, the spokesman said.

The convoy of about 30 army trucks loaded with Indian troops was traveling along the National Highway Friday night when one of the vehicles went out of control near the village of Ramban, about 90 miles south of Srinagar, and plunged into the deep Khinab River gorge, the government official said.

TOULON, FRANCE (AUG. 25) UPI - More than 2,000 firefighters succeeded in taming forest fires Saturday that ravaged some 35,000 acres over five days in southern France.

The fire, fanned by strong mistral winds, had burned out of control since Tuesday on the Massif des Maures mountain area near the Mediterranean port of Toulon.

Aided by firefighting aircraft and helicopters, firefighters brought the blaze under control early Saturday, taking advantage of a drop in temperatures and winds.

The fire was said to be the largest in France in more than 25 years.

Officials said the improved conditions lifted hopes of extinguishing another fire in the Cantaron region north of Nice.

KENNEBUNKPORT, ME (AUG. 25) UPI - President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said Saturday that American hostages in Kuwait and Iraq will not deter the president from taking action in the Middle East.

In an interview with CNN, Scowcroft said that although protecting the lives of the estimated 3,000 Americans trapped in the two countries will always be on Bush's mind, the president would not veer from U.S. policy because of them.

''That will not be the case,'' Scowcroft said. ''The hostages are on the president's mind constantly, and everything we do, we will think about the hostages.

''They will not divert us, however, from our strategy.''

Asked if the United States had anticipated that Americans could be seized when Bush ordered thousands of U.S. troops to the Middle East on Aug. 7, the security adviser added, ''Yes, of course we did. And that will be the case in any situation, in any crisis with military dimensions like this.''

Bush dispatched the troops and dozens of American warships and artillery to the strategic region to deter further Iraqi aggression after President Saddam Hussein's forces overran Kuwait on Aug. 2. The United States has called for Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and, with extraordinary international backing, has virtually cordoned off Iraq from trade in an effort to punish Saddam.

Scowcroft made his remarks near the president's summer home, where Bush is in the middle of a 25-day vacation.

He earlier briefed Bush on the status of about 100 Americans being held in Baghdad after leaving Kuwait and the handful still remaining in the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, ordered closed Friday by Saddam.

Speaking to reporters after the televised interview, Scowcroft said the diplomats in Kuwait remained unharmed, though power was shut off to the compound. And although some Iraqi forces remain stationed around the embassy, ''There has been no attempt to occupy the embassy,'' he said.

Scowcroft also refused to discuss how the United States might respond if any Americans are harmed.

''I'm not going to say what our reaction will be,'' Scowcroft said. ''We are hopeful no Americans will be harmed.''

VIENNA (AUG. 25) UPI - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, driven from center stage because of allegations regarding a Nazi past, thrust himself back into the world diplomatic spotlight with Saturday's politically risky visit to Baghdad.

Waldheim became the first Western leader to meet with Iraq's President Saddam Hussein since the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

He drew catcalls at home and risked more criticism internationally for meeting with a man almost universally denounced as an aggressor, but Waldheim may have won his gamble by securing from Saddam a pledge that approximately 80 Austrian nationals would be allowed to leave Iraq.

''If no risks are taken, nothing can be won,'' Waldheim said in answer to critics of his trip. ''The fate of human beings is in question here and I believe it is worth the risk.''

In 1987, Waldheim was banned from entering the United States because of allegations that he knew of Nazi atrocities in Yugoslavia and Greece when he served in the German army during World War II. It was the first time the United States barred a friendly nation's head of state.

Waldheim maintained he worked only as a translator and knew nothing of the transportation of Greek Jews to Poland for extermination.

Waldheim served as secretary-general of the United Nations from 1972 to 1982 and was known as a ''diplomat's diplomat.'' He devoted much of his time to Middle East affairs and became acquainted with Saddam.

His most dangerous journey as secretary-general was to Iran in an unsuccessful attempt to negotiate the release of the 52 American hostages held at the U.S. Embassy during the Carter administration.

Waldheim's involvement with Arab affairs made him a popular diplomat in the region and, even after he was shunned by a number of Western states in the wake of his 1986 election to the largely ceremonial post of Austrian president, Saudi Arabia and Jordan received him on official visits.

Pope John Paul II welcomed him to the Vatican in 1987 despite Jewish protests and described Waldheim as ''dedicated to the securing of peace.''

Waldheim, who has been Austrian president since 1986, traveled to Baghdad hoping his influence in the Middle East and personal relationship with Saddam could secure the release of all Westerners.

But, even though the Iraqi leader described Waldheim as ''an especially fair politician,'' he allowed only Austrian nationals to leave Iraq.

The Austrian media criticized Waldheim before he left for Iraq, saying the visit could be exploited by Iraq for propaganda purposes. The Vienna daily Kurier said Waldheim was ''taking on the greatest risk of his time in office'' and his action represented a breakdown in solidarity with the United States and the rest of Europe in confronting Saddam.

DAMASCUS, Syria (AUG. 25) UPI - Irish hostage Brian Keenan, released more than four years after his kidnapping in Beirut, said Saturday he saw fellow hostages Terry Anderson, John Sutherland and John McCarthy during his captivity, Syrian officials said.

The officials initially said Keenan had told them he met with Anglican church envoy Terry Waite Thursday night, but later retracted their statement.

Syrian authorities handed Keenan, 39, over to Irish Foreign Minister Gerry Collins Saturday at the Syrian Foreign Ministry. His pro-Iranian Moslem kidnappers released him in Beirut Friday.

''It's great,'' Keenan told the British Broadcasting Corp. in a barely audible voice. Keenan's kidnappers apparently had not allowed him to speak in more than a whisper during his captivity.

Keenan looked pale and gaunt as he embraced Collins and hugged his two sisters, Elaine Spence and Brenda Gillham, who had accompanied the Irish foreign minister to Damascus.

''I have had, as you know, a long time to think about what am I going to do when I get out of here,'' Keenan said. ''I'm going to visit all the countries in the world, eat all the food in the world, drink all the drink in the world, make love - I hope - to all the women in the world. And maybe I'll get a good night's sleep.''

Keenan, a Belfast native who holds dual Irish and British citizenship, was an English teacher at the American University of Beirut when abducted April 11, 1986, in Moslem West Beirut.

Keenan said he had seen Americans Anderson and Sutherland, and Englishman McCarthy during his captivity and that the three appeared to be in good health.

Anderson was the chief Middle East correspondent and Beirut bureau manager for the Associated Press when he was kidnapped March 16, 1985, a day after he interviewed Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, the spiritual leader for the Hezbollah. Hezbollah is the radical Shiite faction believed responsible for holding Anderson hostage.

McCarthy, a reporter for British Worldwide Television News, was kidnapped April 17, 1986, in Beirut. A little-known shadowy group named Hilal ibn al Khadafy claimed responsibility.

''I last John McCarthy only two nights ago. He is well. His great sense of humor succeeded very early in driving me quite insane,'' Keenan told the BBC.

''I have also seen Thomas Sutherland. He also is well,'' he said. ''He has told us an entire repertoire of jokes also several times and, believe me, they did get funnier.''

''Dr. Sutherland is in good heath, regularly exercises,'' he said.

''Finally, I saw Terry Anderson, some time ago. He is also in good form,'' Keenan added. ''Terry's well. ... He receives messages from his fiancee and he appreciates letters that he receives from his family.''

Keenan said a picture Anderson has of his daughter was a comfort to him.

Thomas Sutherland is a Scottish-born American from Colorado and dean of the American University of Beirut's agriculture school, seized June 9, 1985, in Beirut.

Former American hostage Frank Reed has said he was held together with Keenan, McCarthy, Anderson and fellow hostage Tom Sutherland for five months in 1988. The men were held in a hideout several hours south of Beirut, but while together were forced to wear blindfolds.

Collins, who met with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa and thanked the Syrian government for its efforts in releasing Keenan, had arrived several hours before the handover.

In response to comments by the British minister of state for foreign affairs, William Waldegrave, thanking Syria for its role, Sharaa said Syria would do its utmost to try to secure the release of the other British hostages. Sharaa also indicated that, if Britain made a move to restore diplomatic relations, Syria would respond in kind.

Britain broke off relations with Syria in October 1986 after Syria was implicated in an attempt to place a bomb on an Israeli airliner.

Thirteen Westerners, six of them Americans, are still held by various extremist groups in Lebanon.

Demands by the kidnappers have included freedom for more than 350 Palestinians detained by Israel and the release of more than a dozen Arabs convicted in Kuwait of bombing various Western targets. The convicts' status is not clear since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of the tiny emirate.

No group claimed responsibility for Keenan's abduction, but it is believed he was seized by Iranian-linked Shiite Moslem fundamentalists. After his release, a group calling itself ''Al Fajr (The Dawn) Islamic Organization'' issued a statement claiming credit for the release.

Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Mahmoud Waezi was quoted by Iran's English-language newspaper Tehran Times Friday as saying Keenan's release was the result of several months of efforts by Iranian officials and Islamic groups in Lebanon. He thanked these groups ''who once more showed their goodwill toward the West.''

''We expect that the West will take similar steps for the freedom of Lebanese prisoners and Iranian hostages,'' Waezi said. ''Such a move will make our efforts for the freedom of hostages easier.''

DUBLIN, Ireland (AUG. 25) UPI - Ireland is struggling to maintain its policy of neutrality during the Persian Gulf crisis, which has left 350 of its citizens trapped in Iraq and Kuwait and cut heavily into its trade revenue.

Prime Minister Charles Haughey called an emergency meeting of his Cabinet next week to discuss the plight of 300 Irish nationals in Iraq and 50 in occupied Kuwait, who are being held with other Western and Asian nationals by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to guard against attack by Western forces in the gulf.

Ireland's strict policy of remaining neutral has often put it at odds with its European Community allies, who have criticized the country's refusal to join EC initiatives.

Despite pressure, Ireland continued to trade with Iran and Libya after the world community agreed to impose economic sanctions against the two countries.

And during Britain's 1982 war with Argentina over the Falkland Islands, Ireland remained on the sidelines - drawing praise from Buenos Aires.

Ireland, however, does not consider the cornerstone of its foreign policy as something that can be easily jettisoned and the release Friday of Irish hostage Brian Keenan in Lebanon is evidence that the policy can be beneficial.

The current gulf crisis has stepped up international pressure on Ireland to abandon its foreign policy and be a full member of the EC. Instead, Ireland has decided to skip a meeting of the Western European Union on Aug. 21 in Paris where countries are expected to consider military options against Iraq.

The foreign minister of Italy has said he understands Ireland's stance on neutrality, but said the European country needed to ''face realities'' of European economic and political union and join western efforts.

Ireland has supported U.N. economic sanctions against Iraq at great cost to its domestic beef and cattle industries, but has refused to back the multinational military buildup and naval blockade in the gulf.

Its policy of neutrality has not given Ireland much of an edge in the gulf crisis, that began when Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

Ireland has received mixed signals from Baghdad as to whether its nationals will be among those allowed to leave.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz singled out Ireland for praise at a press conference Monday, saying that Ireland's position on the dispute was ''balanced.''

The economic sanction against Iraq has already cost the Irish beef industry about $76.5 million in trade with Iraq - which combined with Iran and Libya accounts for one third of its market.

Iraq still owes Ireland $102 million for beef shipped before the embargo, imposed by the United Nations to pressure Iraq to withdraw its troops from Kuwait.

The financial strain on the country's largest beef exporter, Goodman International, triggered panic selling on the Dublin stock exchange Thursday, wiping more than $680 million off the value of the market.

BOGOTA, Colombia (AUG. 26) UPI - U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, saying Saturday's U.N. embargo vote against Iraq is ''without precedent,'' launched a personal peace initiative in the Iraq-Kuwait crisis and warned that its failure could mean real ''armed conflict.''

The U.N. leader said Saturday he has invited Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to ''urgent'' talks this week in either New York or Geneva to search for a peaceful solution to the conflict caused by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and continued occupation of Kuwait.

Perez de Cuellar said he was undertaking the peace effort as a follow-up to the U.N. Security Council resolution approved Saturday morning allowing limited use of force to ensure compliance with a U.N. economic embargo of Iraq.

''This is a moment without precedent in the 45 years of the organization, in which the 15 members of the Security Council have fully completed their obligations,'' he said. ''Now it is my turn to initiate diplomatic negotiations to find a resolution to the crisis.''

A multinational armada of between 50 and 100 ships headed for Middle Eastern waters to enforce the U.N.-approved embargo against Iraq, estimated to have a million-man army. As well, tens of thousands of multinational troops, backed by tanks and air support, are on the ground and growing in number daily to protect Saudi Arabia from Iraqi invasion.

The failure of any such talks to begin could lead to the Security Council's use of its ultimate power, full military force under Article 42 of the U.N. Charter to enforce the economic sanctions, he said.

''The resolution that has been adopted is not a total application of article 42 of the (U.N.) Charter,'' Perez de Cuellar told reporters at a news conference ending a visit to Colombia.

''A margin still remains, one step more. I hope that my action avoids the escalation to this step that would really be armed conflict,'' he said.

Perez de Cuellar said he had formed a personal relationship with the Iraqi foreign minister during nearly seven years of the Iran-Iraq war that could carry over to the present Persian Gulf talks.

''I cannot believe that at this time the Iraqi authorities are not also thinking of a peaceful solution to the present situation,'' the secretary-general said.

He gave no details of what his proposals might be if Iraq accepts offer for talks, but said their basis would be the five resolutions dealing with the conflict already approved by the Security Council.

Perez de Cuellar said his peace initiative was a natural follow-up to the latest council resolution.

''It is a diplomatic initiative that I have taken on my own initiative, not at the request of the Security Council but in accordance with the spirit of the Security Council resolutions,'' he said.

The secretary-general said he hoped the talks would provided ''a full exchange of views.''

Perez de Cuellar also said special envoys sent to try to gain freedom for foreigners remaining in Iraq and Kuwait would remain deployed until Monday.

He said he would receive a report Saturday night in New York on the status of those envoys' missions but gave no hint there was any progress in resolving the situation of the foreigners, whom President George Bush has called ''hostages.''

SAUDI ARABIA (AUG. 26) UPI - The targets on the map are marked and circled much like those on a similar map seen a week earlier, with one notable exception: These targets are in Iraq.

To the east - to the right when looking at the map - there still are markings showing deployments of Iraqi forces in occupied Kuwait, some not too far back from the Kuwait-Saudi border; others in a crescent-shaped formation further north near Kuwait city and supply routes back to Iraq.

But over the past week, the emphasis on the maps, and in the briefings to the American troops who get to see them, has shifted more to the targets in Iraq itself.

Now convinced there is enough U.S. firepower on the ground here to thwart any Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia, American military planners are mulling how to use the growing might against Iraq should hostilities erupt.

''Right after the invasion of Kuwait, we had to hurry, so it was a come-as-you-are war,'' a Pentagon source said. ''That was more than two weeks ago. Now, for us, it's a do-as-you-please war.''

There are numerous political economic and military considerations that would factor into any decision to make an all-out assault on Iraq. And American officials stress that such an attack would be highly unlikely unless Iraq instigates hostilities. Complicating all planning is Iraq's grasp on some 3,000 American and a total of 10,000 Western hostages.

But it is clear from interviews and reviews of U.S. intelligence and planning over the past week that such a plan is in place and being refined virtually daily as spy satellites, AWACS tracking planes and other intelligence sources provide the latest details on Iraqi military activities.

After spending their first week here reluctant to discuss contingency plans, many officers in the past week, at several command levels, have discussed such plans privately, if for no other reason to send a signal to Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

''We know when they are loading gas into their trucks,'' an Army colonel said Friday. ''We'll be ready if they come, and ready to go after them, too.''

Vietnam-era generals leading the deployment in Saudi Arabia favor an overwhelming attack on Iraq if fighting erupts, including destruction of key government facilities in Baghdad, Iraqi oil fields and military installations and infrastructure being used to resupply Iraqi forces in Kuwait and near Iraq's border with Saudi Arabia, according to a number of military sources.

The options, according to officials, include bombing runs, use of naval firepower from a battleship and other surface combatants in the Persian Gulf, and even ground forces if necessary to knock out key Iraqi installations and block supply and communications routes.

American aircraft have been flying 24 hours a day on practice missions and to counter Iraqi air patrols. And elements of both the 82nd and 101st airborne divisions have been briefed on possible Iraqi targets. The 82nd consists of paratroopers; the 101st has attack helicopters and can deploy infantry from helicopters as well.

Members of the 82nd have been told their division might be dropped into Iraq or just over its border with occupied Kuwait to cut off supply routes the sources said.

U.S. military forces and equipment continue to pour into Saudi Arabia and the waters that surround the Arabian peninsula. For example, the first shipments of huge M-1 tanks are just offshore but once unloaded will immediately move to forward positions in the Saudi desert. The M-1s, from the Army's 24th Infantry Division, join Marine M60-A1 tanks already on the ground.

Backing up the tanks are formidable deployments of tank-fighting helicopters, A-10 planes and other heavy weapons stationed in the Saudi desert - some at airstrips not on most maps. These strips are well within striking distance of Iraqi targets in both Kuwait and Iraq.

A ground war against entrenched Iraqi positions in Kuwait would be bloody and the air attacks necessary to support the ground troops likely would level much of Kuwait. Kuwaiti government officials, now living in effective exile in Saudi Arabia, have implored U.S. officials not to wage such a fight.

Less bloody, and potentially devastating to the power of Saddam, would be a direct assault on selected Iraqi targets, which if successful would create chaos in the government and choke off the source of needed supplies and reinforcements to the Iraqi forces in Kuwait.

From a military standpoint, a destructive attack on Iraq appears to be the favorite option in the event of hostilities. But such a move likely would have far-reaching implications on already tumultuous regional politics.

Were Saddam to survive such an assault with his power intact, Saudi officials say they likely would need an extended U.S. or United Nations military commitment to deter revenge.

''He is a madman now,'' a Saudi official said Friday. ''Defeated, he would be deranged.''

(AUG. 25) UPI - Iraqi troops and diplomats in foreign embassies in Kuwait are waging a war of nerves today. Iraq has cut off water, power and telephone links... and troops are preventing food supplies from entering the compounds. It's NOT immediately clear how long diplomats in the embassies will resist the blockade.

At the United Nations, the Security Council voted early today to back a U-S proposal to use limited military force to implement the U-N economic sanctions against Iraq. Both the Soviet Union and China backed the resolution, which allows the use of force if necessary to prevent ships from trading with Iraq.

The U-N resolution did NOT specify how those measures should be applied. The French ambassador to the United Nations says the use of minimum force should be applied ''at the last resort'' to verify cargoes and their destinations. U-S Ambassador Thomas Pickering says the United States is ''gratified'' by the vote.

Former hostage Frank Reed will fly to the United Kingdom to meet with newly freed hostage Brian Keenan, who was released yesterday by his radical Moslem captors. Keenan and Reed were held together in Lebanon for six months. Keenan is scheduled to fly from Syria to Dublin today.

Pro-Iranian Moslem extremists held Keenan in Lebanon for four years. In Damascus, Syrian officials say Keenan will be handed over to Ireland's foreign minister and reunited with two sisters this afternoon. Irish Foreign Minister Gerry Collins is in Damascus to receive Keenan from the Syrian authorities.

(AUG. 25) UPI - South Africa is taking drastic steps to halt nearly two weeks of black-on-black rioting that has claimed more than 500 lives. The government declared 19 magisterial districts encompassing 27 black townships as ''unrest areas''... giving police wide powers to arrest, detain and disarm.

President Bush is rejecting a recommendation for hefty pay raises for federal workers. Instead, he proposes a more modest three-point-five-percent increase beginning January 1st. In a letter sent to congressional leaders, Bush cited the desperate battle against the budget deficit as his reason.

The U-S ambassador to Nicaragua says the United States is expected to deliver 118-Million dollars in aid next month as part of the aid package President Bush promised the country's new government. The money is the largest installment of the 300-Million dollars in aid approved last May by Congress.

The cuts continue at U-S-Air. The seventh-largest U-S airline announced yesterday that it's laying off 21-hundred workers. The move comes only three days after the firing of 15-hundred new employees. A statement also said the company is reviewing early retirement and voluntary separation programs.

Officials from Operation PUSH came away dissatisfied from a meeting with representatives of Nike Incorporated. The two sides met yesterday at Georgetown University in Washington to resolve a national boycott of Nike shoes called by PUSH. Nike's offers... including the appointment of a minority director in 20 months... did NOT satisfy the group.

(AUG. 25) UPI - U-S Ambassador to the United Nations Thomas Pickering says Washington is ''gratified'' by this morning's U-N Security Council vote. The council voted 13-0, with two abstentions, to allow the use of ''minimal force'' to ensure the economic embargo against Iraq. The resolution does NOT define what ''minimal force'' means. The Iraqi U-N ambassador calls the resolution ''very dangerous.''

A West European diplomat in the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain says Iraq is trying to starve diplomats out of their embassies in Kuwait by preventing food supplies from entering the compounds. Iraq reportedly also has cut off power, telephone and telex service to the embassies. Iraqi troops surrounded embassies in Kuwait that have NOT shut down and moved to Baghdad as ordered.

The Syrian Foreign Ministry says freed hostage Brian Keenan will be turned over to Ireland's foreign minister and reunited with his two sisters in Damascus today. Pro-Iranian Moslem fundamentalists released Keenan in Lebanon yesterday where he had been held for more than four years. Keenan, an Irishman, was an English professor at the American University in Beirut.

The South African government imposed broad emergency regulations in black townships... in an effort to quell factional fighting that has left more than 500 people dead in nearly two weeks of clashes. The emergency measures give police nearly UNlimited power to arrest, detain and disarm the warring factions. African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela calls the rules ''totally useless.''

A judge in Reno, Nevada, ruled yesterday that UNintentional messages contained in the music of rock group Judas Priest did NOT lead two young men to commit suicide. (AUG. 26) UPI - Tears flowed and yellow ribbons fluttered from trees as spouses, children and friends around the country bade farwell to the second wave of military reservists called up by the Pentagon Saturday to fill non-combat support roles for Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia.

The activations began Friday and were expected to continue through Oct. 1, when up to 49,703 reservists could be placed on active duty, the Pentagon said.

The reservists, drawn from all the armed forces, are taking leaves from their regular jobs to provide support for U.S. troops in Saudia Arabia and at other bases at home and abroad where troops have been depleted because of the military buildup in the Persian Gulf.

Many of those activated Friday and Saturday were told to report to their local reserve armories to prepare for duty. Others were pressed into immediate service and shipped out to the Mideast.

The crisis took on added meaning for students, teachers and staff at Texas' Arlington High School who learned industrial arts teacher Jim Saxon was being called up.

Yellow ribbons were tied around the trees and columns at the school building's entrance after Saxon, a teacher at Arlington for the past 12 years, left the campus to report to the 136th Mobile Aerial Port Squadron.

The unit was expected to depart Saturday for an undisclosed duty station.

''There was an overwhelming wave of emotion that hit us all,'' said Kathryn White, an English and psychology teacher.

In the Dallas area, school administrator Carl Smith - otherwise known as Sgt. Carl Smith of the 136th Mobile Aerial Port Squadron - received his call to active duty at 1 a.m. Friday and he did not go back to sleep.

''I'll tell you what, that's a shock,'' he said. ''You just don't think it's going to happen to you, but you put on this uniform and there's always that chance. I'm anxious to get over there and help all we can and get the thing finished and go back home,'' Smith said.

The first activations occurred Friday when the Pentagon called up six Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve cargo-hauling units from Mississippi, New York, New Jersey, Texas, Maryland and Massachusetts.

The operation was stepped up Saturday with 127 Naval Reserve medical, transport, security and minesweeping units activated from 29 states and the District of Columbia.

The Pentagon Saturday also put 173 Army National Guard and Army Reserve units on alert for possible activation in coming weeks.

Although some reserve units train for combat duty, all activations are for non-combat situations. Among the reservists being called up are specialists in international law, the Arabic language, well-digging, water purification and chemical decontamination.

The Pentagon would not reveal exactly how many reservists have been activated, but said about 10,000 men and women would be called up by the end of the month.

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney authorized the military services Thursday to begin calling up the reservists for the first time in 20 years.

The military reserves have not been activated since 1970, when they were called up for a postal strike, and they have not been mobilized for a military conflict since the Tet offensive in Vietnam in 1968.

Calling up the nearly 50,000 reservists would cost about $100 million a month in added pay and allowances, according to reserve officials.

The reservists are being activated under a law allowing President Bush to call as many as 200,000 reservists to active duty for 90 days with one 90-day extension permitted. It was expected those called up would be used for the entire 180 days.

In many cases, reservists will take a pay cut working for the military while on leave from their regular jobs.

But some companies, such as United Technologies Corp., Connecticut's largest private employer, announced it will make up the difference between military pay and the regular pay of its employees called to active military duty.

In Missouri, National Guard recruiters said publicity generated by the Mideast crisis has boosted enlistment.

''Telephone calls to a special toll-free number maintained by the Missouri National Guard Recruiting Branch have tripled in recent days,'' said Sgt. Maj. Richard Riche, operations sergeant. ''Citizens have also been contacting the 53 full-time Missouri National Guard recruiters in various communities across the state in ever-increasing numbers.''

MAYFIELD MOVED: Soul singer Curtis Mayfield, paralyzed in an onstage accident in New York, now is in the Shepherd Spinal Center in Atlanta. Mayfield, 48, who was flown to Georgia Friday with his wife and son, has been paralyzed from the neck down since a gust of wind knocked down a lighting rig at an outdoor concert in New York City Aug. 13. His doctors have not said if the condition is permanent and the Mayfield family has not yet decided whether to sue the producers of the concert. Mayfield's biggest hits came from the soundtrack to the 1972 movie ''Superfly'' and the concert was to have been part of a comeback that also includes a new album. The record, his first since 1985, includes the single ''Superfly 1990,'' a collaboration with Los Angeles rapper Ice T that is one of five songs Mayfield wrote for a ''Superfly'' sequel movie.

The show had already become a sore spot in the community and people under 18 were banned from attending. In addition, several groups had planned to picket in protest of Clay's references to women, homosexuals and ethnic groups, and Coca-Cola, The Dallas Morning News, WFAA-TV and KTXQ-FM all had withdrawn their sponsorship of the concert.

EXETER, NH (AUG. 26) UPI - Five Ku Klux Klansmen staged a rally Saturday in the town of Exeter but residents countered by decking storefronts and streets with yellow ribbons and balloons symbolizing racial harmony.

The Klansmen, garbed in white hooded robes, marched through Exeter's business district carrying signs that read, ''Save the USA, join the KKK'' and ''Save our land, join the Klan.''

''We're a white Christian patriotic group. We're not against other races, we love our race,'' said Thomas Herman, who organized the march. ''Just because we love our people doesn't mean we hate other people.

''We encourage people to be proud of their races,'' said Herman, who works in the Rockingham County sheriff's dispatcher office. ''If you're black, be proud of it, and work to better yourself.''

Herman had earlier campaigned unsuccessfully for the southern New Hampshire community's governing board of selectmen.

''The KKK is not welcome in this town,'' said one woman watching the small march. ''There's nobody in the town that agrees with them; there's no support in this town and we just don't want them here.''

Another man watching the downtown rally said, ''Anything that spreads hate anywhere shouldn't be welcome in our community.''

To counter the march, shopkeepers and other residents adorned storefronts and street signs with yellow ribbons and balloons as a symbol of racial harmony.

A clown wearing a yellow wig also lampooned the marching Klansmen, dancing alongside them and jeering, ''I've got the best costume!''

''I think the color yellow speaks for itself,'' said one Klansman when asked of the town's reaction.

No arrests were reported, but police led one man away after he verbally confronted a Klansman.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 26) UPI - A car trying to pass a turning semi truck careened onto a sidewalk Saturday and ran over five transients sitting outside a Skid Row mission, killing one and injuring the others, police said.

The victims - two women and three men - were outside the Fred Jordan Mission about 8:30 a.m. when a white sedan was pushed onto the sidewalk by a turning tractor-trailer rig, police Sgt. Stan Massey said.

The car driver and his four passengers fled the scene. Police were searching for the driver, wanted for felony hit-and-run charges, and the passengers.

The car was traveling on the right side of the trailer truck and apparently tried to squeeze past the rig as it was making a wide right turn, he said. The two vehicles collided.

''The passenger vehicle was thrown up on the sidewalk,'' Massey said.

The car came to a rest after plowing into the group of pedestrians. The occupants abandoned the car - a white 1975 Chevy Monte Carlo - and fled on foot, Massey said.

One of the victims suffered critical injuries and was taken to County-USC Medical Center where he died a short time later. His name was not immediately released.

The four others were taken to area hospitals suffering various injuries, City Fire Department spokesman Greg Acevedo said.

The truck driver, Dick Herbert, was not injured. Police officials said he was not responsible for the accident.

''I didn't see it,'' Herbert said. ''I imagine (the car driver) was out of control. I didn't see it at all. He was on my dark side.''

After the accident, bystanders and residents swarmed the area, trying to aid the injured. Some people tried to restrain the fleeing driver, but the man ran off before police arrived.

''It was pretty chaotic,'' said Manuel Rodriguez, a worker at the mission.

(AUG. 25) UPI - Syrian officials have retracted their statement indicating newly freed hostage Brian Keenan had met with fellow hostage Terry Waite prior to being freed yesterday. Officials now say the other captives Keenan saw during his captivity were journalists Terry Anderson and John McCarthy, and educator John Sutherland.

Although gaunt and pale, Keenan displayed a sense of bravado when he spoke in Damascus. He told reporters he had a long time to consider what to do with his life and said he decided to travel the world over and eat until content. He also says he harbors a desire... in his words... ''to make love, I hope, to all the women in the world. And maybe I'll get a good night's sleep.''

Iraq responded to the U-N measure allowing the use of ''minimal force'' to halt Iraqi shipping by lashing out against Moscow. Iraq accused the Soviets of using a message sent yesterday as a pretext for today's action. The Iraqi News Agency said Baghdad had only two hours to respond to the Soviet message, which urged Iraq's pullout from Kuwait.

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft says the presence of American hostages in Kuwait and Iraq will NOT deter President Bush from taking action in the Middle East. Scowcroft said in an interview today that protecting American lives will always be on the president's mind, but Bush will NOT veer from U-S policy because of the hostages.

Forecasters in the Philippines say Manila and surrounding provinces were affected by one of the region's worst recent floods yesterday. (AUG. 25) UPI - Anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela today left South Africa for a week's trip abroad. The A-N-C leader did NOT mention if he had arranged a meeting with his Zulu rival, Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, to stem further bloodshed between each man's followers. Violence between supporters of the two men has left more than 500 people dead in the past two weeks.

As rains let up over parts of the East, excessive heat made its presence known in Texas. The National Weather Service issued an excessive heat advisory for most of the Lone Star state. (AUG. 25) UPI - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim has received a pledge from Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to allow 80 Austrian nationals to leave RIMINI, Italy (AUG. 26) - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was expected Sunday at this Adriatic coast resort where he was to receive a prize before heading for Castel Gandolfo and a Monday morning mass with Pope John Paul II.

Mr. Walesa was expected to address the gathering here Sunday afternoon after receiving a prize as part of the activities of the "Meetings of friendship among the peoples."

The Walesa is to return to Poland after a two-day private visit to Italy, which will include his fifth meeting with the pope at the pontiff's summer residence.

He said the Polish president must be "a man capable of dominating changes and accelerating them, a French-type president with the power of promulgating decrees."

DHAKA (AUG. 26) - A prominent opposition leader in Bangladesh charged that the government was planning to rig next year's election Sunday as thousands turned out on the streets demanding the resignation of President Hussain Muhammad Ershad.

Violence marred the demonstration which was part of the observance of an anti-repression day called by oppositon parties.

An estimated 50,000 people gathered in central Dhaka, blocking traffic for six hours to press for elections under a caretaker government.

''Ershad must step down and allow a neutral authority to hold the polls,'' said Sheikh Hasina Wazed, chief of Awami League and a main contender for power.

Sheikh Hasina told the slogan-chanting crowd that the government had drawn up plans to rig the coming presidential poll to give another five-year term to the 60-year old former army chief.

Over 50 people were injured and more than a dozen transports set ablaze as anti-government students attacked shopping malls and tore up billboards, eyewitnesses said. Fifteen others were hurt as riot police used batons to clear up road blocks.

The authorities sealed off the Dhaka University area as students belonging to the Jatiyotabad Chhatra Dal called a strike on the campus.

Sunday's demonstration, the biggest this year, against the eight-year old government was simultaneously called by the Awami League, the Bnp and the Jamaat-I-Islami and their alliances.

COLOMBO (AUG. 26) - Twenty opposition parties called on the government Sudnay to halt aerial bombing by government forces in North Sri Lanka and ensure that civilians are protected.

The parties, including the main opposition party, the Sri Lanka Freedom Party (Slfp), decided unanimously to meet President Ranasinghe Premadasa and call for bombing halt during the offensive launched against the Tamil rebels of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) in the northern province.

The opposition parties, at the meeting convened by the Tamil Eelam

KENNEBUNKPORT, ME (AUG. 26) - The United States said Sunday it would not object to an offer by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to hold talks with Iraq to ease the burgeoning threat of war in the Gulf.

But U.S. officials made clear that any U.N. talks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein must be limited to the framework of unanimous U.N. Security Council resolutions calling for Iraq's immediate withdrawl from Kuwait, which it invaded August 2 and annexed August 8.

Saturday, Mr. Perez de Cuellar offered to meet with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in New York or Geneva. Within hours, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein invited Mr. Perez de Cuellar to Baghdad to talk with him personally.

The U.N. chief, en route from Bogota to New York Sunday, had not yet responded to that invitation.

"We wouldn't have any problem with" the secretary general meeting with Mr. Hussein, U.S. National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft said at this seaside resort, where U.S. President George Bush was vacationing.

"We're not going to reject out of hand anybody who can contribute successfully to the improvement of the situation," added John Kelly, assistant secretary of state for near eastern and south Asian affairs.

Mr. Scowcroft said Mr. Perez de Cuellar "has his negotiating framework with the (U.N.) resolutions and we're quite comfortable seeing him pressing those on Saddam Hussein."

But he stressed that there should be no compromise with Mr. Hussein on the principles of the resolutions, and that the only negotiable item was "the timetable for his getting out (of Kuwait) ... the modalities of it."

Both Mr. Scowcroft and Mr. Kelly noted the U.S. charge d'affaires in Baghdad was available for discussions with the Iraqi Government.

"I think talking to somebody is always something we're prepared to do," said Mr. Scowcroft.

But he added, "Negotiating, in terms of changing the conditions under which we're prepared to deal with him, is out of the question."

In an interview broadcast by Radio Prague, he said a decision on the future of the 80 Iraqis would be taken "according to the evolution of the situation" in the Gulf.

"Czechoslovakia unequivocally condemns the Iraqi aggression against Kuwait, which stands as a brutal violation of international law. We also condemn the holding of hostages," said Mr. Havel.

"It is deplorable that for many years, the former regime supplied Iraq with tanks which are perhaps being used today for aggression.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 26) - Some 17,000 Soviet Jews are expected to have arrived in Israel by the end of August, the largest monthly influx this year, sources close to the Jewish Agency reported Sunday.

The Gulf crisis and talk of military confrontation in the region have had no effect on Soviet Jewish emigration, as 15,000 Soviet Jews have come to Israel since August 1, the day before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

The agency, responsible for the immigration and absorption of immigrants to Israel, said 80,000 Soviet Jews have arrived since the start of the year.

The movement has alarmed Arab leaders who fear that many of the emigres, despite Israeli insistence to the contrary, will be settled among Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

NEW YORK, United Nations (AUG. 26) - U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar will meet with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz Thursday in Amman, the capital of Jordan, U.N. spokeswoman Nadia Younes said Sunday.

Mr. Perez de Cuellar indicated Saturday in Bogota -- where he was completing a Latin American tour -- that he was ready to meet with the Iraqi foreign minister in New York or Geneva.

"The time has come for the secretary general to undertake diplomatic efforts aimed at easing the current crisis in the Gulf in all its aspects, through a process of dialogue," said Mr. Perez de Cuellar.

Five U.N. resolutions on the Gulf crisis, including one passed early Saturday approving the use of force to back a trade embargo against Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, nudged Mr. Perez de Cuellar into the negotiating spotlight.

Shortly after Mr. Perez de Cuellar extended the invitation to Mr. Aziz, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein invited the secretary general to Baghdad.

"The secretary general is always welcome in Iraq," said Mr. Hussein.

Ms. Younes said the remark did not translate into a formal invitation.

Mr. Perez de Cuellar returned to New York Sunday from a Latin American tour which took him to Peru, Chile and Colombia.

BEIJING (AUG 27) - Urban Chinese are smoking and drinking less while eating more protein and fruit, according to a survey cited Monday by the China Daily.

Chinese urbanites smoked 14 percent less last year than in 1985, inhaling an average of 36 packs of cigarettes, while liquor intake fell nine percent to 2.4 kilograms (5.3 pounds), the newspaper said.

The survey, which included 5,100 households in 11 major cities, found that the average intake of food energy was sufficient at 2,597 calories per day, and while Chinese were eating more meat, protein consumption was still two percent below the recommended level.

The average consumption of pork, the most popular meat, increased 15.2 per cent last year to 22.7 kilograms (50 pounds) from 1985.

City dwellers consumed 18 per cent more poultry, 6.2 kilograms (13.6 pounds) in 1989. They also ate 10.9 kilograms (24 pounds) of eggs each year, a 5.8 percent rise, and 9.6 kilograms (21 pounds) of fish, an increase of 6.7 percent.

Fruit consumption was also up over the five-year period, rising 26 percent to 41 kilograms (90 pounds) last year.

BEIRUT (AUG. 26) EFE - An explosion in an Amal militia training camp in central Lebanon has left seven dead and eight wounded, the Voice of Lebanon radio station reported Sunday.

The explosion reportedly took place in a camp in the Beqaa valley, some 35 km east of the Lebanese capital.

No details of the time or cause of the explosion were given.

The Syrian-backed Amal (Hope) has been locked in a fierce battle with the pro-Iranian Hezbollah militia for control of territory and influence over Lebanon's 1.2 million Shiite Moslems.

More than 1,200 people have ben killed since intermittent clashes began between Amal and Hezbollah in 1988.

LONDON (AUG. 26) EFE - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Sunday virtually ruled out the posibility a negotiated settlement with Saddam Hussein, saying she doubted the Iraqi leader would accede U.N. demands to pull his troops out of Kuwait.

+There is no possibility of negotiations with a person that has occupied another country by force,+ she told reporters as she left a church service near Chequers, her country home west of London.

Saddam, Thatcher charged, was a +despot and tyrant who has used chemical weapons+ and indicated that in her view, he ought not to continue in power.

MOSCOW (AUG. 26) EFE - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Sunday his country has no plans to use force against Iraq or play a direct role in the UN Gulf blockade, as he wrapped up two days of talks with his French counterpart Roland Dumas.

Shevardnadze added, however, that the Soviet government was willing to provide the United Nations Security Council with information concerning the +substantial quantities+ of arms and +fairly modern+ weapons systems it has sold to Iraq.

On Saturday, the Soviet Union voted in favor of a Security Council resolution tacitly authorizing Western warships to use force in maintaining the blockade meant to pressure Iraq into withdrawing its occupying armies from Kuwait.

The Soviet foreign minister emphatically denied that Soviet military advisors in Baghdad had assisted the Iraqi military in planning their August 2 invasion of Kuwait. The advisors would be gradually withdrawn, he noted.

In a joint statement, the two foreign ministers called on Iraq to obey UN resolutions calling for the release of the thousands of Wssterners being held hostage in Iraq and Kuwait.

For his part, Dumas said +Let us not be hypocrites. Everybody does business deals involving arms. But there will be no solution to this unless an honest order is first established in the world.+

France has been second only to the Soviet Union as Iraq's main supplier of weapons.

Shevardanadze and Dumas said that as well as the Gulf Crisis, their talks had centered on the upcoming +Two plus Four+ meeting set for next month in Moscow.

In addition to that meeting, at which the two Germanys and the four victorious allies of World War II are to discuss Germany's forthcoming unification, Shevardnadze and Dumas said they also reviewed the situation in Cambodia.

NICOSIA (AUG. 26) EFE - Iraq is keeping up the pressure on foreign embassies in Kuwait but none of the defiant diplomats have been arrested or otherwise directly molested by the occupying army, according to Arab radio reports monitored Sunday in Cyprus.

The Iraqi Information Ministry said those diplomats still in Kuwait have lost their immunity but added that Iraq's original threat of using force to expel them would not be followed up.

The shutting off of water and electricity which began Saturday with the U.S. and French embassies has been extended to the British, Italian, Belgian, Turkish and East German missions, said the radio reports.

The first three legations remain surrounded by Iraqi troops. Soldiers were also deployed around the embassies of Japan, Norway, Sweden and Romania, but the encirclement of the Canadian mission appeared to have been called off.

A West German Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Iraqis had cut their embassy's electricity supplies but water was still flowing.

He added that an emergency electrical system was enabling them to communicate with Bonn once an hour.

Qatar announced Sunday that its embassy was remaining open -- a decision already taken by fellow Gulf Cooperation Council members Saudi Arabia and Oman.

The Iraqis had originally set a Friday deadline for all 63 embassies in Kuwait to close their doors and transfer their delegations to Baghdad following the invasion and annexation of Kuwait.

The 12 member countries of the European Community, United States and Japan have all cut their staffs in Kuwait to a minimum but refused to halt their operations.

In a related development Sunday, some 55 family members of U.S. diplomats left Baghdad in a convoy of vehicles headed for Turkey after they were evacuated from Kuwait to Iraq, State Department sources said in Washington.

The previous day 23 family members from the French mission in Kuwait arrived in the Jordanian capital, Amman, along with 120 of the 3,000 Romanians estimated to be trapped in Iraq.

The Belgian commercial attache in Kuwait has also left Iraq together with his family, the reports said.

NICOSIA (AUG. 26) EFE - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein received a message from Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi when he met Sunday with a member of the Libyan Revolutionary Command Council in Baghdad, the Iraqi news agency INA reported.

Libyan envoy Mustafa Al Jarrubi gave Saddam a message from Gaddafi concerning the crisis in the Gulf and bilateral relations between Libya and Iraq, according to INA.

Gaddafi has condemned Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait but has also slammed the blockade of Iraq and the presence of Arab and Western troops in Saudi Arabia.

SHANGHAI (AUG. 27) XINHUA - WITH ONLY ONE CLASSROOM, A LABORATORY AND FIVE TEACHERS, THE SHANGHAI YOUNGSTERS AMATEUR INVENTION SCHOOL HAS BECOME A WELL-KNOWN CRADLE OF INVENTORS.

SET UP IN 1985, THE SCHOOL HAS TRAINED MORE THAN 200 STUDENTS WHO HAVE DEVISED SEVERAL HUNDRED INVENTIONS, OVER 50 OF WHICH HAVE WON MEDALS IN NATIONAL AND SHANGHAI MUNICIPAL CONTESTS AND A DOZEN OF WHICH HAVE GOT STATE PATENTS. MANY OF THE INVENTIONS HAVE BEEN PUT INTO MASS PRODUCTION BY FACTORIES.

THESE INVENTIONS INCLUDE MULTI-FUNCTIONAL SCISSORS, MINI-NUTCRACKER, THERMOS BOTTLE WATER LEVEL INDICATOR, ALARM FOR MEDICAL INFUSIONS, AND A DEVICE FOR MULTI-LEVEL CONTROL OF THE VOLUME OF THE DISPLACEMENT OF FLUSH TOILETS.

THE SCHOOL ENROLLS PUPILS AND JUNIOR MIDDLE SCHOOL STUDENTS FROM 10 AND 15 YEARS OF AGE THROUGH EXAMINATIONS, WHICH INCLUDE A 90-MINUTE WRITTEN EXAMINATION AND A PRACTICAL TEST.

THIS YEAR THE PRACTICAL TEST INVOLVED TURNING ONE METER OF GALVANIZED WIRE INTO AN ARTICLE OF EVERYDAY USE.

THE SCHOOL OPENS ONLY ON SUNDAYS, EXCEPT FOR THE SUMMER AND WINTER VACATIONS, WHEN IT IS OPEN EVERY DAY. IN THE CLASS, THE STUDENTS MAY DO WOODWORK, LATHE WORK OR ELECTRONIC WORK TO MANUFACTURE AND TEST, UNDER THE GUIDANCE OF THEIR TEACHERS, DEVICES THEY HAVE DESIGNED THEMSELVES.

THE TEACHERS OFTEN TELL THE STUDENTS THAT AN INVENTOR SHOULD PAY ATTENTION TO OBSERVING EVERYTHING IN DAILY LIFE AND DETERMINE TO IMPROVE THINGS. THEY TAKE EVERY OPPORTUNITY TO ENLIGHTEN THE STUDENTS. DURING TOURS IN THE SUBURBS OR VISIT TO THE COUNTRYSIDE OR FACTORIES THEY ASK "WHY" AND "HOW", AND MAKE THE STUDENTS THINK AND PROBE.

TEACHING IS MAINLY AIMED AT BRINGING OUT THE CHILDREN'S CONSCIOUSNESS OF CREATION AND INVENTION. THE STUDENTS CAN FANTASIZE AS MUCH AS THEY LIKE.

WHEN VISITING A TEXTILE MILL, FU JIONGZHE, 15, VOWED THAT HE WOULD INVENT A DEVICE TO ABSORB THE DEAFENING NOISE AND TURN THE NOISE ENERGY INTO THERMAL ENERGY FOR PRACTICAL USE.

HOWEVER, HIS TEACHER EXPLAINED THAT THE IDEA WAS NOT FEASIBLE, AND INSTEAD FU INVENTED A KIND OF PIN WHICH ATTACHES CAMPHOR BALLS TO THE CLOTHES AND PROTECTS THEM FROM MOTHS. THE INVENTION GOT A STATE PATENT.

LI JIALING, HEAD OF THE INVENTION SCHOOL, SAID THAT HE HOLDS THAT SPARETIME EDUCATION IN SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY SHOULD BE A SUPPLEMENT TO REGULAR EDUCATION IN PRIMARY AND MIDDLE SCHOOLS NOWADAYS, WHEN SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY IS DEVELOPING RAPIDLY.

(AUG. 26) UPI - Iraq lashed out at its former ally the Soviet Union Saturday for supporting a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for stricter enforcement of economic sanctions against Baghdad, and stepped up its pressure on defiant embassies that have remained open in occupied Kuwait.

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim met with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein - the first Western leader to do so since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 - and left Baghdad accompanied by 96 Austrians who had been held in Iraq and Kuwait.

The Iraqi News Agency said the Soviets gave Iraq less than two hours Friday to respond to a letter by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev that urged Iraq to pull its troops out of occupied Kuwait.

The news agency said Moscow, ignoring Baghdad's pleas for more time, then voted in favor of the U.S.-sponsored resolution, which calls for the use of ''such measures ... as may be necessary'' to prevent ships from breaking the economic embargo.

U.S. officials said the resolution would further legitimize the use of military force by American warships to intercept Iraqi shipping. But there was no immediate word on when or how the massive U.S. military deployment in the Persian Gulf would begin halting Iraqi ships.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar launched a personal peace initiative Saturday and warned its failure could mean real ''armed conflict.''

The U.N. leader, during a visit to Colombia, said he invited Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to ''urgent'' talks this week in either New York or Geneva to search for a peaceful solution to the conflict.

Iraqi troops armed with machine guns and mortars, meanwhile, kept careful watch on foreign embassies in occupied Kuwait that defied an order by Iraq to close.

Power, water and telephone service to many of the besieged embassies have been cut. An Italian Foreign Ministry spokesman said Iraqi troops began destroying the perimeter wall at the French Embassy in an apparent attempt to get to the water supply system and shut it off. Italy has been reportedly relaying messages from the French Embassy to Paris through Rome due to a communications fault in the French building.

In London, the British news agency ITV said Saturday there were unconfirmed reports from Kuwait City that Iraqi troops had entered the embassy of Saudi Arabia. No additional details were available.

In Damascus, Syrian officials said Saturday six Britons and one Australian fled across the Iraqi border and were given refuge. Iraq is preventing foreign nationals whose countries have sent forces to the gulf from leaving.

Waldheim arrived in Amman, Jordan, Saturday after leaving Baghdad following his meetings with Saddam. The Austrian president told Cable News Network the Iraqi leader had said he wanted to negotiate a political solution to the Persian Gulf crisis.

''He's ready and willing - that's what he told me - to negotiate with those countries to bring about a peaceful solution,'' Waldheim said, adding that the countries to which Saddam referred were the United States, other Western nations and Arab leaders.

Waldheim told reporters at Amman's heavily guarded military airport that while Saddam had allowed the 96 Austrians to depart, the Iraqi leader left open the question of the fates of other trapped Westerners.

''He told me that he would keep them in mind and could not give me any immediate answer,'' Waldheim said.

Between meetings with Waldheim, Saddam held a televised news conference and quizzed reporters like a history teacher to reiterate his point that Kuwait was historically part of Iraq and that Baghdad's invasion of the tiny emirate was justified.

Asked whether he had a message to Americans, Saddam, dapper in a suit with a silk handkerchief in the breast pocket, said he wanted peace but was ready to fight.

''I'm going to say, this is not a threat but a fact, I shall say that whoever collides with Iraq will find in front of him columns of dead bodies that may have a beginning but not an end,'' he said. ''We want the Americans to live.''

(AUG. 26) UPI - The Soviet news agency Tass says a protest against a store that refused to sell alcohol mushroomed into an insurrection. An estimated 15-hundred people rioted in the Siberian city of Chelyabinsk . Several cars and an ambulance were smashed. Police kept the rioters from breaking into a building where arrested protesters were held.

Brian Keenan returned home to Ireland Saturday after four years as a hostage in Lebanon. He raised his arms in a victory salute as he got off a jet at Dublin Airport and the crowd cheered. Keenan was freed Friday in Lebanon. Syrian officials say during his captivity he saw three other hostages and they are well.

The annual ''Short Fat Guys Road Race'' was run Saturday at Crooked River Ranch, Oregon. As usual, there was NO winner. All of the estimated 45 entrants crossed the finish line in a bunch. The course is one mile and all downhill. There's a break at the halfway point where racers consume beer and hot dogs.

(AUG. 26) UPI - There are home runs that just clear fences, and there are ones that clear entire ballparks.

Cecil Fielder crushed one of each Saturday, leading the Detroit Tigers to a longball-filled 14-4 rout of the Oakland Athletics.

''I've probably hit some farther than that (second) one,'' said Fielder, who drove in five runs with his 40th and 41st homers and a bases-loaded walk. ''The distance isn't as important as long as they go.''

Fielder was referring to his second blast, a mammoth two-run shot in the fourth that cleared Tiger Stadium's left-field roof.

Alan Trammell singled with two outs off Dave Stewart, 17-10, when Fielder stepped up and launched a 3-1 pitch. The ball bounced once on the downward sloping outer edge of the roof, bounced up to the apex, teetered there a moment before its topspin carried it over. It was estimated it would have gone 500 feet if the stands hadn't gotten in the way.

''I said before the season started he'd hit one over the roof,'' Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. ''He'll hit one a year, average. You can't stop him.''

Only Harmon Killebrew, Aug. 3, 1962, and Frank Howard, May 18, 1968, have hit balls that cleared the left-field roof, which stands 82 feet high and runs out from 340 to 365 feet.

''That was serious power. Impressive. He's a real power hitter,'' said Oakland slugger Jose Canseco, who lined a homer over the 440-mark in center field - a two-run shot - for his 35th of the season. Mark McGwire followed with his 33rd to give Oakland a 3-0 lead.

Fielder had put the Tigers on the board in the first with another two-run blast. This one landed more than halfway up the upper deck bleacher seats, an estimated 475 feet, into an area seldom reached by right-handed hitters.

''I probably got more pleasure out of the 40th than out of the 41st, just to have hit the 40th one,'' said Fielder, who has 108 RBI.

''I'm so happy for him,'' Anderson said. ''There's a guy that had to go across the ocean (to Japan). Let's not say 25 clubs didn't want him - 26 didn't want him.

''For that to happen and for him to do what he's done - that's tremendous. It says to everybody, 'If you believe in yourself, there's a chance.'''

John Shelby (4) and Alan Trammel (12) added homers for Detroit and Terry Steinbach slugged his sixth of the season for Oakland.

--- AROUND THE AL ---

Elsewhere in the American League: Boston edged Toronto 1-0, Milwaukee downed New York 5-3, California topped Chicago 3-2, Cleveland wrecked Baltimore 11-5, Seattle slugged Kansas City 6-3, and Minnesota stopped Texas 8-5.

Red Sox 1, Blue Jays 0

At Toronto, Roger Clemens pitched a five-hitter for his seventh straight victory and Dwight Evans' hit his 12th homer to help Boston open a three-game lead in the AL East. Clemens, 19-5, hasn't lost since July 20. In that span, he has allowed just four earned runs in 58 1-3 innings for a 0.62 ERA.

Brewers 5, Yankees 3

At New York, Greg Brock smacked a two-out, three-run home run off Dave Righetti, 1-1, in the ninth inning to lift Milwaukee to its third straight victory over the Yankees. Mark Lee, 1-0, was the winner. Chuck Crim recorded his eighth save.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

At Chicago, rookie Lee Stevens hit a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth to help California end its four-game losing streak. Bobby Thigpen, 4-6, blew his seventh save opportunity in 50 games. Mark Langston, 8-15, has won three straight for the first time since July 1989.

Indians 11, Orioles 5

At Baltimore, Jerry Browne homered and collected four RBI and Sandy Alomar homered and drove home two runs to spark the Cleveland Indians to an 18-hit attack. Steve Olin, 2-4, earned the victory in relief.

Mariners 6, Royals 3

At Kansas City, Mo., Ken Griffey Jr. singled in the go-ahead run and Edgar Martinez stole home in a two-run seventh, snapping the Royals' five-game winning streak. It was the Mariners' first theft of home since Spike Owens did it in Texas June 3, 1984.

Twins 8, Rangers 5

At Arlington, Texas, Brian Harper collected four hits, with two doubles and two RBI, helping Minnesota break a nine-game losing streak. David West improved to 7-8. Gary Mielke fell to 0-3.

CHICAGO (AUG. 26) UPI - The television studios of WLS-TV were evacuated Saturday and the station went off the air while police conducted a search of the 13-floor building for a gunman who may have robbed a pizza restaurant earlier in the day.

Patrolman Richard Cosentino said two men who had robbed a restaurant in the morning were pursued by police. Cosentino said one man was arrested near the building that houses the television studios but the other man, who police said was armed, fled into the building.

A WLS employee said police evacuated the building at 11 a.m. and searched the building but could not find the man. Cosentino said, however, later in the day an employee saw the man and alerted police again. He said the building was evacuated a second time at 8 p.m. while police conducted a floor-by-floor search of the building with two dog teams, two tactical units and about 10 police officers.

The television station went off the air at 10 p.m. WLS-TV began transmitting from the Sears Tower at about 10:30 p.m. to inform the audience know why the station had been off the air for its 10 p.m. nightly newscast.

Sgt. Louis Wilcox said police called off the search at 11:15 p.m.

''The guy probably got away,'' he said.

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AUG. 26) UPI - Security forces entered the fifth day of a major offensive against Tamil guerrillas Sunday, seizing control of a strategic island in northern Sri Lanka and preparing to storm the rebel stronghold of Jaffna, a senior military official said.

The object of the offensive, which was launched Wednesday and involved some 3,600 troops, was to capture the area surrounding a 300-year-old, star-shaped former Dutch fort, where about 200 soldiers and policemen have been trapped by rebels for more than two months.

A senior military official said security forces Sunday captured the island of Mandathivu, about 5 miles southwest of the port town of Jaffna, where the fort is located.

''We seized control of Mandathivu at dawn today and our troops are now poised to cross the causeway to the old Dutch fort camp,'' the official said.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, who control most of the northern Jaffna peninsula, have used automatic weapons and mortars in sporadic attacks on the fort, preventing government helicopters from landing inside to deliver food and other supplies, and evacuating wounded soldiers.

Past efforts by government forces to break the rebel grip on the area have failed. But military officials said they were confident that ''Operation Fort'' will succeed.

''We have reason to believe that Tiger terrorists are in difficulty,'' said the official. ''Radio intercepts have shown them calling for help from cadres in other areas.''

Military officials said at least 185 rebels and civilians have been killed since the offensive was launched last week. They did not say how many soldiers had been killed or wounded.

Fighting between Tiger rebels and security forces broke out in mid-June after militants attacked four military bases in eastern Sri Lanka.

Attempts to negotiate a cease-fire failed and fighting spread throughout the eastern and northern provinces. Since then, at least 2,600 combatants and civilians have been killed.

Tiger rebels are fighting for an independent homeland in northern and eastern Sri Lanka for the nation's mostly-Hindu Tamil minority.

They believe that Tamils have been discriminated against for years by the majority Sinhalese, who are predominantly Buddhist and who control the Colombo government.

VIENNA (AUG. 26) UPI - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, flying home to Vienna Sunday with a planeload of Austrian citizens who had been trapped in Iraq and Kuwait, said he made no deals with Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to win the release of his countrymen.

Waldheim said he failed to persuade the Iraqi leader to free other foreigners stranded in the Persian Gulf but said Saddam expressed willingness during their talks Saturday to find a peaceful solution to the three-week-old crisis.

''He said, 'I am ready to negotiate. I am ready for discussions,''' Waldheim told Austrian television in a live interview from his airplane as it flew from Amman, Jordan, toward the Austrian capital early Sunday.

Accompanying Waldheim were more than 80 Austrian citizens who were granted permission to return home following Waldheim's talks with Saddam. About 31 other Austrians arrived in Vienna earlier from Turkey after fleeing Iraq over land.

Waldheim brushed aside suggestions that his visit to Iraq represented a break in solidarity with the United States and other western countries, and he stressed he had made no deals with Saddam.

''There were no conditions set for releasing the Austrians, so I don't think this could turn out to be negative for Austria,'' he told state-owned television.

He said there was ''no question'' of reversing Austria's policy of honoring U.N.-mandated trade sanctions against Iraq and Kuwait.

Waldheim was the first Western head of state to meet with Saddam since the invasion of Kuwait.

Having become acquainted with Saddam while serving as U.N. secretary-general, Waldheim had said he planned to use his personal influence to win the release of Austrians and other foreigners trapped in Iraq and Kuwait.

''The main thing that concerned me was the fate of the Austrians. I was getting letters from mothers and fathers, saying, 'Please, do something,'' he said. ''...I am very happy that things worked out.''

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AUG. 26) UPI - An overloaded and unlicensed pleasure boat chartered by the Shell Oil Co. and carrying 88 vacationers capsized at a lake resort in Taiwan, and 55 were feared dead, rescue officials said Sunday.

The triple-decker boat, authorized to carry 60 people, overturned late Saturday night at Sun Moon Lake while making a sharp left turn. Thirty-three of the passengers managed to swim about 500 yards to shore, the officials said.

Only 17 bodies had been recovered 18 hours after the accident at the popular resort, located about 160 miles from Taipei.

''We're all devastated to a horrific degree,'' said one of the survivors, Briton John Crossman, who is President of Shell Taiwan Ltd.

''The boat was making a left turn and then just keeled over,'' he said.

Crossman's daughter, Nicola, also made it safely to shore, but his wife and son were among those feared to have drowned.

''We're all very unclear as to what happened. After we started to turn, the boat sloped significantly and within 10 seconds it was vertical,'' said one survivor, who withheld his name.

''Three seconds later we turned completely over,'' he said.

The company chartered the ''Hsin Yeh'' for a summer moonlit cruise, and at least 85 of the occupants were Shell employees and their family members.

Of those who swam to shore or were rescued, 11 were foreigners - five Britons, five Malaysians and one Australian.

The manager of the travel agency which arranged the trip was among the 38 persons still unaccounted for, nine of whom were foreigners.

The owner of the vessel was arrested and police were planning to charge him with involuntary manslaughter, Nantou County Police officials said.

In addition to being over capacity and unlicensed, police said the boat violated a 6 p.m. curfew for pleasure yachts.

Cause of the accident had not been determined, but survivors said overcrowding was the most likely reason, as weather was not a factor.

''It was a clear and beautiful evening,'' said one, who swam in darkness to the shore.

WARSAW, Poland (AUG. 26) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa predicts he will win if he runs for the Polish presidency, but says he will do so only upon adoption of a compulsory voting law, a Polish independent daily reported.

''If I am to run, then (taking part in) the presidential elections will have to be compulsory. Every Pole has to elect the president, to take a stand,'' Walesa said in an interview published Saturday in Zycie Warszawy.

''I know I will win,'' he said of the presidential elections, which could take place as early as this fall.

''I want to have strong support. Only then would I be able to fulfill the tasks, recall, appeal, ask or say no,'' Walesa said.

The Center Alliance, a group that emerged from the umbrella Solidarity movement to back Walesa for the presidency, wants presidential elections to be held as early as possible and has launched a campaign to force President Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the former Communist leader, into early resignation.

As part of an agreement between Solidarity and then-ruling Communists, a presidency with vast powers was created last spring, and Jaruzelski was installed by Parliament in July 1989 for a six-year term.

Following a landslide in partially free elections last June, a Solidarity-led government led by Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki took over in September 1989 and the Communist Party fell apart, changing its name and voting itself out of existence in February.

Communist ministers of internal affairs and defense who helped Jaruzelski oversee the imposition of martial law in 1981 - an action that suppressed Solidarity but failed to deliver a fatal blow - were finally purged last month. Pressure to oust the last vestige of communist Poland, Jarulzelski, has gained strength.

Center Alliance argues that a strong, popular president is neccessary to oversee the period of economic transition that is bound to breed dissatisfaction over higher prices and decreased living standards.

Walesa, who has called for the general to step down and has expressed interest in the post, said he did not think his former close aide and present prime minister, Mazowiecki, would run against him for the presidency. The two have clashed over the pace of reforms, with Walesa wanting a speedier break with the past.

Some backers of the prime minister want him to challenge Walesa, since the presidency is potentially a more powerful post and because Mazowiecki is seen as the only person who could challenge Walesa.

Mazowiecki, who has not revealed his future political plans, addressed a gathering of Solidarity activists in Warsaw Saturday to commemorate the birth a decade ago of the Solidarity movement, the first free trade union in the East Bloc.

He recalled the important alliance between the workers and intellectuals that was forged in 1980.

''This value mustn't be lost in the new conditions,'' Mazowiecki told the audience of some 400 Solidarity figures and journalists at Warsaw University.

NEW YORK (AUG. 26) UPI - A man riding a motorcycle on a Bronx street was knocked off his cycle by a hit-and-run driver and killed and his bike was stolen as he lay dead, police said Sunday.

The cyclist, Richard Rivers, 23, of the Bronx, was hit at 11:45 p.m. Saturday by a car that sped away, said Sgt. Ed Burns, a police spokesman.

Rivers was dead at the scene, Burns said.

Witnesses saw a black automobile leave the scene at 176th Street and Montgomery Avenue in the University Heights section, Burns said.

''Before the police arrived, someone stole his motorcycle as he was lying there,'' Burns said.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AUG. 26) UPI - Methane gas exploded in a coal mine in central Yugoslavia Sunday, killing at least eight miners and trapping about 178 underground, Yugoslavian news reports said.

Mine officials said the explosion occured at 1:30 a.m. at the Dobrinja lignite coal mine 120 miles southwest of Belgrade, Belgrade Radio said.

The explosion was the fourth large-scale accicident in a Yugoslavian coal mine since 1982.

The bodies of eight miners were brought out of the mine Sunday morning, the Yugoslavian news agency Tanjug reported. It was not immediately known at what depth the 178 remaining miners were trapped, Tanjug said.

The miners in Dobrinja had gone on strike on Aug. 6, but returned to work Friday.

Yugoslavia's last major mine disaster was in February 1989, when 90 miners were killed by fire in the Aleksinac brown coal mine, 130 miles southeast of Belgrade.

In 1982, 39 miners died after a methane explosion at Zenica in the republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina. In 1983, 35 died in an accident at Aleksinac in Serbia.

Yugoslavia's worst coal-mining accident occurred in 1965 when 128 died after an explosion at Kakanj in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

VOSLOORUS, South Africa (AUG. 26) UPI - Paratroopers, mechanized soldiers and police swept through strife-torn black townships Sunday, searching homes and seizing makeshift weapons in a bid to enforce emergency law designed to quell savage inter-tribal violence.

Officials of the rival factions toured a number of the 27 flashpoint townships under emergency rule, seeking to consolidate a tenuous peace among their followers and reassure them in the face of the heavy military presence.

A hand grenade attack late Saturday on a railway station waiting room at Roodepoort, west of Johannesburg, killed a black man and injured two black women, police said. A spokesman said witnesses had seen ''at least one suspicious-looking black man but also a white man,'' and said it was premature to suggest any link to the internecine strife.

Heavily armed and helmeted soldiers early Sunday cordoned off streets and roads in Vosloorus, KwaThema and Botleng townships, east of Johannesburg, as squads went through houses and confiscated any object that looked like a weapon, including lengths of lead pipe and bicycle spokes.

Zulu followers of Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha movement have been waging war in the townships against the African National Congress, which has accused the Zulu chief of fomenting the strife to consolidate his political position before the beginning of power-sharing talks with Pretoria on a post-apartheid constitution.

Elite army units moved in to bolster police following the imposition by the government Friday of sweeping emergency measures in the Johannesburg-area townships, giving police almost unlimited powers of arrest and seizure for renewable three-month periods.

ANC deputy president and de facto leader Nelson Mandela, who left for a week's visit abroad Saturday, attacked the measures as ''totally useless'' and warned the broad powers given police could lead to human-rights abuses and were tantamount to reimposing a state of emergency lifted across most of South Africa in June.

Mandela is due to address a conference on ''the Anatomy of Hate'' in Oslo, Norway, on Monday and then is to travel to Libya and Algeria to follow up talks he held there on previous visits before returning home Aug. 31.

Police reported the settlements quiet but uneasy Sunday.

Since sporadic battles broke out Aug. 13 at least 515 people have been killed and about 1,500 injured. Security forces found two bodies overnight.

Internal ANC leader Walter Sisulu and Zulu tribal chiefs sympathetic to the predominantly Xhosa ANC toured townships telling their supporters to remain calm and ignore the military presence, ANC spokeswoman Gill Marcus said. ''This violence has done only terrible harm,'' she noted.

ANC officials claimed Buthelezi exported the conflict to Transvaal province from his stronghold of Natal, where battles between Inkatha and the ANC have killed up to 4,000 people since 1987.

President Frederik de Klerk, in a move aimed at racial reform, lifted a 4-year-old nationwide state of emergency June 8 in three provinces but maintained it in Natal, citing the fierce conflict there.

Buthelezi has rejected charges that he has stirred the unrest. Mandela, under pressure from De Klerk, indicated on Thursday a meeting with his arch-rival was possible, reversing an ANC demand that Inkatha had to admit culpability for the violence before any meeting between the leaders.

But Mandela gave no sign when the meeting might take place.

Mandela did not leave South Africa ''a happy man,'' Sisulu noted.

''He is unhappy with the emergency situation in the townships and the related tensions that we believe will follow in the long term,'' Sisulu said.

The emergency rule, which applies in the stricken areas for renewable periods of three months, handed police almost unlimited powers to arrest, detain and disarm warring factions.

(AUG. 26) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... news from United Press International:

Military reservists are answering their telephones nervously this weekend. 127 Naval Reserve units were activated Saturday and 173 Army National Guard and Army Reserve units were alerted for possible activation in coming weeks. This call-up because of the Mideast crisis is part of the first activation of reserves in 20 years.

The number of nations represented at an OPEC meeting in Vienna Sunday can be crucial in determining production. At least 10 members must vote to call a formal meeting that can change quotas. Analysts doubt that many will even show up for the informal meeting. Some members say they will raise production on their own if OPEC does NOT act. They say higher production is needed to offset output lost because of the U-N embargo of oil from Iraq and Kuwait.

Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze says he hopes Saturday's U-N Security Council action will persuade Iraq to pull its troops out of Kuwait. The council authorized use of limited force to implement U-N sanctions against Iraq. Shevardnadze echoed Soviet President Gorbachev's desire that Iraq end its occupation.

Military sources say El Salvador has arrested a ninth soldier in last November's killing of six Jesuit priests. The soldier fled while being questioned in court, and was caught later. A court spokesman says the suspect, Sergeant Oscar Solorzano, may NOT have participated in the actual killing.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AUG. 26) UPI - Pope John Paul II Sunday issued his second appeal in five days for a peaceful solution to the crisis in the Persian Gulf, making a special plea that thousands of trapped Westerners be allowed to leave Iraq and Kuwait.

Speaking to a group of several thousand pilgrimns gathered in a courtyard at the papal summer residence, John Paul appealed for prayers for ''the truly worrying situation'' in the region.

''I ask you to pray for peace in the Persian Gulf, where a truly worrying situation has been created,'' the pontiff said. ''In reality, we are witnesses to grave violations of international rights and the charter of the United Nations, such as the principles of ethics that should govern people living together.''

John Paul appealed for prayers ''for those who are suffering because of unjust treatment far from their homelands,'' an apparent reference to Iraq's refusal to allow thousands of foreigners to leave territory it now controls.

John Paul, who leaves next weekend on a trip to Africa, characterized the gulf situation as ''this hour of profound trepidation.''

The pope added that he hopes that ''the star of peace shines over the peoples of the Persian Gulf and the Middle East, especially those in Lebanon and Palestine.''

The Polish-born pontiff, meanwhile, praised his nation's Solidarity trade union as the organization's 10th anniversary approaches this week.

In an encounter which the Vatican described as purely coincidental, the pope is scheduled to meet Monday with Solidarity founder Lech Walesa at the papal summer retreat in the wine-growing hills south of Rome.

Walesa, reported to be considering a run for the presidency in newly democratic Poland, will be meeting with the pope for a fifth time. He is making a two-day private visit to Italy.

In a statement released by the Vatican, John Paul praised Solidarity - officially founded 10 years ago this Thursday - for leading Poland's way toward constructing ''a civilized society, built on the principles of a healthy democracy, avoiding everything that is unhealthy.''

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AUG. 26) UPI - The largest U.S military logistical operation since World War II is proceeding on schedule as ships bearing hundreds of M-1 Abrams tanks near Saudi Arabia, the mission commander said

Sunday.

The tanks, named for a U.S. commander in Vietnam, will be the crucial backbone of the U.S. ground force now assembling to confront Iraq.

Maj. Gen. William Pagonis, who has the daunting task of ushering in the enormous quantities of men and materiel coming to the desert kingdom, said at a news conference that essentials for a combat force had been delivered and the key task now was sustaining the troops.

''We have got everybody to the right place and all the cargo to the right place,'' he said. ''Our combat power is growing rapidly, and we are ready to sustain it for as long as necessary.''

He said the military foundation had been laid by hundreds of air sorties, still being flown at the rate of about 50 a day, and five cargo ships from a pre-positioned maritime force in the region.

The vessels, which had been stationed at the Indian Ocean base of Diego Garcia in case of a Middle East crisis, are delivering enough armor and equipment to sustain a full Marine brigade for 30 days.

Pagonis said the next stage of the deployment would be the arrival of ships bearing an estimated 300 M-1 Abrams main battle tanks, America's top-range heavy armor and a vital attack weapon should U.S., Saudi and Arab forces move against the Iraqi armies stationed in occupied Kuwait.

The tank is named for the late Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, a legendary World War II tank fighter under Gen. George S. Patton who later commanded U.S. military forces in the Vietnam War.

''Right now, they are due in the next few days,'' Pagonis said.

Troops from the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division have been streaming to Saudi Arabia to man the armor when it arrives.

The M-1 is viewed by analysts as overwhelmingly superior to Iraq's Soviet-supplied T-72s, and its employment would allow American forces to take the offensive and actually occupy ground they expect would be yielded by Iraqi troops hit by U.S. airpower and naval barrages.

More than 40,000 U.S. ground troops are estimated to be in Saudi Arabia, and many have been deployed to defend the main port of Jubail, north of Dhahran and about 130 miles south of Kuwait.

Pagonis bestowed accolades on the American military personnel in the desert, who he said had performed ''miracles'' by dealing with a myriad of challenges since Operation Desert Shield began full-scale Aug.8.

''It is probably the largest logistical exercise ever accomplished in the shortest period of time since World War II,'' he said.

Pagonis said the military always kept a 30-day backup of essential supplies, but this could be extended. His units had originally been working 36-hour shifts with four hours sleep, but this was now scaled back to 22 hours, with four hours sleep, he said.

The commander said forward troops were being sustained by ration packs, but about 80 to 90 percent of the food, great quantities of bottled water and certain fuels were being provided by Saudi Arabia.

''The Saudis have cut through any bureaucratic problems very swiftly,'' he said. ''There has been no squabbling or holding back. Even the United States would have a few problems dropping such a number of soldiers, for example, in New Jersey.''

The general also predicted that the Iraqi forces, estimated to number about 170,000 in Kuwait, had equally difficult tasks.

''They have to sustain their forces forward. Kuwait will only be able to provide so much food and water,'' he said. ''I am sure their logistical lines are stretched to the limit.''

(AUG. 26) UPI - Iraq allowed 55 Americans to leave Baghdad for Turkey Sunday but reports said authorities had rounded up more British and Japanese nationals and taken them to unknown locations.

A convoy of 13 cars carrying the Americans, most of them wives and children of U.S. diplomats stationed in Kuwait, left Baghdad in darkness before dawn Sunday and headed toward the Turkish border, said Carol Lee Heileman, U.S. Embassy duty officer in Ankara.

But she said about 54 male embassy personnel had been forbidden to leave Baghdad and ''we're working very hard to secure their release as well.''

The Americans had traveled to Baghdad from Kuwait last week after Iraq ordered all foreign embassies in the occupied city to close. The United States, along with most other countries, defied the order but sent most of its personnel to Baghdad, leaving behind a skeleton staff in Kuwait.

The release of the Americans followed an appeal by Jordan's King Hussein and intensive contacts between U.S. Embassy officials and the Iraqi foreign ministry. Iraq had said it would hold the group until the U.S.

Embassy in Kuwait was completely closed - something the United States has refused to do because it would be a tacit admission that Iraq's annexation of the oil rich emirate was successful.

In other developments Sunday:

- Iraq maintained pressure on the defiant embassies in Kuwait by preventing them from receiving power and water, but Japanese spokesmen said their two diplomats had more than enough food and water to sit tight for six months.

- Diplomatic efforts to end the conflict continued with several sets of envoys traveling from country to country, but British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's prognosis was that a negotiated settlement was ''most unlikely.''

- In Vienna, OPEC oil ministers met to discuss a proposal to increase production quotas in order to counterbalance oil shortages caused by an embargo against Iraq and Kuwait, but it appeared a serious split was developing in the cartel.

The British Foreign Office reported Sunday eight Britons were taken from their homes in Kuwait Saturday by Iraqi forces, bringing to 145 the number of British citizens who have been rounded up during the crisis.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has said the foreigners will be held at key military and economic sites to guard against attack by Western forces, which were dispatched to the gulf region after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The French foreign ministry reported eight French citizens, including two women and two children, were taken from their homes and detained at the Regency Hotel in Kuwait. About 60 French have been rounded up.

And Japanese officials in Tokyo said 20 of its citizens were rounded up from a Baghdad hotel and driven off in a bus to an unknown location.

In a message possibly signaling a stiffening resolve to round up Western foreigners, Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council announced anyone found hiding foreigners would be executed because the government considered such action, a ''crime of espionage,'' the Iraqi News Agency, INA reported.

Iraq maintained pressure Sunday on more than 20 embassies in Kuwait that refused to obey Baghdad's order to shut down Friday. Electricity and water has been turned on and off at several of the missions and Iraqi troops remained outside the compounds. Several embassies also reported their telecommunication systems had been cut.

Iraq said diplomats who stayed beyond the deadline would lose their diplomatic status, indicating they could face detention. No force, however has been used to try to move them out.

Thatcher reacted angrily Sunday to a meeting last week between Saddam and British hostages that was aired on Iraqi television and rebroadcast around the world.

''You are dealing with a dictator who is an absolute tyrant, who had a callous charade on television with children,'' Thatcher said. ''We know full well that he hasn't hesisted to use the chemical weapon against innocent people. This man is a despot and a tyrant and must be stopped.''

The U.N. Security Council ruled Saturday that warships in the gulf region could use ''minimal force'' to stop ships suspected of breaking an economic blockade against Iraq imposed by the United Nations following the invasion of Kuwait.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 26) UPI - Like winds that sweep across fields, bending the grain into passing waves, the impact of the Persian Gulf crisis is rippling across rural America in the form of higher fuel prices and worries about lost sales.

There were reports of fuel prices rising 40 cents a gallon in the Northwest while Corn Belt farmers, some of them approaching the end of a rain-soaked growing season, worried about unexpected costs for drying their grain.

In the parched Southeast, the president of the Georgia Agribusiness Council said higher fuel prices could worsen the situation of producers who are pumping water to their crops.

''You start pumping hundreds of thousands of gallons of water a day, and you can go through a tanker of diesel (fuel) in a day,'' said council president Gary Black.

An Agriculture Department official estimated that a $5 a barrel increase in oil prices could add $900 million a year in farm fuel, fertilizer, pesticide and utility costs, assuming a long-lasting oil-price increase.

''Diesel prices are up 40 cents a gallon from a month ago,'' said Gary Benner, petroleum manager for a farm supplier in the Spokane, Wash., area. ''Where (the farmer) used to spend $7,500 per year, he's now spending $11,000.

''Their reaction is the reaction you and I have to rising gasoline prices - they don't like it.''

Iraq was the 12th largest market for U.S. agricultural exports, buying $800 million in goods during fiscal 1989. Even before the U.S. embargo, sales had been expected to shrink because of curtailment of Iraqi access to export credit guarantees.

Iraq was the No. 1 market for U.S. rice exports, buying 20 percent of them in fiscal 1989 and 302,254 metric tons of U.S. rice in the first eight months of this fiscal year.

''The general attitude is one of exasperation. You just want to grow your hands up,'' said rice grower John Tull of Lonoke, Ark. ''Not only does this take your largest market away and affect our price drastically, but it's going to increase our production costs.''

Rice prices have fallen by about 50 cents per 100 pounds since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 and precipitated the international embargo. The Agriculture Department has reduced its forecast of exports by 3 percent, to 74 million hundredweight, based on ''additional sales to other markets'' making up for most of the loss of the Iraqi market.

In addition, it has reduced its forecast of rice prices during the coming year by 50 cents per hundredweight. There is a large world rice crop this year.

Iraq played a far less prominent role in other U.S. farm exports. It accounted for 3 percent of wheat sales and 1 percent of corn sales.

However, the Bush administration was under pressure to protect farmer income against any possible downturn in grain sales and market prices. Farmers are expected to harvest bumper crops of wheat and feed grains this year, with prices expected to fall as a result. Large world crops are projected to put a crimp on export sales.

''The embargo does not have to hurt American grain exports or depress grain prices if the president and the (Agriculture Department) will simply use the tools they have to move farm commodities around the world or into a strategic reserve,'' said Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., whose home state is the No. 1 durum wheat grower.

Dorgan's prescription - putting wheat into long-term storage in the Farmer Owned Reserve, re-stocking the Food Security Wheat Reserve and making heavy use of export subsidy programs - was similar to ideas expressed earlier this month by Wheat Belt congressmen worried about low prices.

Consumers were not expected to feel much of a direct impact from higher farm expenses. Fuel, chemicals and utilities account for 15 percent of farm production costs and farmers get 24 cents out of each dollar spent on food.

The Agriculture Department has forecast food prices will go up 5 percent to 7 percent this year, partly because of double-digit increases for some commodities and the uncertain fuel price outlook.

In addition to the impact on farmers, oil price increases could affect the cost of processing, packaging, shipping and selling food.

AMMAN, Jordan (AUG. 26) UPI - King Hussein of Jordan traveled Sunday to Libya on the first stop of another round of visits to Middle East capitals in pursuit of an Arab initiative to avert war in the Persian Gulf region.

State-run Amman radio said Hussein flew to Tripoli with a delegation of senior officials after holding separate meetings during the day in Amman with Turkish Foreign Minister Ali Bozer and the Sudanese leader, Gen. Omar Hassan al Bashir.

The trip was being made ''within the framework of his majesty's continuous efforts to end the gulf crisis by peaceful means and within the Arab fold '' the radio said.

The radio did not disclose Hussein's other destinations, although they are expected to include Algiers.

''His majesty will hold talks with officials of Arab countries on finding an Arab solution to the crisis and to avert destructive war in the area,'' it said.

Hussein last week visited Sudan and Yemen.

After his talks with Hussein, Bashir departed for Iraq for talks with the government of President Saddam Hussein.

He stressed that he was also involved in a search for an Arab plan to prevent hostilities between Iraqi forces and military contingents deployed in the gulf area by the United States, other Western states and several Arab nations.

''We are doing all we can to defuse the crisis and to prevent the outbreak of a devastating war. We are trying to formulate an Arab initiative for this purpose and we will continue our contacts with Arab leaders,'' Bashir told reporters.

Bozer, whose nation has sided with the West in imposing sanctions against its powerful Arab neighbor, was quoted by Amman radio as telling Hussein that he was visiting Jordan to stress ''Turkey's keenness'' for a diplomatic solution to the crisis.

After meeting Hussein, Bozer held talks with Crown Prince Hassan, who was sworn in as regent after the king departed for Libya, the radio said.

Meanwhile, Palestine Liberation Organization sources said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat was expected to return to Amman late Sunday from Baghdad after a one-day visit for talks with Iraqi leaders.

PLO sources on Saturday said Hussein and Arafat were coordinating on seeking Arab support for a peace plan calling for a freeze in military movements and the deployment in Kuwait of a U.N. peacekeeping force as a buffer between Iraqi forces and contingents of the United States and other nations.

The sources said that under the plans, talks would be held under U.N. auspices on developing a timetable for a mutual withdrawal of all forces and the future form of government for Kuwait, whose ruling al-Sabah family was ousted in the Iraqi invasion.

BOSTON (AUG. 26) UPI - An American who had been working in Kuwait and his 8-year-old son headed home Sunday after dodging bullets in a dramatic escape across the desert to Saudi Arabia, relatives said.

Bassam Mohtady, 34, and his son, Sammer, were expected to arrive at Logan International Airport Sunday afternoon, said Mohtady's wife, Kathleen, who lives in Saugus.

Mohtady, a U.S. national of Lebanese descent with relatives in Kuwait, had been living in Kuwait City, where he managed World Book Encyclopedia's office there, his wife said. Their son was visiting when Iraqi troops invaded the Persian Gulf state on Aug. 2.

The father and son remained in Kuwait for two weeks following the invasion but on Aug. 16 decided to set out across the desert.

''They were in a caravan of cars and went through the desert. They told me that there were 21 vehicles, and that out of the 21, only six of them made it. They were shot at, (bullets) shattered the windows of the jeep they were in,'' Kathleen Mohtady said.

''He told me there were 21 vehicles, but only six of them made it. I don't know what happened to the other people,'' she said.

The Mohtadys succeeded in crossing the border into Saudi Arabia and went to the U.S. Embassy in Riyadh, she said. From there, they were able to contact family members. Kathleen Mohtady later received a cable from the State Department saying her husband and son were safe in Dubai.

''I was thrilled to hear from them,'' she said. ''I'm glad that they're out of there, but my husband's family is still there and I think about them and all of the other people like them. It's their home, and they have no place else to go. It would be the same as if someone came and invaded here. I'd have nowhere else to go.''

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AUG. 26) UPI - Methane gas exploded in a coal mine in central Yugoslavia Sunday, and rescue workers said they believed all 186 miners working underground at the time were killed.

''There is no chance any of the trapped miners survived the explosion,'' the rescuers told national television.

Mine officials said the explosion occured at 1:30 a.m. at the Dobrinja lignite coal mine 120 miles southwest of Belgrade, Belgrade Radio said.

The explosion was the fourth large-scale accicident in a Yugoslavian coal mine since 1982.

The bodies of eight miners were brought out of the mine Sunday morning, the Yugoslavian news agency Tanjug reported. It was not immediately known at what depth the 178 remaining miners were trapped, Tanjug said.

The miners in Dobrinja had gone on strike on Aug. 6, but returned to work Friday.

Yugoslavia's last major mine disaster was in February 1989, when 90 miners were killed by fire in the Aleksinac brown coal mine, 130 miles southeast of Belgrade.

In 1982, 39 miners died after a methane explosion at Zenica in the republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina. In 1983, 35 died in an accident at Aleksinac in Serbia.

Yugoslavia's worst previous coal-mining accident occurred in 1965 when 128 died after an explosion at Kakanj in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 26) UPI - The Pentagon announced Sunday the call-up of soliders from 50 more Army Reserve and Army National Guard units from across the nation to assist in Operation Desert Shield.

The Pentagon would not disclose specific numbers for the troops called up Sunday. President Bush has authorized the call-up of nearly 50,000 military reservists to help stem Iraqi aggression in the Middle East.

On Saturday, more than 100 naval reserve units were activated.

The Army units activated Sunday included troops to assist in medical, postal and administrative jobs as well as in transportation, security, intelligence combat support, communications, linguistics, water purification, maintenance and cargo handling.

In another development, the Pentagon said Sunday that Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander in chief of the United States Central Command, had established his command headquarters in Saudi Arabia. The overseas headquarters is designated as U.S. Central Command (Forward) while the element still at Schwarzkopf's usual headquarters, MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla., will be known as the U.S. Central Command (Rear).

Also Sunday, parts of the Army's 13th Corps Support Command from Fort Hood Texas, were deploying in the Middle East as part of Operation Desert Shield.

CROOKED RIVER RANCH, OR (AUG. 26) UPI - An undetermined number of contestants crossed the finish line in one huge, huge bunch in the fourth annual ''Short Fat Guys Road Race.''

''We ran out of entry forms, so I don't have any idea how many people were in it,'' said Bob Ward, senior steward of Saturday's race at Crooked River Ranch in central Oregon. ''I guess about 45, but how would I know?''

At any rate, there's never been a single winner of the race. The 1-mile course is all downhill and contestants may use any form of transportation they choose. Everybody crosses the finish line together.

''Running is discouraged and cheating is encouraged,'' Ward said.

The only rule is that an entrant's waistline must be at least 4 inches bigger than his pants inseam. And if it's not, he can enter anyway.

The highlight of the race was the mandatory pit stop at the halfway point, where entrants consumed beer and hot dogs.

''It was a good breakfast,'' Ward said.

The participants eventually crossed the finish line together, en masse, so to speak.

''It was the biggest race to date,'' Ward said. ''They finished in about 33 minutes,'' then converged on the Sandbagger Saloon for twinkies and more beer, he said.

''On to more glory,'' Ward said. ''We'll do it again next year, although I don't know how.''

FRENCH LICK, IN (AUG. 26) UPI - Rep. Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said the support of Americans for President Bush's decision to send troops into Saudi Arabia may be eroding.

''Public perception is changing. I have been moving around the district the last several days, and I saw (that) there is increasing unease, caution, and quite frankly, open resentment about the United States being in this fix in the gulf,'' McCloskey told The Indianapolis Star Saturday.

McCloskey, who represents southern Indiana in Congress, will be among the congressmen who will meet with Bush Tuesday to discuss the situation in the Persian Gulf. He also serves on the House Foreign Relations Committee.

McCloskey said he supports Bush's diplomatic and military moves so far, but he said he hoped the presence of U.S. troops remains strictly defensive. He said the president had done an excellent job in lining up international support for the economic and trade sanctions against Iraq.

But McCloskey said the United States probably implicitly condoned Iraq's expansionist moves by not objecting to an earlier invasion of Iran. He said the threat of additional aggression by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had been anticipated and suggested to Bush by congressional sources.

''The House Foreign Affairs Committee has been raising the issue with Bush as to the ongoing menance of Saddam Hussein even before the invasion into Kuwait,'' he said. ''We haven't see much coopration from the administration.''

He said that should the United States be forced into combat and oust Saddam from Kuwait that the alternative was to return an Arab monarchy, a basic dictatorship, to power.

''I have visited with the royal Kuwaiti family. Their business is to move oil. There should be no sentiment or pretension that they are part of the free world. It is an Arab monarchy and hopefully we won't be in the position of having 19-year-old kids die for lower oil prices and Arab monarchists.''

McCloskey said his comments had nothing to do with politics and the fact he was a member of a Democratic congressional majority traditionally opposing a Republican president.

''What I am saying is not meant politically. We are not talking about Democratic and Republican politics,'' he said. ''We are talking about the lives of American youth. It is a policy issue, a moral issue and a life and death issue.''

(AUG. 26) UPI - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim says he made NO deals with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to win the release of 96 Austrian citizens. Waldheim met with Saddam yesterday in Iraq and secured the release of the Austrians. Rescue officials in Taiwan say an overloaded, UNlicensed pleasure boat chartered by the Shell Oil Company capsized at a lake resort last night and 55 people are feared dead. Officials say the boat turned over as it was making a sharp left turn. They say only 17 bodies had been recovered 18 hours after the accident. 33 of the 88 vacationers aboard managed to swim about 500 yards to shore.

Freed Irish hostage Brian Keenan arrived in Dublin last night and gave a victory salute as he stepped off an Irish government jet. Thousands turned out to welcome Keenan, who was released on Friday after being held more than four years by Moslem extremists in Lebanon. RIMINI, Italy (AUG. 26) UPI - Solidarity trade union leader Lech Walesa told an audience of Italians Sunday that creating a healthy market economy is the only way to put Poland on its feet economically.

Walesa, who is considering a run for the Polish presidency, was honored with an award worth the equivalent of $26,000 at the annual Friendship Meeting,sponsored by a Roman Catholic political organization.

The Solidarity founder, on the first day of a 48-hour visit to Italy, told a cheering audience of 10,000 that Italian economic help for the former East bloc country could create ''a business in which you (Italians) could gain a lot.''

Walesa, who will meet with Pope John Paul II Monday at the papal retreat at Castel Gandolfo south of Rome, has expressed interest at challenging former Communist leader and current President Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski in elections, possibly in the fall.

He called Sunday for splitting Solidarity into left and right wings to better cope with changing political and economic life in newly democratic Poland.

''We (Solidarity) are victorious, but many revolutionaries are ruined when they reach power,'' Walesa said at a news conference. ''The men in government today are fine, but after them could arrive people who are not as forthcoming.

''To guarantee against (the danger of) a monopoly, I propose a division between left and right.''

Walesa defended himself against charges voiced in Poland that he is applying pressure for elections which he believes he can win if the country makes voting compulsory.

''In the world, they say that I am trying to damage the government,'' Walesa said. ''But this is untrue because I only want to help democracy and the revolution.

''We need the government to govern so that there are parties which are able to participate in politics and help create a market economy. The means to gain this objective is a wise division.''

(AUG. 26) UPI - A U-S Embassy official in Ankara confirms 55 U-S Embassy dependents are on their way to Iraq's border with Turkey... after being released from Baghdad. Duty Officer Carol Heileman says the group is traveling in a convoy of 13 vehicles over mountainous terrain in very hot weather. She says the journey will take from eight to 10 hours. She says ''about 54'' male personnel are still detained in Baghdad and adds U-S officials are working to secure their release as well.

Across the United States yesterday, families and friends said good-bye to their loved ones- military reservists called up to support American troops in Saudi Arabia. The Pentagon says about 10-thousand men and women will be activated by the end of the month. Among the reservists being called up- specialists in international law, the Arabic language and chemical decontamination.

OPEC oil ministers are to meet in Vienna today to discuss raising production levels to make up for shortages brought on by the U-N embargo against Iraq. They were allowed to leave Baghdad last night and are traveling to Iraq's border with Turkey in a convoy of 13 vehicles. The 55 are believed to be mostly women and children.

The U-S spokeswoman in Turkey says the convoy is moving through very hot

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 27) UPI - Retail gasoline prices rose an average of a nickel a gallon over the last two weeks, but the rate of increase was half that of the period immediately after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, an industry analyst said Sunday.

In a survey Friday of some 13,000 retail gasoline outlets nationwide, the weighted average price per gallon was 133.16 cents, up 5.22 cents from the last survey on Aug. 10, said Trilby Lundberg, director of the Lundberg Survey.

In the same two-week period, wholesale gasoline prices rose at a faster rate, cutting retailers' profits by about 4 cents a gallon, Lundberg said.

''Wholesale prices increased more than 9 cents in that period, but retailers chose not to pass all of that through,'' she said. ''In general, they actually lost about 4 cents of their operating margin, which means many of them will need to try to get that back.''

As a result, she said, ''There is upward price pressure at this time.''

Lundberg said pump prices in the coming weeks will depend on forces in both directions.

Additional price increases could result if retailers try to recoup the profit shortfall of the last two weeks and if the highly speculative spot gasoline market climbs.

On the other hand, prices could be pulled down in early September by the traditional drop in demand following the peak driving months of July and August, Lundberg said.

''We use a lot less gasoline after August. If crude oil prices allow, there would be downward price pressure at this time of year,'' she said.

However, Lundberg said, retailers cannot be expected to continue taking drastically reduced profits.

''Even a penny can endanger a station over time,'' she said.

MAHWAH, NJ (AUG. 26) UPI - Steffi Graf, in her final tuneup before defending her U.S. Open title this week, was stretched to three sets and nearly two hours before turning back 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, Sunday in the final of the $160,000 Pathmark Tennis Classic at Ramapo College.

Graf, her famed forehand erratic, won her third straight tournament title and fourth in the last five years. The world's No. 1 player took home $30,000, and Capriati, the third seed, earned $20,000.

Capriati, a pro for only six months, made a big improvement over her first match against Graf - a 6-2, 6-4 loss in the fourth round at Wimbledon.

''I wasn't too happy about playing a third set,'' said Graf, who failed to convert on a match point in the ninth game of the second set. ''My forehand was awful and I went for my shots too quickly. I wasn't too patient.''

The Pathmark Classic is a special event and not a regular circuit tournament. ''I played it like an exhibition and people take the result too seriously, too tense,'' Graf said.

Capriati, the 13th seed at the Open, is slated to play Graf in the fourth round, barring upsets. ''I feel psyched for the Open now and have a lot of confidence,'' said the teenager, the favorite of a sellout crowd of 5,112. ''I almost had her.

''I came to win and don't care if it was an exhibition,'' she said. ''I was playing for me, for my pride.''

Capriati finally held in the ninth after Graf missed a forehand at match point and then overhit on successive service returns. A forehand topspin passing shot gave Capriati a service break in the 10th game for a 5-5 tie.

Graf had a break point in the 11th but misfired on a forehand. The West German was broken in the 12th, managing only one point, which came on one of her nine aces.

''When it gets to a third set, it could go either way,'' Graf said. She broke in the opening game and nursed the lead to 4-2 before Capriati caught up on a break in the eighth when Graf doublefaulted.

But Capriati tired in the final two games, winning only one point in the ninth and 10th games. Graf, effective throughout the match with drop shots used one on her second match point. Capriati caught up with the dying ball but her forehand clipped the cord and shot wide for the match.

''I hope that winning here is a good omen for the Open,'' said Graf, who has followed her successes here with triumphs in Flushing Meadow in 1988 and 1989.

Graf, a two-time winner at the U.S. Open, opens her drive for the final Grand Slam title of the year in the third stadium match Monday, facing qualifier Maureen Drake of Canada. Capriati, who won the U.S. Open juniors last year, makes her Open debut Tuesday against Anke Huber, a 15-year-old West German.

(AUG. 26) UPI - Egypt's foreign minister says Kuwait ''sooner or later'' will free itself from Iraqi occupation, but he says he hopes that will come about through peaceful means. The foreign minister also says Egypt fully supports U-N resolutions calling for stricter enforcement of sanctions against Iraq because of its invasion of Kuwait. He made the comments today before leaving Cairo for Moscow... for talks on the Persian Gulf crisis.

In Italy, Pope John Paul today issued another appeal for a peaceful solution to the crisis in the Persian Gulf. He called for prayers for what he termed ''the truly worrying situation'' in the region. He also made a special plea that thousands of trapped Westerners be allowed to leave Iraq and Kuwait. John Paul's speech to pilgrims gathered at the papal summer residence marked his second such appeal in five days.

NASA is getting ready to resume shuttle flights this week. The shuttle Columbia is tentatively set for launch Saturday on a long-delayed astronomy mission. It's carrying a battery of telescopes built to study ultraviolet light from stars and galaxies that cannot penetrate Earth's atmosphere. If the launch goes as planned, it will be the first in four months. A hydrogen leak delayed Columbia's mission last May.

Tropical Storm Gustav strengthened into a hurricane today, with 75-mile-an-hour winds threatening the northeast Caribbean. A hurricane watch was issued for islands in the extreme northeastern Caribbean, and forecasters said a hurricane warning probably would be issued by tomorrow. WILLIAMSPORT, PA (AUG. 26) UPI - Taiwan Little League Manager Tzyy-Tsann Wang describes baseball as a ''very beautiful art,'' and the picture his pitcher painted Sunday proved his point.

Chao-Chi Sun fired a two-hitter, striking out 16 and walking only one in giving his country its 14th World Series' title in 17 tries with a 9-0 victory over East titlist Shippensburgh, Pa..

Far East representatives have captured 19 series championships in 27 trips here.

Sun fanned the first eight batters he faced before giving up a walk. Gregg

Mellott ended Sun's no-hit bid with a two-out swinging bunt single in the third. The only other hit off the right-hander was a two-out single by Dave Orndorff in the sixth.

Wang called Sun's performance ''really superb.''

''He's probably had the best curve ball we've seen yet,'' said Shippensburgh Manager Glen Orndorff.

''He threw his best ball for strikes, and he caught our kids off guard a lot with his curve ball. We were swinging at some bad pitches and he had us going. We had the kids move up in the box, then he's throw the fastball past us.''

Through three innings Shippensburg pitcher Bob Shannon held the Far East in check with an overpowering fastball that was clocked at 74mph. Wang said his players were swinging for the fences, but when he told them to choke up on the bat it helped.

To prove the point, Tainan County scored four runs in the fourth and fifth innings.

''I think most of it was mental. A boy that big (5-foot-7, 165 pounds), he hasn't had a sore arm all the way through,'' Orndorff said of Shannon. ''The heat and everything might have gotten to him a little bit.''

Orndorff admitted his players had a letdown following Saturday's emotionally-draining win in the American Championship. Shippensburg scored a 5-4 come-from-behind win over West champs Cypruss, Calif., in that game.

''They came back. They were really to play today. We just got beat,'' Orndorff explained.

Added East coach Gregg Mellott of the Far East, which rapped out nine hits and took adantage of five U.S. errors, ''They were just hitters. They're a hitting team.''

Orndorff said he feels people in Shippensburg will help his players wind down and resume their normal lives before too long.

''Our town's not a town that keeps the hoopla going. They let kids be kids. They are down to earth. They will treat them like kids. Kids are kids.''

Tainan County finished All Star play for boys 11- and 12-years-old with a 15-0 record. Shippensburg was 17-1.

During the rain-plagued World Series, in which the final game was pushed back one day, Tainan County outscored its three opponents 43-1. The only run it gave up was to Canadian titlist Trail, B.C., in a 20-1 win in the foreign bracket final Saturday.

Sun-Hsuan Yang finished as the leading hitter for the Far East, going 7-for-8, while Hsieh was the most productive with 11 RBI. After going 7-for-9 with all of his RBI through two games, Yih-Chieh Hsieh was 0-for-2 but scored two runs Sunday.

(AUG. 26) UPI - Jordanian state radio says that country's King Hussein headed to Libya today to- quote- ''end the gulf crisis by peaceful means and within the Arab fold.'' The radio reported Hussein had several unidentified destinations to speak with Arab leaders to resolve the Middle East standoff.

Prior to departing for Tripoli, Hussein met with the Turkish foreign minister. Turkey has sided with the West since Iraqi forces rolled into Kuwait three-and-a-half weeks ago. But the Turkish official told Jordanian radio he traveled to Amman to express his country's desire for a negotiated end to the crisis.

DAYTON, OHIO (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - NCR Corp. has unveiled the high performance Small Computer System Interface (SCSI) laser printer, that delivers 15 pages per minute.

Compared to other printer interfaces, the SCSI is designed to operate up to seven times faster than a standard parallel port and 100 times faster than RS 232 serial port, according to NCR.

The industry standard SCSI interface was developed and pioneered by NCR and allows for the connection of disks, tapes, printers and scanners through the sharing of a common high-speed input/output (I/O) channel.

The new NCR 6436-0301 SCSI Laser Printer, designed for graphics-intensive applications where high speed and performance are required, is one of the first SCSI printers, NCR said. It is targeted for the personal computer market for use in office printing or network environments.

The NCR 6436-0301 SCSI Laser Printer is now available and has a suggested list price of $7,995.

''The unit's high speed I/O and printing performance are accomplished through the connection of a SCSI interface between the host and the printer,'' said Cliff Dullea, general manager, NCR Peripheral Products Division. ''This differentiates this printer from other laser printers which use conventional interfaces, such as parallel or serial.''

Data transfer over the SCSI connection is so fast that NCR's SCSI printer runs a one-megabyte bit-mapped graphics file at 300 dots per inch (dpi), up to seven times faster than the conventional parallel interface.

MILWAUKEE/ELKHART, IND. (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Excel Industries Inc. (ASE:EXC) today said that it has agreed to purchase the assets of the Door Systems division of Milwaukee-based Johnson Controls Inc. (NYSE:JCI) for an undisclosed amount of cash.

The transaction is to close Oct. 1, 1990.

James J. Lohman, chief executive of Excel, said that Door Systems is the leading independent supplier of window regulator systems for the automotive market. ''Door Systems is the only independent manufacturer of all three types of regulators marketed today,'' Lohman said, ''and its acquisition strongly positions Excel in the roll-up glass area.'' He added that Excel has worked closely with Door Systems in the past two years in developing a modular door cartridge.

''The door cartridge we have jointly developed utilizes all internal functions of side-window roll-up glass in a module that can be assembled into the sheet metal door,'' Lohman said. ''We expect this type of product will be used in vehicles introduced in the second half of the '90s. If it is successful, we believe that it represents a potential for more business than the fixed RIM modular windows we introduced in the mid-1980s.'' RIM window modules have added more than $350,000,000 of sales for Excel since 1985.

Door Systems currently makes window regulator systems for domestic OEM automakers. Its systems are used on many vehicle programs for which Excel also supplies conventional or modular windows. Among these are Ford's Escort, Taurus and Explorer, Chrysler's Shadow and Sundance, and General Motor's G-Van and Blazer vehicles.

Johnson Controls Inc. is a leader in facility management and control systems, automotive seating, batteries and plastics. The Door Systems division and the operation in Pikeville were acquired by Johnson Controls as part of its purchase of Ferro Manufacturing Corp. in 1985. Johnson Controls said that the sale reflects the company's determination that its focus on automotive seating and related interior systems did not require participation in door systems technology.

Excel Industries is the leading independent supplier of window systems for the automotive and ground transportation industries in North America. Known for its engineering expertise and innovation, the 62-year-old company designs, manufactures and markets products for passenger cars, trucks, buses, military vehicles and recreational vehicles.

HOUSTON (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Precision Image announced at the National Computer Graphics Mapping Show Monday the TM1110 monochrome thermal plotter for D-size plotting applications.

The new product joins the company's fast-growing line of precision plotters, representing the third new product introduction for the company in as many months.

The TM1110 is the first plotter based on thermal technology in Precision Image's product line of eight color and monochrome electrostatic plotters. The new thermal plotter extends Precision Image's product line into the fast-growing market segment of price-sensitive plotter buyers.

In addition to competitive price and performance, thermal plotters operate quietly; eliminate pen changing; reduce the need for toner replacement ink or lead refilling; and eliminate all the costs of downtime to conduct such maintenance. All are drawbacks to today's conventional pen plotters.

Highlights of the TM1110 include 406 dots per inch, giving the user high-resolution, presentation-quality drawings, a 32-bit microprocessor and special drawing processors for quick throughput, limiting waiting time for plots; choice of five interface configurations with most personal computer or workstation networks available and a unique single head-making operation simple and reliable.

The TM1110 conveniently handles three types of media: thermal transfer paper, thermal paper, and clear thermal film. Product design offers low running and maintenance costs in a compact and streamlined design for maximum space savings.

Precision Image electrostatic plotters are well known for their use of proprietary drum-based technology to eliminate the media shrinkage, stretching, and poor color registration normally associated with roll-fed web plotters. The material is held tightly in place on the drum by a vacuum seal, preventing the shrinkage and stretching caused by humidity or tension changes.

Founded in 1985, Precision Image is a technology-leading manufacturer of large-format E-size and D-size color and monochrome electrostatic plotters. With headquarters in Redwood City, Calif., the company has an extensive installed base of customers in the United States, Canada, Europe the Pacific Rim and Australia. Precision Image has sales and service offices worldwide.

SAN DIEGO (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Molecular Biosystems Inc. (NYSE:MB) Monday announced that it has concluded an exclusive license agreement with a major research university for a family of novel magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) contrast agents.

The company plans to evaluate, test and develop this class of compounds intended to localize specifically in the liver, gall bladder and small intestine, which are all common targets of current diagnostic imaging using various radiologic methods. MBI estimates that over 1.5 million hepatobiliary studies and 2.5 million upper intestinal studies are done each year in the United States at a cost of over $3 billion.

Current estimates indicate that the market for MRI contrast agents for these applications could be in excess of $100 million worldwide.

MRI is a widely employed medical imaging modality that utilizes magnetism and radio waves to create pictures of internal anatomy. MRI is especially useful in brain and spine imaging, where two approved contrast agents currently account for revenues of about $100 million worldwide. Total MRI exam volume in the United States is about 2.5 million.

Abdominal imaging with MRI has been limited due, in part, to resolution limitations inherent in the technology as well as having imaging agents capable of being directed to specific sites. The technology obtained by MBI may offer a means of overcoming these limitations.

The resulting availability of safe and effective contrast agents useful for imaging organs in the abdomen and gastrointestinal system could significantly expand the utilization of both MRI and related contrast agents.

Molecular Biosystems Inc., located in San Diego, is a leading biomedical firm developing proprietary medical products that diagnose human disease, including Albunex, an injectable contrast agent for use in ultrasound imaging. In addition, it is a leading developer of direct, non-radioactively labeled genetic probe products.

WOODLAND HILLS, CALIF. (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Amwest Insurance Group Inc. (ASE/PSE:AMW) announced that A.B. 3798, which exempts surety from major provisions of Proposition 103, was signed into law Aug. 26.

As a result, Amwest will recognize a one-time increase in net income of $797,000, or approximately 34 cents per share, in the third quarter of 1990.

Proposition 103, passed by California voters on Nov. 8, 1988, generally requires covered insurers to reduce their rates to rates that are at least 20 percent less than those in effect on Nov. 8, 1987.

Proposition 103 provides that rates may not be charged on or after Nov. 8, 1989, unless approved in advance by the California Insurance Commissioner. Many insurers subject to Proposition 103 have set up reserves for potential rebates to policyholders under the rollback provisions.

A.B. 3798, which became law Aug. 26, eliminates the rate rollback and prior review provisions of Proposition 103 as applied to surety, but still prohibits excessive, inadequate or unfairly discriminatory rates.

As of June 30, 1990, the company had established a reserve of $1,423,000 for potential premium rebates under Proposition 103. Because of the enactment of A.B. 3798, the company will terminate the reserve and will reflect a one-time increase of $838,000 in premiums written and $797,000 in net income for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990.

The arrangement means that the university can use INGRES for all computer platforms on which INGRES runs, excluding third-party products.

In addition to the basic software site license, the agreement also allows the university access to unreleased, or ''beta,'' products and product plans and participation in Ingres' Showcase Account program, for which the university receives additional consulting in exchange for providing product demonstration facilities on campus.

PALO ALTO, CA (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Free Flow Packaging Corp. of Redwood City, Calif. is entitled to $230,536.05 in lost profit damages from Hewlett-Packard Co. for its breach of contract with Free-Flow, ruled Superior Court Judge James Stewart in Palo Alto on Aug. 24, 1990.

The award may be increased by interests and associated costs, according to the ruling.

If Hewlett-Packard fails to agree with the damage award, a new trial will be held only on the amount of the lost profit damages, as Judge Stewart also denied Hewlett-Packard's motion for a new trial on all issues decided earlier by a Superior Court jury.

A Superior Court jury originally found Hewlett-Packard guilty on May 23, 1990 of breaching both a 1983 purchase contract and an April 1984 oral agreement entered into to resolve the 1983 breach. The jury awarded Free-Flow Packaging damages of $127,326.70 for lost profits caused by both breaches.

In earlier findings, Judge Stewart reaffirmed the jury's findings of liability and ordered further proceedings to finalize total damages owed by Hewlett Packard.

Free-Flow Packaging, a long time supplier of loose-fill recycled packaging material to Hewlett-Packard, originally filed suit in May 1986 for breach of a 1983 written purchase agreement and amended the suit in January 1987 for breach of the 1984 oral accord in which Hewlett-Packard agreed to make amends for the 1983 breach.

According to Free-Flow, having won the breach of contract claims, and without meaningful dialogue with senior Hewlett-Packard officials, the company plans to pursue further legal action for additional compensatory and punitive damages arising from Hewlett-Packard's conduct in connection with the contract breaches.

Free-Flow Packaging Corp. pioneered the expanded polystyrene loose fill packaging industry, and is the only manufacturer producing loose fill material from 100 percent recycled polystyrene. Free-Flow began using recycled materials in 1975, and stopped using CFC's in the manufacturing process in 1983.

Free-Flow has developed an innovative and proprietary process for reclaiming all types of polystyrene foam, which it has been reprocessing in its Redwood City plant since April 1990. The company plans to install similar systems in its four other United States plants in Los Angeles; Thorton, Ill.; Auburn, Mass.; and Newark, Del.; by the end of 1991.

Microscience had signed a letter of intent to acquire the rights to 777 MB 1.2 GB and 1.6 GB MegaFile drives in early June. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed and Microscience expects to begin shipments of the drives in the fourth quarter of this year.

Under the agreement Microscience will receive manufacturing and marketing rights to the sub-14 millisecond SCSI and ESDI drives along with assembly tools and test equipment.

''This is a significant opportunity for Microscience and we are very pleased with the acquisition of the MegaFile line,'' said Microscience President and Chief Executive Officer Kevin Nagle.

''We believe that Microscience can now satisfy the needs of an entirely new business segment of the desktop computing and workstation markets. Many of our existing customers have been developing products which require high performance, high capacity Winchesters and the MegaFile products will satisfy those requirements.

''Additionally, we have been approached by many potential customers who wish to do business with Microscience for products of this type.

''Our first priority is servicing the needs of existing Siemens MegaFile customers. We will then evaluate business opportunities from both our current and potential customers.''

As we expected, the quarter was marked by significant growth in sales of our NetWare 386 operating system product for business-wide computer networks,'' said Raymond J. Noorda, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Novell.

''We believe our results continue to reflect the value customers place on network performance and efficiency that makes the most of their installed computer systems. BILLERICA, MA (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - BTU International Inc. (NASDAQ:BTUI) Monday announced that it has signed a $4.5 million contract with a semiconductor manufacturer in Europe to supply its ''System 2100'' vertical reactors and ''APEX Supervisory Software System.''

This technology will be used for DRAM production.

''This is our second large-scale contract in the past two months for this new technology,'' said Paul J. van der Wansem, president and chief executive officer. ''It is proof that BTU's vertical reactor technology is rapidly capturing market share in advanced-wafer manufacturing.

''Since the 2100 vertical reactor was introduced in March, BTU has booked approximately $14 million in orders,'' continued van der Wansem. ''Although margins will be affected over the next two quarters as a result of higher-than-anticipated costs for the initial orders of this new product, BTU is well positioned to capture a major share of this fastest growing segment of the semiconductor equipment industry.''

The company estimates that the market for vertical-processing equipment in 1989 was roughly 35 percent of the combined vertical and horizontal ''hot wall'' market. By 1993, BTU expects the vertical market to account for about half of the combined atmospheric and LPCVD market, or about $500 million.

CULVER CITY, CALIF. (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Showscan Corp. (NASDAQ:SHOW) announced Monday the sale of an 80-seat Dynamic Motion Simulator (DMS) to the Pyramid Operating Authority Inc. (POA), the builder of the Great American Pyramid in Memphis, Tenn., which will be the largest sports and entertainment complex in the United States.

This new sale brings to five the number of DMSs sold in the last 90 days, and increases total DMS sales to 24 worldwide. The DMS will be part of the Pyramid's ''Egyptian Experience,'' an educational and amusement attraction.

Scheduled to open in June 1991 and operate on a year-round basis, the Pyramid is projected to draw annual attendance of 3 million patrons. POA is principally owned by Sidney Shlenker, the former owner of the Denver Nuggets professional basketball team and a principal in PACE concerts, one of the largest concert-promotion companies in the United States.

''We chose Showscan's DMS because the company shares our vision, and their product meets our standards of quality,'' said Shlenker. ''When you're building the country's largest sports and entertainment complex, you want to be sure you get the best,'' he continued.

Showscan's president and chief executive officer, Roy Aaron, said, ''We are pleased to be associated with another of the pre-eminent entertainment attractions in the United States.

''This sale, following the recent successful opening of DMSs at the Excalibur Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, currently attracting over 8,000 patrons per day, and the impressive attendance results reported recently at other DMSs worldwide, clearly establishes Showscan as the preferred supplier of simulation technology to amusement and entertainment facilities in the United States and throughout the world.''

The Pyramid soars 321 feet in the air, big enough to hold six football fields at its base. It is themed around Egyptian culture and history in tribute to its sister city, Memphis, Egypt. Under the terms of Showscan's production license, the contract calls for POA to produce a ''thrill ride'' film in Showscan simulating a Pharaonic boat ride through the Egyptian ''Netherworld.''

Showscan develops and supplies advanced image and experience technology to stimulate, entertain and educate the public. It is also developing products to use in high-definition television.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - RAD Network Devices Inc. (RND) announced Monday support for Shortest Path First (SPF) routing algorithm that allows users of extended networks to route network traffic faster and more efficiently than any other bridge/routing method.

Dynamic SPF identifies and uses the fastest path between any two LANs to transfer data packets in an Ethernet or token-ring network.

''This is a breakthrough in routing techniques. Dynamic SPF is now the best routing algorithm available, based on its features of integrity, bandwidth optimization, dynamic adaptation and split-second alternate routing response,'' said Michael Grimshaw, president of RAD Network Devices.

''Dynamic SPF is used transparently for all protocols including non-routed protocols, such as DEC's LAT terminal server protocol.''

Related to the proposed standard for routers of OSPF -- Open Shortest Path First -- RND's dynamic SPF ensures optimal utilization of available bandwidth through active use of all redundant links.

Since every network is configured differently, RND bridge/routers provide built-in traffic-control options allowing users to customize network operations. In addition, RND bridge/routers contain a bi-directional access-control mechanism that ensures network security by allowing users to enable or disable communication between any two nodes.

Dynamic SPF is integrated into RND's wide range of internetworking products for Ethernet and token-ring networking environments.

Ethernet-based products include the REB (Remote Ethernet Bridge/Router) for high-performance applications; the REB-SX (Remote Ethernet Bridge/Router series), which offers entry-level interconnection capabilities; the CEB (Composite Ethernet Bridge/Router), which allows users to divide a LAN segment or link two isolated local LAN segments; and the XEB (X.25 Remote Bridge/Router), which interconnects LANs through an X.25 public or private Packet-switched Data Network (PDN).

Token Ring products include the RTB (Remote Token-Ring Bridge/Router) series which ensures high-speed filtering and forwarding. RND also offers a Remote Internetwork Management System (RIM) that allows users to monitor and control an internetwork configuration of Ethernet or token-ring bridge/routers.

RAD Network Devices is an innovator in internetworking products for the local and wide-area networking markets. Founded in 1987, the company introduced the industry's first combination bridge/router to provide enterprise-wide networking solutions for the global market.

RND's family of bridge/router products allows users to interconnect local and remote LANs into a single, integrated network for a wide range of applications and vertical market sectors. RND is a member of the RAD Group of companies.

On a year-to-date basis the Company reported sales of $143,755,000 and earnings of $4,050,000, or $.45 per share, which compares to earnings of $.15 per share in the 1989 six month period. MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - To meet the increasing demand for use of ordinary telephone wire for data communications, SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ, NMS:SNPX) Monday announced its 4 and 16 Megabit-per-second (Mb/s) Token Ring module options for the System 3000 intelligent wiring hub.

Its new ''active hub'' approach allows use of ordinary unshielded twisted pair telephone wire for high-speed data tranmission over longer lengths of cable than has previously been possible.

Additional new technology developed by SynOptics significantly increases the logistical number of stations that can be configured in a single Token Ring network. Traditionally, the maximum ring count for unshielded twisted pair Token Ring has been limited to 72 nodes.

Raising the available station count represents tremendous cost savings by reducing the number of bridges that would be required to build larger physical rings. Further, the addition of a new fiber optic repeater module will extend trunk ring interconnections between concentrators to up to two kilometers.

SynOptics is best known for its 1987 breakthrough technology that runs the popular Ethernet networking access method over unshielded twisted pair at 10 Mb/s.

This expertise has led to a dual strategy: a passive approach for use with shielded twisted pair and high performance LAN cables such as those from AT&T and Northern Telecom, and a new active hub approach which achieves standard building cabling distance requirements using ordinary telephone wire, commonly called D Inside Wire or DIW.

Through these two approaches, SynOptics has achieved what no other Token Ring vendor could: a 16 Mb/s unshielded twisted pair Token Ring solution that meets standard building cabling specifications of 330 feet (100 meter) cabling runs between the workstation and the wiring closet, allows rings of up to 144 devices to be built without bridging and, through the active hub approach, runs over the ordinary unshielded twisted pair telephone wire already installed in most buildings.

SynOptics Communications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy which incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system.

REDMOND, WA (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Interpoint Corp. (NASDAQ:INTP) Friday reported profits of $100,000, or 4 cents per share, on revenue of $6.9 million for the third quarter ended July 31.

As expected, this is a substantial drop from earnings of $269,000, or 11 cents per share, on revenue of $7.6 million during the same period a year ago. At the same time, the company announced that three insiders, acting independently, had acquired 60,000 shares, approximately 3 percent of total shares outstanding, over the past two weeks at prices ranging from $4.50 to $6.25 per share.

The company said revenues for the full year ended Oct. 31, 1990, are still expected to be 2 to 4 percent lower than the record pace of 1989. Full-year profits, including the one-time $533,000 integration charge recorded in the first quarter, are expected to be down substantially from 32 cents per share a year ago.

''Bookings, or new orders, are very strong and total backlog, or orders received but not yet shipped, is currently over $18 million,'' according to president and chief executive officer Peter van Oppen. ''We expect shipments to return to more normal levels during the fourth quarter and our excellent backlog suggests we will show growth into next year.

''We view insider purchases as a sign of confidence in our strong order backlog as well as the excellent team we currently have in place at Interpoint,'' van Oppen said.

GULFPORT, FLA. (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Sounds corny, but a new packing and shipping company wants to help save our environment.

So, Popcorn's Pac-N-Ship won't be using styrofoam peanuts. You guessed it. They're using real, honest-to-goodness popcorn! And it works. Even UPS has approved it as a packing material. It cushions items every bit as well as the toxic stuff.

So, Popcorn's will be popping their own and venting the aroma onto the street. What a way to attract customers! And, popcorn will be available for eating as well, though that certainly is not their primaray business, and it isn't recommended that the popcorn be eaten after it's been used as packing.

It does, however, make great food for the birds and squirrels and mulch for the plants. A contribution to the environment, you see, rather than a detriment.

Popcorn's is completely committed to an ecologically responsible policy. Most of their boxes are made from recycled materials, and their shipping envelopes are bio-degradable, too. Popcorn's believes that this policy saves money, as well as energy and the environment.

Any act in a negative direction creates numerous negative effects, such as waste, poisoning, and litter, while any act in a positive direction creates just as many positive results, such as economy, health, and cleanliness.

Popcorn's Pac-N-Ship is a new venture, created by Les Netterstrom. Les had been very successful in the franchise business with Payless Car Rental which he started in 1971 and built to one of the top 10 car rental companies, grossing over $70 million annually, with corporate world headquarters in St. Petersburg, Fla. He sold Payless to an international conglomerate last year.

Popcorn's also offers fax services, mail boxes, electronic mail, binding and instant copying, and instant color copying and enlarging. In other words, any means possible of moving information and objects. Popcorn's expects to provide very essential services to such clients as ad agencies, corporations, law offices, architects, and others, as well as private individuals, of course.

Whoever uses Popcorn's Pac-N-Ship, however, can rest assured, as they breathe in the intoxicating aroma of fresh-popped packing material, that they are with a leader in not only information movement, but the ecological movement as well.

WEST PALM BEACH, FL (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Jos. F. Bradway Jr., president of VHC Ltd. (NASDAQ:VHCL) Monday, reported the company's results for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1990.

VHC's sales for the second quarter were $8.7 million, compared with $10.4 million in the same quarter last year. The decline in sales was primarily related to the reduction in purchases as a result of further consolidation in the U.S. glass industry resulting from recent mergers.

Sales from the company's A.K. Robins subsidiary were up due to the recent addition of an Italian-made machinery line, however were not enough to offset the decline in sales at Maul Technology.

VHC recorded a net loss of $83,000, or 4 cents per share, in the second quarter of 1990 compared with net income of $724,000, or 35 cents per share, in the same quarter last year. Margins decreased as a result of more aggressive competition in both the declining U.S. market and in the foreign market areas that Maul addressed as a strategy for long-term business.

Operating profits were further reduced by the increased spending on research and development and expanded sales/service presence in Europe. However, it is expected that these investments will improve margins because of new products. VHC expects to improve sales in Europe and Asia through extensive marketing efforts.

For the first six months of 1990, sales were $17.6 million, compared with sale of $19.1 million in the same period of 1989. Net income for the latest six months was $83,000, or 4 cents per share, compared with net income of $1,252,000, or 60 cents per share, in the first six months of 1989.

As previously announced, VHC's board of directors signed a letter of intent in March 1990 to sell the company to Jos. F. Bradway Jr., the company's president and chief executive Officer, for $5.75 per share. Bradway and his family members currently own approximately 30 percent of the outstanding stock.

All of VHC's directors, who collectively own approximately 43 percent of the outstanding stock, have agreed to sell their stock to Bradway and recommend to VHC's stockholders that they approve the sale. Shareholders are scheduled to vote on the proposal at a meeting to be held in September.

VHC Ltd. is a holding company with interests in the glass container forming machinery and food processing machinery industries.

ALBERTSON'S INC. EARNS $52.9 MILLION IN SECOND QUARTER

BOISE, ID (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Albertson's Inc. announced record

sales of $2.07 billion for the 13 weeks ended Aug. 2, 1990, an increase of 13.6 percent over the $1.83 billion for the same quarter last year.

During the period identical store sales increased 7.7 percent. An 11-1/2 week strike in 34 Seattle area stores during the second quarter of 1989 had a positive affect on both total and identical sales increases for the second quarter of 1990. Earnings for the second quarter increased 15.9 percent to $52.9 million, or 40 cents per share, compared to $45.6 million or 34 cents per share, last year.

Sales for the 26 week period were $4.08 billion, an increase of 12.2 percent over the $3.64 billion for the same period last year. Earnings were $104.1 million, an increase of 15.6 percent over the $90.0 million for the same period last year. Earnings per share were 78 cents compared to 67 cents for the first half of last year.

For the 26 weeks, gross margin was 22.95 percent compared to 22.77 percent for the same period last year. This increase was due primarily to efficiencies realized from new distribution centers. Operating and administrative expenses, as a percent to sales, increased to 18.86 percent from 18.72 percent.

Warren E. McCain, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, stated that: ''We are very pleased with our identical sales increases. During the past six months we have made a substantial investment in increasing our sales base and intend to continue to emphasize sales increases.''

During the quarter 10 stores were opened for a total of 14 stores for the six months. Fourteen stores have been closed during the first six months as the company continues its program of weeding out small stores and unproductive stores. The company anticipates opening 30-35 stores during 1990 which is less than the 40 stores estimated at the beginning of the year.

Remodels were completed on eight stores during the quarter for a total of 16 completed for the first six months. For the year, we will complete 42 remodels compared to our earlier estimate of 45 remodels.

At Aug. 2, 1990, the company operated 523 stores in 16 western and southern states.

MURFREESBORO, TN (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - The Board of Directors of First City Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ:CITY) has declared a distribution of one Junior Preferred Stock Purchase Right for each outstanding share of First City Common Stock.

The distribution of the Rights is designed to deter coercive takeover tactics and help prevent partial tender offers and other abusive tactics to gain control of First City without dealing with all shareholders on a fair and equal basis.

Shareholders will receive Junior Preferred Stock Purchase Rights as a dividend at the rate of one Right for each share of Common Stock held as of the close of business on Sept. 4, 1990.

Each Right will entitle the shareholder, under alternative circumstances, to buy either securities of First City or securities of the acquiring company (depending on the form of the transaction) at an exercise price that will be half of the market value of such securities at the time.

The Rights can be exercised only if a person or group acquires 20percent or more of the company's outstanding Common Stock or launches a tender or exchange offer that would result in ownership of 20 percent or more of the company's outstanding Common Stock.

Each Right that is not owned by a holder of 20 percent (10 percent in certain circumstances) of First City Common Stock entitles its holder to purchase, for $20, shares of First City Common Stock that have a market value of $40. A shareholder may exercise rights in this manner if any person acquires 20 percent or more of the company's outstanding Common Stock.

Alternatively, if First City is involved in a business combination in which First City itself is not the survivor, or if the company sells 50 percent or more of its assets or earning power to another person, then each Right takes the form of a right to purchase, for $20, shares of the acquiring company's common stock that have a market value of $40.

At any time prior to a person acquiring 20 percent or more of its Common Stock and for a period of 10 days following the public announcement of such acquisition, the company will be entitled to redeem the Rights at one cent per Right. The Rights expire on Sept. 4, 2000.

PALO ALTO, CALIF. (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Hewlett-Packard Co. Monday introduced an improved, lower-priced HP DeskJet printer -- the HP DeskJet 500.

This printer replaces the HP DeskJet PLUS and DeskJet printers and is $729 U.S. list. This lower price point allows HP to build on the trend, noted by industry analysts, away from dot-matrix printing to non-impact printing.

The HP DeskJet PLUS and HP DeskJet printers were $995 and $795, U.S. list, respectively. The HP DeskJet 500 printer improves upon its predecessors by offering more fonts and better font spacing, water-resistant ink and compatibility with Microsoft Windows 3.0.

Microsoft Windows 3.0 currently works with the HP DeskJet 500 printer. Later this year, HP expects to ship an enhanced driver with each HP DeskJet 500 printer that allows Microsoft Windows 3.0 users to scale fonts (change typeface sizes). Customers who buy the HP DeskJet 500 printer before this driver is introduced may obtain it at no charge when it is available.

All HP DeskJet family (for IBM and compatible computers) and HP DeskWriter (for Macintosh computers) printers have 300 dots-per-inch resolution and use plain paper. Like the HP DeskJet PLUS printer, the HP DeskJet 500 printer produces up to three pages of text or two pages of graphics per minute.

The HP DeskJet 500 printer is designed for people with dot-matrix budgets who want to print documents that look professional. Availability

The HP DeskJet 500 printer and optional font cartridges are scheduled to be available Sept. 4 from HP-authorized dealers and HP's direct marketing organization.

Hewlett-Packard Co. is an international manufacturer of measurement and computation products and systems recognized for excellence in quality and support. The company's products and services are used in industry, business, engineering, science, medicine and education in 100 countries. PERTH AMBOY, NJ (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Bankers Corp. (NASDAQ:BKCO), the parent company of Bankers Savings, announced Monday that it has signed an agreement to purchase five retail banking offices in Ocean and Monmouth counties from Carteret Savings Bank, FA headquartered in Morristown.

Under the terms of the agreement, Bankers Savings will purchase Carteret's branch offices and savings deposits located in Freehold, Bricktown, Toms River, Hazlet and Matawan, N.J.

The sale is subject to federal and state regulatory approval.

Banker's Chairman, President and CEO, Joseph Gemmell, stated, ''When we converted from a mutual to a stock company in March of this year, one of our stated objectives was to expand south into Monmouth and Ocean Counties.

''This acquisition is tailor made enabling us to utilize our very strong capital position (14.3 percent of assets prior to this transaction) to further enhance our already very strong earnings.

''These are good franchises and we look forward to doing business in this new market anticipating the same successes and customer acceptance enjoyed in the 120 years of doing business in Middlesex County. This is a 'win/win' transaction for both Carteret and Bankers.''

Carteret Savings Bank President and CEO Robert C. Walsh said, ''This geographic market has been a very good one for Carteret; however, our long-term strategy is to focus retail operations in those areas where we have larger concentrations of offices. We believe it is necessary to streamline our branch network in order to achieve enhanced profitability in our operations.''

Walsh emphasized that ''while we are reducing the scope of our retail operations in the Monmouth/Ocean County market, Carteret will continue to maintain a strong residential lending program in the area.'' He added that although Carteret exceeds all regulatory capital requirements the sale will dramatically improve the bank's capital position and future profitability.

Bankers Savings, with assets in excess of $870 million, currently has six offices all of which are located in Middlesex County. These additional offices will increase Bankers size by approximately 45 percent. Carteret Savings Bank, New Jersey's second largest thrift, has more than $6 billion in assets and operates over 60 retail banking and loan offices - primarily in New Jersey and Florida.

WESTBOROUGH, MA (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Proteon Inc. Monday introduced integrated fiber optic connectivity for the Series 70 Intelligent Wire Center and 16 Mbps support for TokenVIEW Plus and TokenVIEW Manager Network Management Software.

The company also introduced TokenVIEW site licensing packages that further lower the cost of operating and managing multiple rings in a building or campus. The new products expand Proteon's leadership in token ring networking, making it the foremost source for 16 Mbps fiber backbones, complete media flexibility, and distributed management capabilities that enable users to effectively manage the token ring network throughout its life cycle.

According to Nate Kalowski, Proteon's vice president of marketing, the Series 70's fiber optic support allows users to develop cost-effective 4/16 fiber backbones that link their departmental LANs into an enterprise-wide network. Fiber is one of the fastest growing network mediums and will be a key component of networks into the next decade.

Today's networks must be designed for tomorrow's long-term requirements. This is especially true for the network's cabling strategy, which must support both departmental and enterprise-wide applications. Network managers are increasingly seeking a structured cabling strategy that delivers the benefits of a fiber backbone, new levels of error detection and correction, and flexibility of cabling mediums. Proteon's Series 70 is the only intelligent wire center that provides managers with the tools to implement such long-term networking strategies.

The 4/16 new fiber connectivity complements the Series 70's existing support of unshielded twisted pair (UTP) and shielded twisted pair (STP) cabling. Because it combines all three media within a single multi-station access unit (MAU), the Series 70 lets users manage the fiber backbone as an integrated aspect of the enterprise-wide network. In contrast, competitive MAUs require external fiber modems to support fiber optic connections and cannot offer unified network management through the MAU. External modems also represent additional points of potential failure, further reducing ovrall network reliability, and cost more than twice the price of the Series 70's integrated fiber link pairs.

TokenVIEW Plus and TokenVIEW Manager Network Management Software together provide a distributed, fault-tolerant solution to manage dispersed 4/16 Mbps departmental LANs and the fiber backbone interconnecting them.

Proteon, ProNET, and TokenVIEW Plus are registered trademarkss of Proteon Inc. The Series 70 is a trademark of Proteon Inc.

SILER CITY, NC (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Communication Cable Inc. (NASDAQ: CABL), a specialty electronic wire and cable manufacturer of Siler City, has announced its third quarter earnings.

CCI's earnings per share for the third quarter of 1990 were 36 cents, up 100 percent from 18 cents in the third quarter of 1989. Net earnings were $646,647, up $426,912, or 194 percent from $219,735 for the third quarter of 1989. This marks the 19th consecutive quarter of earnings growth for CCI.

Consolidated revenues of $5,648,321 for the third quarter of 1990 were also up from $5,461,681 in 1989.

In spite of slow market conditions during the first nine months of 1990, CCI accomplished dramatically increased earnings per share and net earnings. Earnings per share were 79 cents, 34 percent ahead of last year's first nine months of 59 cents per share. Net earnings for nine months increased to $1,403,827, or 92 percent over $729,759 for the comparable period in 1989.

Communication Cable made a major aquisition in the third quarter with the purchase of Texarkana Wire and Cable. This acquisition adds approximately $15 million capacity in telephone wire and cable to CCI's product lines, and is expected to make significant contributions in the fourth quarter and in 1991. The purchase was financed with a tax-free industrial revenue bond issued by the State of Arkansas in August 1990.

The Saxton Division is beginning to make limited shipments and is also expected to make contributions to growth and earnings starting in the fourth quarter.

The Chinese Project started coming on stream in the third quarter and strong productivity gains were made in all four divisions.

In August, CCI purchased additional equipment from the receivers of the bankrupt Plastoid Corp., which will be used primarily for growth of Saxton Divison, with some equipment going to all divisions.

When the equipment is installed and operational, CCI should have approximately $65 million of production and sales capacity in the four U.S. divisions.

ALBANY, NY (AUG. 27) USINESS WIRE - KeyCorp reported that Thomson Bankwatch (formerly Keefe Bankwatch), a proprietary credit rating and consulting service, has upgraded KeyCorp's rating.

KeyCorp is one of very few banks to receive an upgrade during the last nine months.

Thomson Bankwatch defines the rating given to KeyCorp as a strong company with a solid financial record which is well received by its natural money markets. Some minor weaknesses may exist, but any deviation from the company's historical performance levels should be both limited and short-lived. The likelihood of a problem developing is small, yet slightly greater than for a higher-rated company.

The report indicated this upgrade reflects KeyCorp's solid, consistent trends in profitability and a generally healthy balance sheet which is characterized by strong diversification, both by geographic and individual credit lines. KeyCorp's above average capital and extensive retail deposit base were also cited as reasons for the upgrade.

It was also noted that KeyCorp has done a good job in integrating their acquisitions into the franchise, implementing KeyCorp policies and procedures, and ultimately turning their results around. In addition, the report stated the company continues to enjoy robust margins reflecting its business mix which emphasizes small business and retail lending largely funded by a solid low cost core deposit base.

With respect to loan quality, the report added that while current economic conditions suggest the portfolio could come under further pressure, its diversification and the fact that KeyCorp has no LDC or HLT exposure and limited commercial real estate exposure suggest that incremental pressure should be manageable.

BankWatch ratings are based upon a qualitative and quantative analysis of all segments of an organization.

KeyCorp (NYSE:KEY) with assets of over $16 billion is a multi-regional bank holding company headquartered in Albany. It has focused its banking expansion activities in the Northeast and Northwest. Pursuing a middle market target, KeyCorp has concentrated its resources in cities and smaller communities of the northern tier of states, thus avoiding overcrowded marketplaces and single industry loan exposure.

FAIRFIELD, NJ (AUG. 27) BUSINESS WIRE - Prime Motor Inns, Inc. (NYSE-PDQ) announced today that it has amended an $82 million secured loan agreement containing a requirement that Prime purchase an interest rate cap capping LIBOR at approximately 6-1/2 percent with respect to certain ''excess interest'' obligations of Prime under the agreement.

The amendment provides a one-month period for Prime and the lenders to develop an alternative to the interest rate cap purchase obligation and calls for Prime to escrow $2.5 million to be applied to the cost of whatever alternative is agreed upon. The primary principal and interest payment obligations under the agreement belong to certain partnerships which purchased the properties securing the debt from the company. The event which triggered Prime's obligation to purchase the interest rate cap was the recent lowering of its debt rating by Standard & Poors.

The company also announced that the closing of the previously- announced sale of its new Las Vegas Howard Johnson Plaza-Suites hotel, the cash proceeds of which would pay down certain financing secured by the property has been extended and is now expected to occur in September.

The company said that it is current on all payments under its loan agreements and that it is continuing to actively pursue selective asset sales and financings pursuant to it restructuring program; however, in light of the continuing deterioration of the market for hotel properties, it does not expect to be able to pre-pay the balance of its bank debt due March 1991 by the end of calendar 1990 as previously announced.

LONDON (AUG. 20) UPI - Oxford and Cambridge may be Britain's best-known centers of higher learning, but some say the course of study is every bit as demanding at a more mundane campus: the Public Carriage Office.

The PCO, a drab concrete building in central London, is where the 2,000 people who apply each year to become London cabbies are grilled on ''The Knowledge,'' their familiarity with the city's narrow and twisted streets, many unchanged since the days of horse-drawn carriages.

''It's harder than going to university,'' said Morris Cole, a 25-year-old ''knowledge boy,'' as the apprentices are called. He already has spent two years cruising London streets on a motorcycle equipped with a clipboard to keep track of which of the required 468 routes he has covered.

''You devote 10 hours a day to it. It controls your whole life,'' said Cole, whose father tried to become a cabbie, but gave up because he was unable to master ''The Knowledge.''

The knowledge boys sit for oral exams at the PCO at two- to 12-week intervals until they convince the examiners, mainly retired police officers, they know the 113-square-mile heart of London cold and are familiar with the suburbs.

''It's like an electric chair when you go and sit down there,'' Tariq Dean who has been training for 18 months, said of the 15-minute question-and-answer sessions.

''I've seen grown men coming out of here crying their eyes out,'' Cole said.

Geography is only part of the exam, which would-be cabbies generally pass after 2 1/2 years of study. The examiners, by acting ornery themselves, teach trainees to be civil to the most crochety passenger.

''They treat us like animals, like a pet. They can swear at you and you can't say anything. They can tear you apart. They can ruin your life,'' said Dean, 25, sporting a yellow muscle shirt, sweatpants, a gold earring and Reeboks.

If Dean were to turn up for an exam in his customary casual dress, he would be thrown out. Suits are de rigeur and the knowledge boys must address their examiners as ''Sir.''

''If you were wild when you started, by the time you finish 'The Knowledge' you are so soft you are like butter,'' Cole said.

At a time when British pundits and politicians are agonizing over their island nation's low productivity and poor vocational training - especially in comparison with industrious Germany - the dedication and rigorous training of London taxi drivers stands out.

The apprentices say the hard work is worthwhile, because a cabdriver's badge is a ticket to independence and prosperity.

Drivers are cagey about their earnings, but, if the articles about golfing fine wines and lush Caribbean holiday spots in taxi trade magazines are any indication, London's 20,500 cabbies are doing fine.

''I am attracted to the freedom of the job,'' said Tony Noonan, 23, a husky red-headed Irishman who has been learning ''The Knowledge'' for 15 months. ''You are learning a trade.''

Unlike licensing schemes in many other cities, London works on a merit system. Costing just 65 pounds, the equivalent of $123, cabbie badges are not restricted by quota, but are issued to anyone who has learned ''The Knowledge.'' Ordinarily, that is about 700 applicants a year.

London cabbies, who trace their trade back to 1654, when rebel leader Oliver Cromwell passed an ordinance licensing 250 hackney cabs in London, view their confreres in other cities with contempt.

''We know where we are going, unlike cab drivers in New York who do not even know their way to the airport,'' said Michael Flack, a 20-year veteran of the fleet.

But there are a few potholes on the road traveled by this group of independent working-class professionals.

One pet peeve is the rise of minicabs, unregulated cabs that respond to telephone orders for a taxi but cannot pick up fares from the streets.

''The enemy!'' exclaimed Noonan at the mention of minicabs, spitting to make his point.

Some cabbies also chafe at the strait-laced propriety of the PCO, the wing of the Metropolitian Police that regulates licensed taxis.

''The Public Carriage Office is a very Victorian setup,'' said David Nathan, who has spent five years behind the wheel.

A more serious problem is Britain's byzantine social security system, which penalizes unemployed workers who choose to learn ''The Knowledge'' while on the dole.

''I get hassled by social services,'' said Dean, who decided to study for a taxi badge when he was laid off from his job as a leather worker.

Dean said welfare workers wanted him to stop training and look for work as a manual laborer ''planting flowers or something.''

''It's silly, because if he was in college they would pay him to study,'' said fellow trainee Morris.

But neither cut-rate minicabs nor shortsighted civil servants have deterred Dean and his mates. After a chat, they pull on their helmets, fasten their clipboards, and disappear on their bikes to memorize more highways and byways.

They are eager to learn what Nathan called ''the most interesting and varied job in the world.''

AGANA, GUAM (AUG. 27) - U.S. searchers Monday spotted a yacht carrying 17 people that had radioed for help when it was hit by rough seas on the fringes of a tropical storm off of this U.S. Pacific territory.

The Royal Taipan, a minesweeper converted to a cruise yacht, was sailing from the Philippines to Saipan when it ran into Tropical Storm Abe and radioed for help Saturday, the coast guard said.

A C-130 search and rescue plane from Hawaii spotted the Royal Taipan about 200 kilometers (125 miles) east-northeast of Yap, an island of the Federated States of Micronesia, said Lieutenant Kent Youel, a coast guard spokesman in Honolulu.

All aboard were safe, he said, and a patrol boat had been sent from Yap to take the boat in tow.

Communication was lost Sunday night just after the crew of 17, including 14 Filipinos, reported the Royal Taipan was being hit by eight-meter (25-foot) high seas and 80 kph (50 mph) winds, he said.

The vessel, owned by Honolulu-based Windjammer Cruises, was to be refurbished in Saipan for cruises.

SANAA (AUG. 27) - Thousands of Yemenis staged a demonstration in the city of Taez Monday to protest the buildup of foreign forces in the Gulf and United Nations sanctions against Iraq, witnesses reported.

Demonstrators carried portraits of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as well as of the former Egyptian president and fervent Arab nationalist Gamal Abdel Nasser.

An ally of Baghdad, Yemen abstained from an Arab summit resolution August 10 that condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and approved the deployment of Arab troops in Saudi Arabia.

MOSCOW (AUG. 27) - A block of the Soviet Chernobyl nuclear power plant was switched off Monday after an electrical unit was found to be faulty, the government newspaper Izvestia reported.

The paper said block three of the Ukrainian plant was stopped because the incident partly affected control functions. There had been no ''violation of safety standards'', it said. The cause of the incident was not immediately clear.

The reactor was the site of the world's worst civilian nuclear accident in April 1986. At least 30 people died as a result of the accident which spread a cloud of radioactivity over Europe.

VIENNA (AUG. 27) - Ten of the 13 member states in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec) have agreed to temporarily increase oil production to compensate for world shortages caused by the economic embargo of Iraq and occupied Kuwait, Opec sources here said.

The sources said an official announcement was being held back until the arrival of the Libyan oil minister, expected Tuesday.

The agreement was forged in informal talks in Vienna attended by all Opec members except Iraq and Libya. Kuwait, invaded by Iraqi armed forces August 2, was represented by its exiled finance minister, Sheikh Ali al-Khalifa al-Sabah.

Iran was the only member attending to oppose a higher production quota, the sources said.

Under the agreement, 11 Opec members would increase production to supply world markets with an additional 4.6 million barrels per day of crude oil, according to the sources.

That is the amount lost from Iraqi and Kuwaiti fields due to the trade embargo adopted by the United Nations Security Council on August 6 and aimed at forcing Baghdad to withdraw from Kuwait.

After the Gulf crisis is settled, the agreement foresees returning production to the lower ceiling agreed by the cartel in May to stabilise prices, which at the time had fallen to 18 dollars a barrel.

The sources said the decision to raise production could negate the need for an Opec special session beginning Tuesday that had reportedly been agreed on earlier Monday.

Saudi Arabia had proposed that the informal talks, convened to review the market situation after the Gulf crisis sent prices beyond 31 dollars per barrel, be converted into a formal extraordinary session.

A decision to convert the talks here into a special session needs the backing of at least seven Opec members.

In New York, crude prices plummeted by 10 percent and more on the Mercantile Exchange Monday amid signs that the Gulf face-off may not immediately turn into a shooting war.

West Texas Intermediate fell 3.26 dollars to 27.65 dollars a barrel for a 10.5 percent drop from Friday.

At the height of tensions last week prices for October contracts were running as high as 32.25 dollars per barrel - a seven-year high.

Monday's drop was attributed to the current lull in the Gulf and to anticipated production hikes by Saudi Arabia and Venezuela along with the informal Opec talks in Vienna.

PARIS (AUG. 27) - France and its European partners are to ask the U.N. Security Council to deal with Iraqi disruption of foreign embassies in Kuwait, a French foreign ministry communique said Monday.

France will ask that "a United Nations mission go to Kuwait to contribute to the re-establishment of the normal functioning of diplomatic missions and guarantee their inviolability," the communique said.

The communique listed Iraqi acts the French Embassy such as its encirclement by Iraqi troops, the cutting off of its electricity and the destruction of its perimeter wall.

It said that, faced with an escalating situation, France reserved the right to take any necessary steps.

The communique also noted the French decision, announced earlier in the day,

BOGOTA (AUG. 27) - Attorney General Alfonso Gomez conceded in an interview published Monday that human rights abuses had been committed by members of the armed forces, but he said it was not government policy.

"We can't deny that people linked to the armed forces, in isolated cases, have violated human rights. But this is not the policy of the government," he said.

So far this year, the Justice Department has received 176 reports of missing persons and 68 involving torture, Gomez said in an interview with El Tiempo daily newspaper.

He said an investigation showed some members of the armed forces had singled out for human rights abuses people they believed to be critical of the military.

SEOUL (AUG 27) - About a dozen people were injured and six others detained after some 500 South Korean baseball fans rioted in anger over their team's loss during a night game here, press reports said Monday.

Haetae Tiger fans ripped apart seats and jumped into the diamond, throwing cans and bottles at the stand, when their team allowed seven runs to the rival Lucky-Goldstar Twins at the end of the 7th inning in Sunday night's game.

The hour-long rampage ended as riot police rushed to the scene to restore order, press reports said. The game resumed and the Twins went on to win 13-1.

President Roh Tae-Woo on Monday deplored the violence and ordered his interior minister, Ahn Eung-Mo, to severely punish the rioters.

A presidential spokesman quoted Mr. Roh as saying that it was inadmissible for such violence to occur in a country which successfully hosted the Olympic Games in 1988.

The Haetae Tigers is from the southwestern province of Cholla, while the Lucky Goldstar Twins hails from the rival southeastern province of Kyongsang.

Officials at Japan's Institute of Space Science said the MT-135 rocket was successfully launched at 11:10 a.m. (0210GMT) from the Uchinoura Space Observation Center in Kagoshima, southern Japan.

After reaching an altitude of 60 kilometers (36 miles), the rocket released a 4.8-kilogram ozone sonde which measured ozone density and ultraviolet ray levels for 45 minutes, they said.

The rocket is 3.3 meters (11 feet) long, 13.5 centimeters (5.3 inches) in diameter and weighs 0.7 tons, officials said.

MANILA (AUG. 27) - Benguet Corporation, the largest Philippine mining firm, suffered a 22.8 percent drop in its consolidated net income in the first half of this year, the firm's accounting office said here Monday.

Benguet also incurred a six percent drop in its gross income and a 1.4 per cent increase in operating costs and expenses, Benguet accountants said.

The consolidated net income in the first half of 1990 hit 156 million pesos (6.64 million dollars) while gross income fell to 1.927 billion pesos (82 million dollars.)

The firm enjoyed a 202.1 million peso (9.27 million dollar) net income in the first half of 1989 while gross income hit 2.05 billion pesos (94.04 million dollars.)

Benguet officials attributed the fall in income to low metal prices and lower gold production in that period.

Benguet also saw its operating costs and expenses rise to 1.611 billion pesos (68.55 million dollars) in the first half of 1990 from 1.588 billion pesos (72.84 million dollars) in the same period last year.

Benguet, which has also diversified into construction and agriculture, posted a net income of 342.3 million pesos (15.25 million dollars) in 1989 along with a gross income of 3.976 billion pesos (177.2 million dollars) with operating costs at 3.243 billion pesos (144.5 million dollars.)

STONG, Cambodia (AUG. 27) - Cambodian government troops last week repulsed a joint resistance offensive on this besieged central town that has become a key element in the power play between government and anti-government forces, local official said.

Stong has a key location on strategically important Highway 6, which links Kompong Thom, in central Cambodia, to Siem Reap, about 200 kilometers (125 miles) to the northwest, across the northern shore of the country's biggest lake, Tonle Sap.

At least 20 of the rebel force of about 300 were killed and 55 wounded in the attack Thursday, said Ros Sarim, the local boss of the Cambodian Communist Party.

Government casualties in the attack Thursday were one dead and two wounded, he said.

"The enemy belonged to all three factions of the opposition," the party official said, "but the Khmer Rouge was the main component."

The Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge is the most powerful element in military terms of the Cambodian resistance coalition, which also includes the non-Marxist followers of former ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk and ex-premier Son Sann.

It was the third attack in as many months on this town about 50 km (31 miles) west of Kompong Thom.

Khmer Rouge forces occupied Stong for several days after an offensive last month.

Stong, a small town, of no particular importance other than its strategic location at a crossroads on the dusty, bumpy trail dubbed Highway 6, has become a major target of the resistance coalition.

"The opposition wants to occupy Stong at all costs to demonstrate that it is capable of seizing and holding a locality in the center of the country, and not only in regions close to the frontier" with Thailand, explained Kampong Thom Governor Khieu Horl.

HAMBURG (AUG 27) - The Frankfurter Allgemeine newspaper Monday commenting on the international pressure on Iraq said (in part): ''It is becoming lonely for Saddam Hussein. Will he give in?

''He is, probably, more frightened of doing so than of waging a war. Innumerable Iraqis in the army and in the security services are waiting for the chance to topple the despot whose hands are covered with blood.

''If, in the face of America's military might, Saddam Hussein withdraws ignominiously from Kuwait, his last hour could sound in Baghdad.

''But what will happen to him if he hangs on to his Kuwaiti booty? The ropes of the blockade will not then loosen around his country''.

SYDNEY (AUG. 27) - Australia's New South Wales (NSW) State Bank will be sold within five years, state premier Nick Greiner said Monday.

Mr. Greiner was speaking a day after Treasurer Paul Keating announced that the federal government-owned Commonwealth Bank would pay 1.6 billion Australian dollars (1.3 billion U.S.) for the debt-ridden State Bank of Victoria (SBV).

Mr. Greiner told reporters here that unlike its Victoria state counterpart, the NSW State Bank was in sound financial condition.

The premier of the eastern state said NSW State Bank would be sold within five years and that its price tag would be "around one billion dollars (840 million U.S.) -- plus or minus a few hundred million dollars."

The success of the NSW State Bank meant it required new equity which the government could not provide, he said.

"Those that are unsuccessful like the SBV need to be bailed out and those that are successful like NSW will need equity capital.

"So in either case I don't see any state government owning a financial institution by the end of the decade," Mr. Greiner said.

Mr. Keating created a political storm within the ruling Labor party when he announced that the Commonwealth Bank would receive a 30 per cent private equity injection to finance its purchase of the SBV.

The Labor party's platform opposes privatisation, although the issue will be debated at a special party conference next month.

The SBV lost 795 million dollars (662 million U.S.) in the six months to December 31, largely due to high-risk lending by its merchant banking arm Tricontinental.

The NSW State Bank posted a 55.4 million dollar (46 million U.S.) net profit in the year to June 1989.

BELGRADE (AUG. 27) - Sixty-five bodies have been located in the Kreka lignite mine, western Yugoslavia, where all 178 miners buried after a gas explosion late Saturday are believed to have perished, the news agency

Tanjug reported Monday.

The discovery of the 65 bodies puts the death toll at 73, but rescue workers said the remaining miners were unlikely to have survived.

Rescue workers had earlier been able to retrieve the bodies of eight miners about 100 metres (325 feet) from the mine's exit, Tanjug said.

Removing the 65 bodies from the wrecked mineshaft "is impossible at the moment," the mine's supervisor Bosko Zelic said, adding that rescue workers wanted to make the mine safe before going further in.

The high temperature and pockets of gas in the mineshaft after the explosion have hampered the rescue effort, and there were still fears that another gas explosion might occur, Belgrade radio said Monday.

The explosion about midnight on Saturday is believed to have been caused by an accumulation of methane gas or soot at the mine in Kreka, about 200 kilometres (130 miles) southwest of here. The miners had resumed work Friday after a three-week strike.

The blast destroyed the mine's two ventilation shafts and the concrete structure at the entrance of the mine.

Rescue workers aided by sophisticated equipment were working in small groups but progress was difficult, Belgrade radio said.

A three-day period of mourning has been decreed in Bosnia-Herzegovine, the Yugoslav republic where the Dobrnja-Kreka mine is located.

BONN (AUG. 27) - The West German government Monday put a brake on German participation in foreign missile projects.

Official approval is now needed for Germans joining in the development, production or testing of missiles, as well as the construction of specially-produced parts and the development of computer programmes.

Bonn justified its new foreign trade ordinance by the ''considerable damage to foreign relations'' done by the involvement of German experts in missile projects in Iraq, Egypt and Argentina.

NICOSIA (AUG. 27) - Saudi Arabia will boost September deliveries of crude oil to Japan by 210,000 barrels a day to reach 460,000 barrels, the Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) reported here Monday.

The influential weekly newsletter said five Japanese customers, Nippon Oil, Idemitsu, Cosmo, Mitsubishi and Kyodo Oil, were notified of the increase by the Saudi oil company ARAMCO last week.

Other Western buyers are also likely to receive September increases in Saudi oil supplies of around 20 to 25 percent, according to MEES.

Key members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were meanwhile holding consultations in Vienna to consider the convocation of a formal session, which would take an official decision on boosting output in light of the Gulf crisis.

An embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil exports is expected to leave a shortfall on world markets of around 4.2 million barrels a day.

MEES said six of the 13 OPEC members, Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Qatar and Ecuador, favor an increase in production, while Iraq, Iran and Libya are firmly opposed.

HONG KONG (AUG. 27) - Hong Kong is developing into a major regional center as an operational base for overseas companies, with more firms establishing headquarters than those which are leaving, the government reported here Monday.

Hong Kong Director of Industry T.H. Barma, announcing the results of a survey of regional headquarters in the British colony, reported that an average of 59 new regional headquarters had been established each year in Hong Kong between 1985 and 1989.

Even last year's political turbulence in China had not put off 22 companies from establishing a regional base in the colony during the second half of the year. In the first quarter of 1990, 18 new regional headquarters were set up, he reported.

''Hong Kong is becoming an increasingly important regional center for overseas companies,'' Barma said.

He said that 572 overseas companies, or almost one-sixth of the total 3,195 firms surveyed, were using the colony as a regional headquarters.

The survey results run contrary to fears that the 1997 Chinese takeover of Hong Kong would trigger an exodus of companies.

It showed that only 29 regional headquarters have left since 1980. Almost half of them went to Singapore, which is regarded as the biggest competitor to Hong Kong in the region.

LEVERKUSEN (AUG. 27) - Bayer chemical company said Monday its earnings slumped badly in the first half of 1990 due to declining sales prices and lower revenues resulting from the rise in the Deutschmark's value.

Bayer said its world group pre-tax profits fell 9.5 percent to about 2 billion D-marks (1.29 billion dollars), with the parent firm's earnings coming to 1.1 billion D-marks, down 10.4 percent.

World group turnover reached 21.8 billion D-marks in the first six months, down 3.7 percent on the same period of 1989.

Bayer noted that the turnover figure fell despite a two percent rise in the actual volume of chemicals sold. But lower sales prices and the dollar's decline had cut into turnover and earnings.

For example, Bayer's subsidiaries in the United States had increased their sales turnover in dollar terms by five percent, but the figures when converted into D-marks were down by six percent from the year-ago figures, the company said.

In Japan, sales denominated in yen had risen by seven percent, but when converted into D-marks, they were down by 16 percent.

''Due to the changed currency exchange rates, competition on international markets has become tougher for us,'' Bayer said.

The company said that for the year it did not expect to be able to match its 1989 record figures - turnover of 4.3 billion D-marks and group pre-tax profits of 4.1 billion D-marks - but that it did believe it would achieve the second-best levels in 1988, when turnover was 40.5 billion D-marks and earnings 3.8 billion.

MOSCOW (AUG. 27) - Communist officials from Leningrad have appealed to the central organization to subsidize Pravda, the party's official organ, in a bid to prevent a drastic drop in subscriptions when prices are raised next year.

"The scheduled increase in the price of Pravda newspaper will considerably reduce the number of its subscribers, and the party will consequently lose its influence over people and society," the city officials said in a letter published Monday on the front page of Pravda.

"This cannot be allowed, all the more so when anti-communist trends are on the increase (and) one even sees attempts to outlaw the CPSU (Communist Party of the Soviet Union)," the officials said.

The Communist party's Central Committee should subsidize the newspaper, the officials added.

Prices for all newspapers and magazines are due to be drastically increased in 1991. The yearly subscription for Pravda, now 9.24 rubles, is scheduled to rise to 19.92 rubles (32 dollars at the meaningless official rate) next year.

Pravda currently prints 7.7 million copies a day.

Last year, the communist party newspaper lost a third of its subscribers with readership falling to 6.5 million.

KAMPALA (AUG. 28) - Islamic fundamentalists who seized the Uganda Muslim Council Headquarters in Kampala last Tuesday have defied President Yoweri Museveni's order to quit the premises.

President Museveni had ordered them to leave during a meeting with leaders of the rebel Muslim group on Saturday.

A statement about the President's directive nearly sparked off violence in the old Kampala mosque Sunday as 1,000 youths accused a Muslim administrator Rajab Kakooza of corruption and mismanagement of council funds.

The Muslims who account for 7-10 percent of Uganda's population named an interim administrator to run the affairs of the council for at least three years pending elections.

Meanwhile intern doctors at Mulago hospital in Kampala went on strike Saturday to press for an increase in allowances and better facilities in their residence.

ABIDJAN (AUG. 27) - A group of National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) rebels apparently planning to attack West African peace-keeping forces by sea late Sunday have been captured, the Ghana News Agency reported Monday.

The news agency, quoting its correspondent with the Economic Community of West African States cease-fire monitoring group (ECOMOG) said the Nigerian navy ship Damisa which was on patrol in Liberian territorial waters arrested the 27 rebels, seven of them women.

A cache of arms, explosives and hand grenades was found on board their 35-foot (11 metre) trawler, the correspondent said.

It is believed the rebels were planning an attack on a fleet of naval and passenger ships which the peace-keeping forces used to dock at the Monrovia freeport Friday.

Ship commander Tunde Adekeye told reporters that when he asked the captain of the fishing trawler to identify himself he was told that no ship from another country had the right to ask such a question.

They arrested him and the other passengers for questioning.

Meanwhile, ECOMOG forces late Saturday fought a pocket of resistance from Charles Taylor's NPFL to take control of Clara Town a few kilometers (miles) from the port and just north of the Monrovia city center.

The ECOMOG forces have mounted checkpoints at vantage areas of the town to check rebel activity.

Monrovia was reported calm Sunday with several residents roaming the war-torn capital in search of scarce food.

ECOMOG troops have been seen sharing their rations with Liberians.

"For the past three months I have been living on greens and water," one man said.

A woman with two small children begged the troops for food, saying they had not eaten for a week.

Clara Town, a former active business area, was deserted Monday. Vehicles lining the streets were either smashed or burned, and most building were riddled with bullets, the agency said.

In the Gambian capital Banjul, follow-up peace talks to bring an end to the eight-month bloody civil war in Liberia was set to start Monday with its negotiating powers crippled by the absence of embattled President Samuel K. Doe and rebel leader Charles Taylor.

DANANE, LVORY COAST (AUG. 27) - Liberian rebels arrested an American journalist at the weekend, accusing him of spying, and put him through a mock execution.

Steven Smith, 35, reporting for the French paper Liberation, was picked up Saturday night with eight other Western journalists as they were heading for Harbel, 36 miles (60 kilometres) from the capital Monrovia. Rebel leader Charles Taylor, who has his headquarters at Harbel, and a rebel escort stopped the three vehicles the journalists were travelling in near Robertsfield international airport.

Mr. Taylor said he had proof that Mr. Smith was a ''spy'', and ordered him to be taken away. The highly excitable bodyguards pushed and shoved the other journalists as they protested, and took them back to their residence.

Mr. Smith, who had been in rebel territory for three weeks, reappeared on Sunday and said he had been asked to leave. He recounted how, on the way to Harbel for questioning, his guard, named Larwah Boyou, stopped at the side of the road and told Mr. Smith to kneel down. The rebel aimed at the nape of his neck and fired two shots over the prisoner's shoulder.

AII the other journalists, seven French and one British, who had been reporting on the Liberian civil war from rebel areas, decided to leave after the incident and arrived here at the border with Ivory Coasy late Sunday with Mr. Smith.

NANTOU, TAIWAN (AUG. 27) - Rescue workers Monday fished 11 more bodies from central Taiwan's Sun Moon Lake, bringing the death toll from a weekend ferry accident to 32, with 23 others missing and feared dead, police said.

The dead included six foreigners and 11 children; two other foreigners -- a Briton and a Malaysian -- were among the missing, said officer Yen Ching-en of Teh Hwa Police Station.

He identified the foreigners as Sally Aylwin, 46, the British wife of Shell Oil Company Taiwan branch director Charles Aylwin; Shell trading manager Bruce Robson, 48; six-year-old Robert Crossman, the son of Shell Taiwan Ltd. president John Crossman, and three ethnic Chinese Malaysians whose identities were not immediately available.

The cause of the accident is still under investigation, but some survivors said the overloaded ferry capsized while turning, while others said it was overturned by strong winds.

Police identified the missing Briton as Julie Crossman, 44, the wife of Shell Taiwan Ltd.'s president, who survived the accident. The identity of the missing Malaysian was not available.

Mr. Yen said 34 people, including six Britons, two Malaysians and an Australian, were either rescued or managed to swim ashore.

The unlicensed 60-seat boat, with 89 people on board, capsized at around 9:40 p.m. (1340 GMT) Saturday, the eve of Chinese Valentine's Day.

Most of those on board were employees of Shell Taiwan Ltd. and their families on a night cruise on Sun Moon Lake, a scenic spot in central Nantou County.

Taiwan's worst previous boating accident was in April 1977, when 32 people drowned in a vessel that capsized off Suao Harbor, in the northeast.

Taiwan Shell Ltd. was virtually empty Monday, with only seven of the company's 46 executives and employees reporting for work.

HANOI (AUG. 27) - Returned boat people, demobilized veterans of the Cambodian war and school leavers are creating major headaches for officials charged with finding job openings for Vietnam's six million unemployed.

More than one million people will flood onto the job market every year, Ministry of Labour, Invalids and Social Affairs official Nghiem Xuan Tue said in an interview here, citing this poverty-stricken country's population of around 65 million people and annual birth rate of 2.12 percent.

The ministry has launched a programme aimed at alleviating the "very urgent and difficult problem" of unemployment but it is a daunting task with six million people looking for permanent work - 20 percent of the labour force.

In the meantime, most of the millions of jobless must fend for themselves as the government does not have funds to offer them welfare, Mr. Tue said, adding that support was given only to the half million state employed workers forced into redundancy.

Each year it spends millions of dollars caring for the victims of decades of war against the French colonialists, the Japanese, U.S. and South Vietnamese soldiers and the resistance alliance in Cambodia.

Vietnam announced in September that it had withdrawn the last of its troops from Cambodia almost 11 years after they ousted a genocidal Khmer Rouge regime.

But with no more fighting to be done, the army - the fifth largest in the world with an estimated 1.3 million personnel in 1989 - is being cut and last year 500,000 soldiers were demobilised and released onto the job market.

Mr. Tue said positions must be found for these men as well as the growing number of Vietnamese boat people who are opting to return home voluntarily from places such as Hong Kong, Thailand and Malaysia.

Last Wednesday a group of 94 Vietnamese flew home from Hong Kong bringing the number of volunteers to be repatriated from the British colony since March 1989 to almost 4,100, with the adults looking for work in their fresh start.

TEL AVIV (AUG 27) - Israel's Moslem population grew twice as fast as the Jewish population in 1989 and now accounts for 14.4 per cent of the country's 4,561,000 residents, figures released Monday by the Central Bureau of Statistics revealed.

The Jewish population of 3,717,000, which accounts for 81.5 per cent of the total, rose by 1.6 per cent over 1988, while the 655,000 Moslems showed a rate of increase of 3.2 per cent. The 107,000 Christians accounted for 2.2 per cent of the population, while the 80,000 Druze comprised 1.8 per cent.

Though the figures include the 70,000 Jewish settlers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, the 1.5 million Palestinians living there are not counted. The 1989 figures also exclude most of the Soviet Jewish immigrants to Israel, only 12,000 of whom arrived in 1989, compared to some 80,000 so far this year.

Israeli Premier Itzhak Shamir predicted Monday that Israel's Jewish population would grow by one million by the end of the century because of Soviet Jewish immigration. Shamir said that despite the many diplomatic and political problems facing the country absorbing the immigrants ''was Israel's greatest challenge''.

BUCHAREST (AUG. 27) - About 10,000 construction workers in Brasov, in central Romania, have gone on strike and are demanding a meeting with Prime Minister Petre Roman to protest the country's ailing economy, trade union sources said Monday.

They were speaking by telephone from Brasov, at the local headquarters of the Infratirea union federation which is leading the strike action and which has about 160,000 members nationally.

The union says measures adopted by the Romanian government to turn around the economy have so far not worked. It has also complained of problems facing industries lacking raw materials. It says an economic turnaround in Romania requires a minimum income guarantee and the freezing of prices.

Tractorul, the mechanical construction company where the 10,000 are striking, employs a total of about 18,700 workers.

Last Tuesday, Infratirea staged a 24-hour strike after the collapse of negotiations with a government commission that had come to Brasov. It is now demanding a meeting with Mr. Roman.

LONDON (AUG. 27) - Iraqi occupation forces, apparently seeking to avoid military action against western embassies that might trigger an attack by U.S. troops, continued Monday to disrupt power and water supplies to the embassies in Kuwait.

While sealing off the British Embassy, Iraqi troops did not appear to be preparing for an advance on the compound to oust the four remaining diplomats inside, the Foreign Office in London said.

Telephones and electrical power were out, but water was still running from time to time.

Staff at most embassies which rejected an Iraqi demand to close down last Friday reported they were getting by on emergency power supplies. Iraqi troops, which have encircled many of the diplomatic missions in Kuwait, did not appear to have been reinforced.

Lebanon's 10-member diplomatic mission in Kuwait, which was transferred to Baghdad by Iraqi forces, was heading back home Monday, the foreign ministry in Beirut said.

In Budapest, the Hungarian government said Monday it had ''temporarily closed'' its embassy in Kuwait ''due to shutoffs of power and water and because of the presence of Iraqi troops''.

Meanwhile, a group of 52 Americans, mostly wives and children of U.S. diplomatic personnel in Kuwait, arrived in Turkey early Monday after a forced stay in Baghdad. More than 50 other Americans not allowed to leave were believed to be waiting in Baghdad.

The Kuwaiti national resistance claimed to have attacked the Iraqi embassy in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, set parts of it on fire and killed or wounded a number of Iraqi soldiers, a Saudi newspaper reported Monday.

On the political front, there was a flurry of activity Monday designed to explore a solution for the Gulf crisis. In Moscow, Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid discussed the Gulf conflict with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

King Hussein of Jordan, currently on a tour of Maghreb and European states, Monday held talks on the Gulf crisis with Libyan leader Moamer Gaddafi in Tripoli.

United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar is expected to hold talks on the Gulf dispute with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in the Jordanian capital of Amman Thursday.

In Jakarta, President Suharto Monday offered Indonesia's mediation in the Gulf crisis and urged Iraq to end the conflict through peaceful means.

In Doha, Qatar announced Monday that it will grant military facilities to troops of friendly countries. The decision was taken at a joint meeting of the cabinet and consultative council chaired by Qatar's emir, Sheikh Khalifa bin Hamad al-Thani.

Iraqi television Monday night broadcast interviews with foreigners being detained in the country. Five Britons, an Australian and a West German said they were in safety and were being treated well.

In Jordan, a humanitarian organisation dispatched eight container trucks containing dried milk and medicine for children in Iraq. The organisation had appealed for the aid in large adverts on the front page of Jordanian newspapers.

In Paris, chiefs of staff of the Western European Union, the political arm of Nato, discussed military aspects of enforcing the international anti-Iraq embargo.

LONDON (AUG. 27) EFE - British Defense Secretary Tom King left Monday on a tour Arab nations in the Persian Gulf during which he will inspect Britain's troops in the region.

Before leaving for Saudi Arabia, King said he would be meeting with Arab leaders to discuss the crisis sparked by Iraq's conquest of Kuwait, and to see how his troops were handling conditions in the Gulf.

King said he would brief troops on their role in the U.S.-led multinational force which was mobilized in the area to defend against a possible Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia and to enforce United Nations sanctions against Iraq and occupied-Kuwait.

He is to meet with the leaders of Saudi Arabia, Bahrain and Oman and will visit a British warship and a squadron of Tornado fighters in Bahrain.

Meanwhile, British press reported Monday that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is to meet Friday with Jordan's King Hussein, who is on a 10-day tour of North Africa and Europe in search of a peaceful solution to the crisis.

King Hussein left Amman Sunday evening for the tour, which is to include several North African countries, West Germany and Spain.

Thatcher discussed the crisis for 20 minutes over the telephone with U.S. President George Bush Sunday night, but details of the conversation were not released.

The Foreign Office Monday said that it was studying an Italian proposal that the 12 European Community countries request a special U.N. Security Council meeting to discuss Iraq's +violations+ of EC embassies in Kuwait.

Iraq has stripped officials at all foreign embassies in Kuwait of their diplomatic immunity for not obeying Baghdad's order last week to close down and move out.

Iraqi soldiers have surrounded the British mission in Kuwait City, trapping the embassy's four remaining diplomats.

NICOSIA (AUG. 27) EFE - Iraqi troops have detained Lebanon's ambassador to Kuwait and taken him and other embassy employees to Baghdad, Lebanon's Foreign Ministry reported Monday.

In a statement, the ministry said Iraqi troops "detained last Thursday the Lebanese ambassador to Kuwait, Adnan Badra, together with 12 other people, staff members of the Lebanese embassy".

The embassy personnel were "taken by force+ to the Iraqi capital after being hauled out of the mission where they had been preparing to travel to Saudi Arabia as a first step to returning to Lebanon," the communique added.

Lebanon's government had called back its embassy staff in Kuwait in protest of Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait as well as Baghdad's order to close all foreign embassies in the country.

LONDON (AUG 27) EFE - Eight more Britons have been detained by Iraqi troops in occupied Kuwait, bringing to 157 the number of Britons being held there by Baghdad, a Foreign Office spokesman said Monday.

The eight were arrested Sunday night and taken to "civilian establishments " the spokesman said.

The latest seizures bring to 157 the number of Britons known to have been rounded up in Kuwait following Iraq's August 2 invasion.

The British Foreign Office estimated that about 2,500 Britons are stranded in Kuwait and several hundred others are believed to be in Iraq.

Reports that Baghdad was moving detained foreigners to key military instalations to act as "human shields" against possible attacks on Iraq by the United States and its allies in the Gulf region have been denied by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

SANTIAGO (AUG 27) EFE - The extreme-left Lautaro Youth Movement (MJL) claimed responsibility Monday for lobbing Molotov cocktails into three Mormon temples in the Chilean capital the previous night.

Nobody was reported injured in the attacks and damage was said to be minimal, even though some 30 people were attending a service in one of the churches at the the time.

An anonymous caller told a Chilean newspaper that the attacks had been carried out in memory of Julio Jacinto Eyzaguirre, a member of the MJL whose body was found in a taxi last Friday.

He had been shot by a sub-lieutenant in the Carabineros police while attempting a raid on a supermarket in north Santiago.

The spokesman for the MJL said the Mormon temples had been selected as targets because their religion, founded in the United States in the 19th century, was "a symbol of imperialism in Chile."

In recent months the MJL has kept up a campaign of "inciting the masses to insurrection" during which it has attacked some 12 Mormon temples nationwide.

The group claims that despite a return to democracy, after military dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet stepped down as president earlier this year "nothing has changed."

BRUSSELS (AUG. 27) EFE - The European Community is to send urgent food supplies to Jordan to help feed thousands of Egyptian refugees who have fled across the border from Iraq, officials reported Monday.

The shipment, requested by the Jordanian government, comprises 9,000 tonnes of cereals, 200 tonnes of dried milk and 500 tonnes of vegetable oil and is valued at more than dlrs 3.6 million.

Last week the EC executive decided to give dlrs 1.3 million in aid to set up an air-shuttle, which went into operation Saturday ferrying Egyptians home from Jordan where they had fled following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait August 2.

It also agreed a dlrs 650,000 package to send doctors, medical equipment, medicines, blankets and tents.

Individual nations among the 12 nation community have also sent essential aid to Jordan for the refugees.

JOHANNESBURG (AUG. 27) EFE - Black inhabitants from the huge township of Soweto went on strike Monday to remember the 515 people killed in factional fighting in South Africa over the last two weeks and to condemn police action in the violence.

Nearly 5,000 African National Congress (ANC) followers turned up for a rally in the town on the outskirts of Johannesburg where Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu blamed the police for fuelling the conflict.

The violence pitted the conservative Zulu Inkatha movement headed by Mangosutu Buthelezi, against the radical ANC, led by Nelson Mandela and largely made up of members of the Xhosa tribe.

But Tutu told the rally, ringed by troops, "We have never been at odds over tribal dissensions. Black liberty is within hand's reach, which some don't want us to have."

The former Nobel Peace Prize winner blamed the police for stirring up the trouble.

The ANC has accused Inkatha of beginning the violence and of being backed by the police and extremist white groups which have criticized the South African government for holding talks with the ANC.

The two black groupings are the largest in South Africa where President F.W. de Klerk has declared he wants to dismantle apartheid.

(AUG. 27) UPI - The weekend battle between the National League's division leaders turned into the Eric Davis Show.

Davis capped a three-game binge in Pittsburgh Sunday, going 2 for 4 with a two-run double to help the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 victory over the Pirates. After losing the first game of the four-game set, the Reds took three straight over the NL East-leading Pirates.

Davis went 9-for-16 with four RBI and five runs scored during the series, and has raised his average 20 points to .240 over the past week.

''I just went from not hitting the ball to hitting the ball,'' said Davis who has struggled offensively since an April knee injury. ''It's not no drastic change or something like that. I'm just generating a little bat speed and getting the bat head through the zone.''

The Pirates swept a four-game series in Cincinnati last weekend, and had won seven of eight entering the return series in Pittsburgh. The two teams split the season series 6-6.

''He's a rare talent,'' Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said of Davis. ''He may be the most gifted player in the National League.''

Reds' Manager Lou Piniella likes what he's seeing from the Reds.

''Things are falling into place,'' Piniella said. ''Davis is swinging the bat, and (Danny) Jackson and (Tom) Browning go back in the rotation this week. I'm going to enjoy my day off tomorrow. So is the team.''

Rick Mahler, 6-5, walked four and struck out four over 6 2-3 innings to help the Reds score their fifth victory in six games. Rob Dibble retired the last seven batters, striking out the side in the ninth, to earn his ninth save.

The Pirates took their third straight loss in stride.

''I'm not going to get into that game when you lose three and everyone thinks you're in a slump,'' Leyland said. ''Last week we took four straight, and the Pirates are the powerhouse. Then Eric Davis comes to life and now the Reds are the powerhouse. Tomorrow, maybe the Mets are the powerhouse. We've just got to grind it out each day.''

Elsewhere in the National League: Los Angeles topped New York 2-1, Montreal downed San Diego 4-2, Atlanta nipped Chicago 4-3, Houston edged St. Louis 4-2 and Philadelphia tripped San Francisco 5-1.

In the American League, it was: New York 4, Milwaukee 3, 11 innings; Boston 1, Toronto 0; Cleveland 8, Baltimore 3; Kansas City 8, Seattle 2; California 4, Chicago 1; Texas 1, Minnesota 0 and Detroit 7, Oakland 3.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Dodgers 2, Mets 1

At Los Angeles, Jose Gonzalez stole home and scored another run to help rookie Mike Hartley, 5-1, to his fifth straight victory. The Dodgers pulled within 6 1-2 games of Cincinnati in the NL West, while the Mets remained three games behind Pittsburgh in the NL East. Frank Viola, 16-9, took the loss.

Expos 4, Padres 2

At Montreal, Larry Walker's three-run homer in the eighth inning lifted the Expos and dropped Bruce Hurst to 8-9. Steve Frey, 6-2, won with two innings of relief. Hurst had a three-game winning streak snapped, suffering his first loss since July 19.

Braves 4, Cubs 3

At Atlanta, Ron Gant tied the score with a leadoff homer and Greg Olson later doubled home Francisco Cabrera in the ninth inning to rally the Braves. After blowing a lead in the top of the inning, the Braves made a winner of John Smoltz, 11-9, and hung the loss on Mitch Williams, 1-7.

Astros 4, Cardinals 2

At Houston, Danny Darwin scattered eight hits to win his ninth straight decision. Darwin, 10-1, improved to 8-0 in his last 10 starts. Ken Hill, 4-2, took the loss. Houston broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth when Bill Doran stole home on the back end of a double steal.

Phillies 5, Giants 1

At San Francisco, Von Hayes hit a three-run homer and John Kruk added a two-run shot to drop the Giants 7 1-2 games behind Cincinnati in the NL West. Jason Grimsley, 1-0, allowed six hits over seven innings for the victory. John Burkett, 11-5, took the loss.

BEIRUT (AUG. 27) XINHUA - CHOLERA IS THREATENING TO SPREAD IN WAR-SHATTERED LEBANON WITH FIVE DEATHS ALREADY REPORTED.

ACCORDING TO LOCAL RADIO BROADCASTS TODAY, FIVE CHOLERA PATIENTS, INCLUDING A 3-YEAR-OLD BOY, DIED IN TRIPOLI ON SUNDAY AND 18 PEOPLE WERE RECEIVING TREATMENT IN THREE HOSPITALS IN NORTHERN LEBANON.

THE REPORTS QUOTED LOCAL HOSPITAL SOURCES AS WARNING OF A QUICK SPREAD OF THE DISEASE IN VIEW OF THE COUNTRY'S LACK OF RESOURCES FOR PREVENTION AND SHORTAGE OF SERA FOR TREATMENT OF THE DEADLY EPIDEMIC.

LACK OF CLEAN DRINKING WATER AND FREQUENT BLACKOUTS IN TRIPOLI MAY ADD DIFFICULTIES TO CONTROL OF THE DISEASE AND, IN THE INTENSE SUMMER HEAT, UNCOLLECTED GARBAGE COULD ALSO HELP THE DISEASE SPREAD, THE SOURCES SAID.

TEHRAN (AUG. 27) XINHUA - IRAN AND IRAQ HAVE AGREED TO CONTINUE POWS SWAPPING FOLLOWING A DECLINE IN THE NUMBER OF POWS DAILY EXCHANGED.

FOREIGN MINISTRY SPOKESMAN MORTEZA SARMADI ANNOUNCED HERE TODAY THAT AN EXPERT COMMITTEE COMPRISING REPRESENTATIVES OF BOTH COUNTRIES AND THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS (ICRC) WAS SET UP TO ENSURE THE PROPER PROCEDURE.

HE SAID THAT THE TWO SIDES ALSO AGREED TO CUT THE NUMBER OF POWS TO BE EXCHANGED BECAUSE COUNTING THE UNREGISTERED POWS WOULD REQUIRE ADDITIONAL WORK.

FOLLOWING THE REGISTRATION OF POWS N SARMADI SAID, IRAQ AND THE ICRC ARE TO RELEASE 1,000 IRANIAN POWS PER DAY AS OF TUESDAY.

SINCE AUGUST 17, THE TWO GULF COUNTRIES HAVE EXCHANGED 31,200 POWS, IRAN'S OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY IRNA SAID. BUT NO FIGURE WAS GIVEN ON THOSE AWAITING TO BE FREED.

ACCORDING TO THE ICRC, THERE WERE ABOUT 20,000 POWS REGISTERED IN IRAQ AND 50,000 LISTED IN IRAN WHEN THE IRAN-IRAQ WAR WAS STOPPED BY U.N. RESOLUTION 598 IN AUGUST 1988.

THE UNITED NATIONS ESTIMATES THAT ANOTHER 10,000 IRANIAN POWS MIGHT BE HELD BY IRAQ AND 20,000 MORE IRAQIS BY IRAN.

THE SPOKESMAN SAID THAT THE NEW AGREEMENT WAS REACHED AT A MEETING BETWEEN IRANIAN DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER FOR INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS MANOUCHEHR MOTTAKI AND HIS IRAQI COUNTERPART AL-ZAHAVI AT KHOSRAWI BORDER POST, WESTERN IRAN, ON SUNDAY.

THE MEETING WAS HELD AFTER BAGHDAD ANNOUNCED THAT ALL THE REGISTERED IRANIAN POWS HAD BEEN RELEASED AND IRAQ REQUESTED THE ICRC TO TAKE DOWN THE NAMES OF THE UNCOUNTED.

IRNA REPORTED THAT THE LAST GROUP OF POWS, REPATRIATED ON SUNDAY BY BUS OR BY PLANE, NUMBERED ONLY 700, ABOUT HALF OF THE AVERAGE IN THE PAST NINE DAYS.

THE SLOW-DOWN IN POWS SWAPPING SPARKED OFF CONCERN FROM IRAN, WHERE A LOCAL NEWSPAPER WARNED THE TWO CAPITALS AGAINST A DANGER TO THE "ACCEPTABLE AND LOGICAL TREND OF THE PAST DAYS."

"JOMHURI ISLAMI" (ISLAMIC REPUBLIC) SAID IN AN EDITORIAL TODAY THAT THE SUDDEN DECLINE IN THE NUMBER OF THE EXCHANGED POWS WOULD BE "DETRIMENTAL TO IRAQ."

CALLING FOR THE CONTINUATION OF THE EXCHANGE OF POWS, REGISTERED AND UNREGISTERED, THE PERSIAN DAILY ADDED: "IRAQI STATESMEN SHOULD NOT HESITATE IN THE RIGHT PATH THEY HAVE CHOSEN IN DEALING WITH THIS ISSUE."

EARLIER, IRANIAN OFFICIALS HAD EXPRESSED THE FEAR THAT THE WORSENING GULF CRISIS MIGHT MAKE THE CONTINUED POWS EXCHANGE IMPOSSIBLE.

TOKYO (AUG. 27) KYODO - A GOVERNMENT SOURCE ON MONDAY SAID JAPAN CAN TRANSPORT WEAPONS, AMMUNITIONS AND MILITARY PERSONNEL TO THE PERSIAN GULF REGION IN RESPONSE TO A U.S. REQUEST FOR A MULTINATIONAL FORCE.

THE SOURCE SAID THERE ARE NO LEGAL PROBLEMS PROVIDING CHARTERED AIRCRAFT AND SHIPS FOR THAT PURPOSE, BECAUSE IT DOES NOT MEAN THEY WOULD CARRY JAPANESE-MADE ARMS NOR THAT JAPAN WOULD PARTICIPATE IN MILITARY ACTIVITIES OR FIGHTING.

IN ADDITION, THE SOURCE SAID, THE CHARTERED CIVIL AIRCRAFT AND VESSELS ARE LEASED NOT TO THE U.S., BUT RATHER TO A MULTINATIONAL FORCE ATTEMPTING TO END THE GULF CONFLICT FOLLOWING IRAQ'S INVASION ON AUGUST 2 AND SUBSEQUENT ANNEXATION OF KUWAIT ON AUGUST 8.

THE SOURCE, HOWEVER, RULED OUT THE POSSIBILITY THAT SELF-DEFENSE FORCE (SDF) PERSONNEL MAY UNDERTAKE THE CONTROL OF THE AIRCRAFT, SAYING SDF AND CIVIL AIRCRAFT WILL NOT BE COMBINED.

THE UNITED STATES, WHICH IS SPEARHEADING A MULTINATIONAL FORCE ASSEMBLING IN THE PERSIAN GULF TO ENFORCE UNITED NATIONS SANCTIONS AGAINST IRAQ FOR ITS OCCUPATION OF KUWAIT, LAST WEEK ASKED JAPAN TO MAKE MORE SUBSTANTIAL CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE INTERNATIONAL EFFORTS BY SUPPLYING AIRCRAFT AND VESSELS FOR TRANSPORT OF MILITARY MATERIALS.

THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT IS MULLING BROADER INTERPRETATIONS OF LAWS TO SEND NONMILITARY AID TO THE TROUBLED REGION IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE U.S. CALL.

JAPAN'S CONSTITUTION BANS THE SENDING THE SDF OVERSEAS, THOUGH A 1987 LAW ALLOWS ONLY THE DISPATCH OF POLICEMEN AND FIRE FIGHTERS, AS WELL AS MEDICAL TEAMS IN THE EVENT OF NATURAL DISASTERS SUCH AS EARTHQUAKES AND NUCLEAR ACCIDENTS.

ON MONDAY, A SEPARATE GOVERNMENT SOURCE POINTED OUT THE GOVERMENT INTERPRETS THE USE OF A COLLECTIVE SDF ONLY IN ONGOING MILITARY MANEUVERS, SAYING TRANSPORT OF ARMS AND SOLDIERS BEFORE SUCH ACTIONS ARE TAKEN WOULD POSE NO LEGAL BACKLASH.

AS A CONCRETE EXAMPLE, THE SOURCE CITED THE U.S. MOBILIZATION OF ITS AIRCRAFT CARRIER AND TROOPS STATIONED IN JAPAN TO REGIONS OF TENSION UNDER A BILATERAL SECURITY TREATY. REJECTING SUCH U.S. MILITARY ACTIONS WOULD LEAVE NOTHING FOR JAPAN TO CONTRIBUTE, THE SOURCE SAID.

MEANWHILE, PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU WELCOMED A REPORTED START OF MEDIATION BY U.N. SECRETARY GENERAL JAVIER DE CUELLAR IN BREAKING THE DEADLOCKED GULF SITUATION.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG 27) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

PETROLEUM EXPORTING COUNTRIES are in Vienna for what some predict could be a formal meeting on oil production and price policy. ... New orders for U.S.-made machine tools dropped 11.9% in July, reports the ASSOCIATION FOR MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY. layoffs announced last week. ... A COMMERCE DEPARTMENT report shows corporate after-tax profits were down 0.2% in the second-quarter compared to the first-quarter.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT issues personal income and outlay figures for July later this morning. ... PRESIDENT BUSH meets at at noon today with CANADIAN PRIME MINISTER MULRONEY. ... Second-quarter merchandise trade statistics are due out tomorrow from Commerce, followed by leading indicators and single-family home sales on Wednesday. On Thursday, the same department issues manufacturers' shipments, inventories and orders for July.

FROM THE BULLS:

"Basically, we see value [in stocks]," says ARNOLD MOSKOWITZ, director of investment strategy at COUNTY NATWEST USA. "For the past several months we have been looking for a low in the market in late summer, with the Dow going down roughly to the 2500 level and bond rates going up to the 9 to 9 1/2 [percent] zone and both of these targets have been achieved." He acknowledges that he was raising cash positions a few weeks ago as the Middle East situation heated up, but says he is moving money back into stocks now. "We don't attempt to pick bottoms ... we pick value." He says emotionalism spawned by the Mideast situation "can bring the market down 100 Dow points, but we think for the most part that just makes stocks a lot cheaper." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/24)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The market is still vulnerable to a downturn," says HOWARD BERL, partner at MONTGOMERY SECURITIES in San Francisco. MARSHALL ACUFF, strategist at SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM, says the mood of the market is depressed. "Any rally here is looked upon with skepticism. Typically in a bear market rallies tend to be short and sharp." ("USA Today", 8/27)

"There is a possibility there might be a short-term bottom in this 2450-2500 area in the Dow, but I don't think it's worth much more than some periodic bounces," says PHILIP RETTEW, technical analyst at MERRILL-LYNCH. "Whether we have more of these periodic bounces or not, I suspect the ultimate low is going to be in the low 2000s." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/24)

"It's hard to imagine pessimism getting greater than it is right now," says DONALD FISHBACK JR., of INVESTMENT RESEARCH INSTITUTE. "And we know from experience that when pessimism reaches an extreme, stocks make important bottoms." (NYT, 8/26)

"Barron's" revisits five bears this week who all predicted market declines in interviews going back to April. BOB FARRELL of MERRILL LYNCH now says the Middle East crisis is part of an evolving "new order" that remains to be settled. "We don't know what that new reality is and that's what bear markets are - a time when stock prices go down because there isn't a clear focus yet on what the new reality is." BARTON BIGGS of MORGAN STANLEY ASSET MANAGEMENT says, "To be sure, we are in a bear market. And all we're going to have is a rally within that bear market. But the rally is going to be a very significant rally." MELISSA BROWN of PRUDENTIAL-BACHE says, "At this point, I am still pretty negative. We have a ways to go down before things start to look better." STEVE LEUTHOLD, head of the LEUTHOLD GROUP, says, "I still think this is a cyclical bear market." NICHOLAS PARKS, head of PARKS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, says he suspects the Dow could go as low as 2000. "However, I don't see a secular decline like in the early 1970s, because back then, the bear market had to do with things that went beyond the economy. ... So my current plans are to start buying around the 2000-2200 level." ("Barron's", 8/27)

STOCK MARKET:

For the investor who is trying to judge whether to get back in, it may be a little too early, says TOM ROBINSON, international investment strategist for MERRILL LYNCH. "Let's let the big institutional guys play first," he says. Robinson would steer clear of the Japanese market, which he believes is still vulnerable to bad news. German stocks rallied 4% today, but Robinson thinks they are overvalued when compared to French stocks. Robinson likes British stocks: "At this particular time we are seeing a return to value in the marketplace, and the U.K. does provide us good value at these prices, even given the [negative] backdrop of the economy." (CNN "Business Day", 8/27)

"Short-term, I feel it's too late to short," says JON GROVEMEN, president of LANDENBURG THALMANN & CO. "I think investors could nibble cautiously on some stocks, but they should be ready to lighten up around Dow 2750." ("Investor's Daily", 8/27)

"A recession means lower earnings and that means a bear market," says GREG MELVIN, manager of the FEDERATED GROWTH TRUST. "A bear market means 80% of stocks will go down. There aren't any gimmies out there." ("USA Today", 8/27)

"I think we've just about washed out the sellers," says MICHAEL METZ of OPPENHEIMER & CO., who believes stock prices are near a bottom unless there are increased hostilities in the Middle East. Among those believing the market has a lot more downside are MICHAEL JENKINS of "Stock Cycles

Forecasts" and ALFRED GOLDMAN of A.G. EDWARDS & CO. ("The Washington Post", 8/26)

"The markets are worrying that there will be a prolonged and messy confrontation [in the Mideast]," says EDWARD YARDENI, chief economist at PRUDENTIAL-BACHE. "The optimistic story, for the markets, now is that there will most likely be a [quickly settled] military confrontation." (NYT, 8/26)

Friday's market action may reflect typical bear-market behavior, says KEN KNUTEL, director of equity mutual funds for KEMPER FINANCIAL SERVICES. "In bear markets, if the market declines for the week, Friday is an up-day because shorts are locking in their gains," he says. ("Investor's Daily", 8/27)

"I do agree that probably the market today [Friday] was just a bounce and the market will go back and test the old lows and maybe continue down some more because I think we have further upward to go on the long-term interest rates," says BILL WOLMAN, chief economist at "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/24)

ROBERT LEO, director of mutual funds at SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS, says there's been little outflow from stock and bond funds, but new purchases have stopped. "I think people feel there's hope that this can turn quickly. They understand the market has already fallen far and there's the potential of selling at the bottom and missing the move back up." ("USA Today", 8/27)

"This may sound ghoulish ... but the conditions in the Mideast will probably come to some kind of conclusion within the next 90 to 120 days," says MONTE GORDON of DREYFUS CORP. "But over the longer term, the more basic element that is going to be involved in here is going to be the condition of the U.S. economy. The Middle East represents a potential convulsion and a change in the way we've been doing business for many years ... but if you look past this, out in the longer term, the stocks which have been going down very sharply are offering a buying opportunity." ("Wall Street Week", 8/24)

"This economy is not going to fall totally apart just because we are at war in the Middle East, even if we do go to war, so I look at it [the situation] as a buying opportunity," says MACEO SLOAN. "The stocks that have come down most ... are the stocks that I think we should take a look at and buy and put in portfolios." ("Wall Street Week", 8/24)

STOCK TIPS:

"USA Today" lists three stock pickers recession-resistant stock picks. MARSHALL ACUFF, chief strategist at SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM, likes some blue chips: drug maker BRISTOL-MYERS SQUIBB, consumer products giant PHILIP MORRIS and electric utility DOMINION RESOURCES. He says all are classic defensive plays that generate healthy cash flow and haven't gotten overvalued. STUART WILLIAMS, manager of the FIDELITY FREEDOM FUND, likes AMERICAN STORES, Canadian security-systems maker ADT LTD. and home-remodeling supply maker HOME DEPOT. ROBERT HABER, manager of the FIDELITY PLYMOUTH FUND is focusing on health care by recommending NATIONAL MEDICAL ENTERPRISES, HEALTH CARE PROPERTIES, NATIONWIDE HEALTH PROPERTIES and AMERICAN HEALTH PROPERTIES. ("USA Today", 8/27)

Unusually heavy volume in UNION CARBIDE last month led to takeover rumors. Now, CNN's DAN DORFMAN reports a million share stake has been taken by PHIL FROST, head of IVAX, a company with interests in speciality chemicals. His intentions are anybody's guess, says Dorfman, noting that Frost has also taken a position in another chemical company, FERRO. The estimated takeover value is 45-55 per share; the stock closed up 1/4 on Friday at 15 5/8. (CNN "Business Morning", 8/27)

#90239m0002 08/27/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG 27) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"There's a threat of military conflict ... and despite all the obvious concerns over the economy, the knee-jerk reaction says you buy dollars," says EARL JOHNSON, a vice president at HARRIS TRUST & SAVINGS BANK in Chicago. "Events are arguing for a higher dollar, but fundamentals are arguing for a lower dollar," says STEPHEN FLANAGAN, a vice president at MANUFACTURERS HANOVER TRUST. ("Investor's Daily", 8/27)

"We could see substantial improvement [in the international trade picture] and I would think that would be good for the dollar," says MICHAEL MORAN, chief economist at DAIWA SECURITIES AMERICA. CARL WEINBERG, chief economist at HIGH FREQUENCY ECONOMICS LTD., agrees that potential improvement in the trade balance bodes well for the dollar. (WSJ, 8/27)

"In effect, financial asset prices are now being driven by the looming struggle [in the Persian Gulf] between the eagle and the scorpion, not Wall Street's traditional bidding competition between bulls and bears," says DAVID HALE, chief economist at KEMPER FINANCIAL SERVICES. WILLIAM GROSS, a managing director at the PACIFIC INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT CO., agrees that "oil and the potential for war are two giant factors in the [bond] market right now." (NYT, 8/27)

RICHARD BERNER, a senior economist at SALOMON BROTHERS, says the Mideast crisis-driven pressure on bond prices may drive them "down to levels that truly reflect the worst possible outcome - and therefore create genuine bargains. Where those levels may be remains unclear, however, and it is fruitless to hang a market forecast on political and emotional factors. It only seems safe to say that the markets haven't yet reached that point." ("Investor's Daily", 8/27)

"If oil prices continue to rise and the economy remains under pressure, prices of corporate bonds have to fall relative to Treasurys," says DAVID GLENN of SCUDDER, STEVENS & CLARK. (WSJ, 8/27)

"If we have a war, [interest] rates will go higher," says ROBERT BARBERA, chief economist at SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS. "If we don't, this sell-off is vastly overdone. ... Oil prices are above $30 a barrel not because we lost Kuwait, but because the world is waiting for war. If oil falls back to $23 to $24 a barrel, we will be in for a mild recession and bonds will be at the point where they can stop worrying about oil, and rally." (NYT, 8/27)

THE ECONOMY:

CYNTHIA LATTA of DRI/McGRAW HILL says Friday's GNP report pegging second-quarter growth at 1.2% showed "much better-quality growth, with more final demand and less inventory accumulation." DAVID RESLER, chief economist with NOMURA SECURITIES, observes: "Under normal circumstances, one might be able to look at the numbers and take some encouragement from inventories. Unfortunately, these aren't normal circumstances. The world changed Aug. 2" with the invasion of Kuwait. ("Investor's Daily", 8/27)

ROBERT BRUSCA, chief economist at NIKKO SECURITIES, looks for oil prices to spike and drive the wholesale and consumer price indexes up "for a quarter or so and then those inflation effects will begin to disappear. Inflation has tended to come and go because of commodity price problems, but once it has come, it actually has dissipated pretty quickly. I think that is something to bear in mind." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/24)

The U.S. economy is "proving to be a real tiger," says BILL WOLMAN, chief economist at "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC." It's very hard to put it down; it's very hard to stop consumers from spending; it's very hard to stop the banks from mailing people new credit cards and approving new credit. ... It's hard to cut off consumer spending ... so things are a little bit stronger and of course that does constrain the Fed a little bit" in cutting interest rates. (CNBC "Market Wrap- Up", 8/24)

JOHN DESSAUER says the current Middle East crisis is nothing like it was in 1973-74. "In the old days, back in the early 1970s, it was OPEC against us and this time it is us - meaning the whole world - against SADDAM HUSSEIN. The reason the oil price is where it is is because we are not buying his oil, which he would dearly like to sell to us." Dessauer says there may be a technical recession, "but with the dollar down and 126 million Americans at work, I find it hard to look for a serious recession." ("Wall Street Week", 8/24)

ALBERT MOORE, president of the ASSOCIATION FOR MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY, says the decline in machine tool orders reported this morning is typical for the annual summer slowdown. "Machine tool orders are hanging tough, considering that July is usually a slow month, as many manufacturing plants have summer shutdowns and the auto industry is normally in the process of model changeovers."

NEW YORK (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Chanel, Inc., announced that "Eden Roc" -- a new television commercial for Chanel No 5 directed by internationally renowned filmmaker Ridley Scott and starring Carole Bouquet -- will debut on national television today.

Filmed on location along the Cote d'Azur in France earlier this year, "Eden Roc" was inspired by Carole Bouquet, the actress whose haunting beauty has graced Chanel television and print advertising since 1987.

Fourteen days of filming were required for the 30-second commercial, a brief but carefully crafted meditation on reality and illusion, in which Carole Bouquet confronts a mysterious -- but equally beautiful -- "double". Production was overseen by Scott and Chanel artistic director Jacques Helleu, and involved such technical feats as constructing a swimming pool in the shape of the legendary Chanel bottle and moving scenery along a complex series of hidden tracks in order to cast the "perfect" shadow.

"Eden Roc" is the fourth in a series of television commercials created by Ridley Scott for Chanel since 1979. Its predecessors -- "Pool", "Gardens" and "Monument" -- ushered in a new wave of television commercials whose dramatic visuals, musical accompaniment, and painstaking editing were the equal of any feature length motion picture.

Scott, whose visual mastery earned critical and popular acclaim in "Alien" "Blade Runner" and last year's "Black Rain", was the first choice of Chanel artistic director Jacques Helleu for the campaign. Helleu's overriding objective was to select a filmmaker able to create the memorable visuals that have long been the hallmark of Chanel advertising.

As worldwide artistic director for Chanel, Helleu is the principal guardian of the Chanel image and oversees a myriad of the company's creativity, from package design for fragrance and Beaute to the production of their advertising. Chanel advertising throughout the world is developed in Paris under Helleu's supervision to ensure international consistency.

The Chanel leadership position in fragrance advertising has been confirmed by critical as well as popular acceptance. Earlier this year, the Fragrance Foundation cited Chanel for four decades of television advertising judged to have created the most memorable awareness of a fragrance while best reflecting the social mode of its time.

EL SEGUNDO, CA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Infonet today announced that its international value-added network will offer local coverage in Berlin. Germany's DATEX-P public data network subscribers will be able to gain access to Infonet's global network from Berlin by making a local phone call. Local access will also be available from Dresden, Leipzig and Chemnitz in early 1991.

The Infonet network is currently accessible in more than 110 countries for worldwide data, E-mail, store and forward, fax and telex transmissions.

"German companies currently have local access to Infonet from Frankfurt," said Michael J. Timmins, Infonet's vice president for Europe, Africa and the Middle East. "Our upcoming expansion into Berlin via DATEX-P will allow us to serve a much larger German user base."

Some of the top names in the United States publishing business are particularly interested in using the Infonet network to cover further newsworthy developments resulting from the unification of East and West Germany. Newsweek, Time Inc. Magazines, The Los Angeles Times and Boston Globe are all Infonet customers.

Correspondents for these organizations typically write their stories on an office PC at a foreign bureau or on a laptop computer in the field. Then they make a local phone call, which connects them to the Infonet network, and transmit their files directly to text processing systems in the United States.

Once on-line editing and page formatting are completed, these text processing systems automatically forward the output for typesetting and printing. The entire process is computerized for accuracy and speed.

Newsweek has nine domestic bureaus and roughly 12 foreign bureaus connected to the Infonet network. The Boston Globe has dozens of correspondents who file stories from foreign countries via Infonet. Globe editors in turn rely on Infonet to transmit messages, instructions, research and background material to reporters in the field.

Time Inc. Magazines has been an Infonet customer for close to five years. "A correspondent may transmit a story to us from one country on Tuesday and another article from a different country on Friday," stated John D. Constantine, Time Inc. Magazines' wire services manager.

SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ. (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Xsirius Superconductivity Inc. (NASDAQ: XSCIA), a Scottsdale firm engaged in the commercialization of high temperature superconductors, announced today that its Israeli subsidiary, Xsirius Superconductivity Materials Ltd., has signed a major agreement with the Electronic Systems Division of RAFAEL in Israel to jointly develop advanced microwave components based on high temperature superconductivity for aerospace and other commercial telecommunication applications.

According to Xsirius Superconductivity's President and CEO Dr. Gerald Huth the agreement will have a significant impact in the microwave field. "Xsirius has defined technologically feasible, market-driven products and turned to RAFAEL for their knowledge of applications, engineering and marketing. This type of agreement represents the most effective method of commercializing high temperature superconductivity," Huth said.

Xsirius' approach to commercialization is focusing its knowledge of high temperature superconductor technology while recruiting corporate partners with expertise in engineering and marketing to bring new products to the marketplace.

The broad consensus is that microwave devices based on high temperature superconductor thin film technology will be the first to be successfully commercialized. Over the past year, Xsirius has developed its advanced thin film fabrication technology to the point of production readiness in anticipation of this type of project.

The Electronic Systems Division of RAFAEL is well known as an innovator in microwave devices and systems development. "They will be an excellent partner for Xsirius," Huth said.

Xsirius' overall strategy is to have access to a broad range of materials development in the high temperature superconductivity field from both internally developed sources such as its advanced, high temperature superconductivity thin film facility in Israel and from laboratories, universities and other groups around the world. The company also sponsors a program of aggressive, innovative, in-house research and development, and patent acquisition.

AUSTIN, TX (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Motorola's (NYSE: MOT) Microprocessor Products Group today announced the 68331 (331), the newest member of the 68300 family for embedded control. The 331 is similar in design to Motorola's 68332 (332) with cost saving changes which allow Motorola to make 32-bit power available to cost-sensitive applications. Motorola also announced reduced pricing for the 332 and a new development system for the 68300 family.

"The functionality and peripheral set of the 331 makes 32-bit power available at the lowest price ever," said Steve Marsh, director of marketing for Motorola's Microcontroller Division. "Additionally, the 332 is progressing quickly down the learning curve which demonstrates Motorola's commitment to providing affordable high performance microcontrollers."

Designed for applications with less emphasis on real-time control, the 68331, similar to its predecessor the 332, is modular in design and has a central processing unit which is a subset of the 68020 (CPU32). The 331 integrates the CPU32 with a queued serial module (QSM), a system integration module (SIM) and a general purpose timer (GPT). All modules are interconnected through the intermodule bus (IMB). The smaller GPT replaces the high performance time processing unit (TPU) found on the 332. While it is a sophisticated timer, the GPT does not run independently of the CPU32 as does the TPU on the 332. The GPT has a 16-bit counter that can access either an internal or an external clock. This counter serves three input capture channels, four output compare channels and one dual purpose channel. The GPT also has an 8-bit pulse accumulator and a 16-bit counter that controls two 8-bit pulse width modulation outputs. The QSM integrates an asynchronous serial communications interface (SCI) with a queued synchronous serial peripheral interface (SPI). The SIM provides an external bus interface with on-chip programmable chip select logic, system

MAYNARD, MA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Digital Equipment of Canada Limited has been named prime contractor for systems integration and facilities management of the Treasury Board of Canada's corporate office information network.

Under terms of a two-year contract worth $CA3.5 ($US3) million, Digital will design, implement, and manage the multivendor network, which will integrate all systems and some 800 users throughout the Treasury Board's 10 branches in Ottawa.

As the corporate manager of the federal government, the Treasury Board is responsible for financial management, personnel management, and central administration of the Public Service of Canada. It sets policy in these areas, and examines and approves the proposed spending plans of government departments.

To maintain its high level of service while reducing operating expenditures, the Treasury Board defined a three-tiered strategy to support the common and unique functions of corporate, work-group, and end-user computing within a single networked system.

The goal is to increase staff productivity by providing corporate- and branch-level users with fast, flexible access to information on multiple vendors' systems, and to gain an efficient, single systems-management environment.

Digital was chosen after a competitive bidding process that included EDP vendors and systems integrators in the United States and Canada.

"With its networked office information system from Digital, the Treasury Board will integrate users and systems while preserving branch and end-user autonomy," says Graeme Woodley, Digital Canada vice president of sales. "The Treasury Board has chosen a corporate information system that allows centralized management and distribution of information, applications, and resources."

To manage corporate, work-group, and end-user computing within a single network, the Treasury Board selected NAS (Network Application Support), Digital's set of software products for using and developing integrated applications running on different vendors' systems.

The network's corporate systems consist of enterprise-wide networking, systems-management, and applications integration.

Digital will provide a state-of-the-art DECnet fiber-optic network throughout the Treasury Board facilities. The high- performance, large-capacity network is compatible with FDDI (fiber distributed data interface) standards.

Also involved are Digital's NAS-based MAILbus products which allow exchange of information residing on diverse vendors' office systems (at the Treasury Board this includes Wang VS and PROFS on IBM). Users at all levels will access applications through ALL-IN-1, Digital's integrated office system.

TAMPA, FL (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Assix International, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: ASIX) today announced that its board of directors has approved a significant restructuring of the company.

Under the plan, which is subject to shareholder approval, Assix International, Inc. will be restructured into a Delaware corporation, Assix Incorporated. Assix Incorporated will function as a publicly traded holding company with three strategic business units: Assix Automotive, N.A., Inc., Bestec Incorporated, and Assix Automotive-Europe GmbH.

R. Park Newton III, president and chief executive officer of Assix International, will be president and CEO of Assix Incorporated. Ronald Shamlaty has been named president of Assix Automotive, N.A., Inc., and will also serve as executive vice president and chief operating officer of Assix Incorporated. Charles A. Ross has been appointed president of Bestec Inc., and George Crook will become president of Assix Automotive-Europe GmbH.

Commenting on the restructuring, Newton said, "Because of the different growth opportunities and business directions of these companies, we determined that a new, more flexible corporate structure was necessary to facilitate future growth.

In addition to our current products, we expect additional growth from the formation of two new operating units, Assix Automotive-Europe GmbH and Bestec Incorporated, through the acquisition of new products and businesses and strategic joint ventures with qualified third parties."

Assix Automotive-Europe GmbH

Assix Automotive-Europe GmbH is the outgrowth of six months of research in Europe. Discussions with the top European tire manufacturers and retail tire outlets have generated significant interest in Assix's proprietary AccuBalance(TM) quality assurance tire/wheel service and Tire Matching(R) technology.

Assix anticipates initial trials and implementation of the new AccuBalance program in Europe during the first calender quarter of 1991. Bestec, which will support Assix Automotive-Europe GmbH through its management systems, is also expected to benefit from the company's international growth.

Bestec Incorporated

Recognizing the need to increase productivity in the 1990s through quality improvements in sales and marketing, and through developing and enhancing employee skills, Assix formed Bestec Incorporated.

Primarily, Bestec will focus on quality implementation of products and services, profitability tracking, and individual sales and sales management coaching for national chains in low- to mid-technology fields specializing in retail chain operations.

Through Assix, Bestec is well-positioned with five offices nationally, a team of 40 sales trainers and an existing client base of more than 35,000 Assix-trained sales and service individuals.

Bestec expects to expand Assix's existing management systems, which measure and improve market productivity. Further growth will come from acquiring other products and companies in the fragmented billion-dollar training industry, and through strategic joint ventures.

Assix Automotive North America, Inc.
Assix's significant growth during the past year will continue with the formation of Assix Automotive N.A., Inc., which will utilize the AccuBalance program to develop additional auto service aftermarket opportunities in North America.

Assix's business was built on its exclusive wheel balancing technology, Tire Matching, which has been used successfully in 850 Sears stores as well as Western Auto, Winston Tire and other retail outlets.

A newly quality control process, AccuBalance, consists of a five-step quality-assured tire and wheel service and includes Assix's patented Tire Matching technology. Assix will launch AccuBalance in all existing locations.

AccuBalance enables the tire reseller to complete the quality assurance process begun at the tire manufacturing facility. For consumers, the AccuBalance process provides total ride value by making an old rim and new, high-quality replacement tire perform as a complete new wheel assembly, thus achieving the original manufactures' wheel balance specifications for quality ride performance. For retailers, AccuBalance offers enhanced sales profits and customer satisfaction. Assix is testing AccuBalance with several major tire retailers.

Since going public in July 1988, Assix's sales and earnings have nearly quadrupled. The number of licensed dealer outlets has increased from 400 to more than 1,400 while, the number of employees has risen from 15 to 160.

The development and implementation of sophisticated sales and marketing techniques, including DART (Disciplined Action Response Trac) and CARDS (Consistent Achievement Reporting Discipline System) have enabled the company to successfully provide services to more than 35,000 retail sales and service personnel at Sears, Western Auto, Winston Tire and other high-volume tire retailers.

ROCKLAND, MAINE (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Scientists at FMC Corp.'s (NYSE: FMC) Marine Colloids research and development laboratories here helped perfect the popular time-release air freshener gels used in millions of households across the nation.

Now they predict that the same gel delivery system will be adopted for a wide variety of attractants, repellents and even pesticides.

Experiments with sex attractants for insect control, repellents for insects and animals, and even pesticides to exterminate insects or rodents have shown the practicality of this delivery system. The technology that makes controlled release gels work is a matrix made of hydrocolloid polymers extracted from natural seaplants or land crops. These hydrocolloids -- Gelloid(R) -- encapsulate the desired active ingredient. As the water evaporates from the gel, it carries with it the volatile material entrapped in the gel system and gradually releases it into the air.

Marine Colloids scientist Dimitri Stancioff said a critical element in creating the release gel involves the right balance of stability and dehydration. The gel must retain its shape but gradually shrink as the active ingredient is uniformly released. Visual inspection will let the user know when the gel's effectiveness has been diminished and replacement is needed. Also possible, Stancioff added, is entrapping chemicals into small time-release gel beads that can be scattered on lawns and gardens to repel insects.

Applications laboratory supervisor Charles Bullens stated that several of these new time-release gel applications are well beyond the laboratory stage and into field evaluation. He said further that FMC's labs have worked closely with producers of release gels to recommend the proper gel formulation and processing conditions to make the consumer product perform most effectively.

FMC's Marine Colloids Division has been a leader in hydrocolloids research development, production and distribution for more than 50 years. With headquarters in Philadelphia, the division has production facilities in Maine, Denmark and Ireland, plus an extensive raw materials cultivation and processing network. Additional information may be obtained by contacting: FMC Corp., Marine Colloids Applications Development, 2000 Market St., Philadelphia, 19103.

ANAHEIM, CA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Scientific NRG Inc. (SNRG) announced today that orders in the first 53 days of the new fiscal year approached sales for the entire fiscal year ended June 30, 1990. Through Aug. 22, SNRG shipped approximately $216,000 of merchandise with a backlog of $285,000 totaling $501,000. This compares with sales of $513,580 for the entire fiscal year ended June 30, 1990.

Board Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Malcolm Fickel attributed the quick start to the restructuring of the company's activities in the fourth quarter of the last fiscal year. Fickel was appointed to the chief executive officer spot on March 28 on the resignation of the prior president. The company's distribution channels were significantly revamped, pricing policies were reviewed and new auditors and legal counsel were appointed. The board of directors elected to take write-downs on several items, resulting in a loss for the fiscal year of approximately $300,000, or $.05 per share, compared with a loss of $.01 per share in the previous fiscal year.

In spite of the loss, Fickel feels that the company is extremely well positioned and poised for a record year. "There could not be a better time to be a debt-free company with its feet on the ground in the energy efficient lighting business," said the chairman. He cited recent studies by the Izaak Walton League and Greenpeace that stressed the need for a conversion to the type of lighting that the company manufactures. "Energy conservation has moved to the forefront of the news," added Fickel. "The company's lighting products reduce energy consumption up to 80 percent, which not only eases the demand on power plants, it also results in a corresponding financial savings in a user's energy bills."

The board of directors has also elected to rescind the proposed sale of new shares to three directors. The board had decided to sell the shares in order to bolster the asset and equity portions of the balance sheet to retain the company's listing on NASDAQ. Accounting treatment of other items in the fourth quarter resulted in the loss of the listing regardless of the stock purchase. The significant sales in July and August also eliminated the need for the working capital provided by the stock sale. The recission did not result in any funds changing hands because the transaction had not been completed at the time of the board action reversing the purchase.

The company expects its strong performance in the new fiscal year to continue because of interest expressed in the product both nationally and aboard as well as recent product enhancement and development efforts.

HOUSTON (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Anadarko Petroleum Corporation (NYSE: APC) today announced construction start-up on the Hugoton Gathering System (HUGS), located in the heart of Anadarko's gas production leases in the Hugoton Field of Kansas.

When completed, the 88-mile HUGS pipeline will gather gas from 138 wells producing from the Hugoton, Panoma/Council Grove and Morrow zones. The $25 million system will deliver up to 100 million cubic feet per day of natural gas to one intrastate and two interstate pipeline systems. These interconnections with multiple pipelines serving divergent market areas will allow the company greater flexibility in marketing gas from the Hugoton field.

Approximately 77 miles of four to 18 inch pipe will gather gas from the low-pressure Hugoton wells and transport it to a 16,000 horsepower compressor station to be located 10 miles west of Hugoton, Kan. Eleven miles of 10-20 inch steel pipe will provide the interconnection between the compressor station and the pipeline transmission systems. Anadarko expects the HUGS pipeline to be operational by Dec. 1, 1990.

According to Robert J. Allison Jr., Anadarko chairman and CEO, "Since 1986 Anadarko has been working to get control of our gas reserves and become more active in gas markets. As a result, gas production has increased 83 percent since 1986. Construction of the HUGS pipeline, as well as the purchase of a similar system in the West Panhandle Field in Texas, gives Anadarko the flexibility to significantly increase our gas production this winter when prices will be higher."

RESTON, VA. (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - GEC-Marconi Software Systems' U.S. office announces the launch of the world's first proven cable-free computer connection.

Having achieved great success in Europe since their launch in 1989, the Verran AC DataLink and DPS are now available in the United States and Canada. A licenser of innovative technology, GEC-Marconi Software Systems in the exclusive distributor of these products.

About the size of a portable CD player, this sleek device lets a PC communicate with a printer, plotter, modem, or other peripheral. It also lets a minicomputer communicate with a terminal. DataLinks work in pairs one attached to the sending device and the other to the receiving device. Once each DataLink is plugged into a standard electrical outlet, data is transmitted without interference through the building's AC circuit.

The AC DataLink DPS (Dedicated Printer Sharer), a DataLink accessory, acts as a print spooler when connected to a printer, handling multiple print jobs from as many as seven computers.

The versatile DataLink boasts many innovative features. It connects peripherals with either serial or parallel ports and works in virtually any computer environment, independent of the operating system. In addition, the DataLink is entirely self-contained; its sophisticated software is housed on built-in microchips. Additional software is not required. To provide security, data can be encrypted prior to transmission, then deciphered at the receiving end.

DataLinks are a flexible, economical solution to the problems caused by inevitable "spaghetti" cabling which results when organizations frequently need to move computer equipment. DataLinks can also provide peripheral sharing capabilities without the expense and administration of a full-blown local area network.

As evidence of their proven success, the DataLink and DPS received outstanding reviews when released in the United Kingdom last year, capturing the London Sunday Times/Honeywell British Innovation Award in the computing and telecommunications category.

NEW YORK (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Grace Specialty Chemicals Co., the world's largest specialty chemicals company and the more than $3 billion operating unit of W. R. Grace & Co. (NYSE: GRA), today announced that it plans to reduce its emissions by 50 percent over the next five years as part of its ongoing commitment to waste minimization. This was termed an ambitious goal by company officials in that it follows the disclosure that Grace Specialty Chemicals reduced its reportable emissions in 1988 over 1987, the latest figures available, by nearly the same amount -- 47 percent.

According to Donald H. Kohnken, president of Grace Specialty Chemicals, "We are committed to reducing emissions wherever possible because it makes good sense both for the company and for the communities in which we operate. We have an on-going program to substitute materials in the manufacturing process that reduce the generation of hazardous waste, as well as modifying certain processes." Other actions Kohnken cited include treating waste to make it less harmful, reusing material where possible and, perhaps most important, reviewing new products in their development stage in order to reduce waste before production begins.

Grace Specialty Chemicals has doubled the number of people working on environmental initiatives over the last five years and plans to spend more than $80 million toward these efforts this year.

For the six months ended Aug. 4, 1990, net earnings were $6.6 million, or 28 cents per share, as compared to net earnings of $10.5 million, or 43 cents per share, for the like period in 1989.

Sales during the first six months of 1990 increased ten percent to $364 million, from the $331 million in sales for the 26 weeks ended July 29, 1989. Comparable store sales for the six months were down three percent on a day-for-day basis from last year.

In commenting on these results, Norman A. Ferber, president and chief executive officer, stated, "We are disappointed in our performance to date this year; however, our second quarter results do show a gradual improvement over the first quarter.

"To strengthen our business, we are implementing short-term strategies that include a more effective marketing program, an intensified focus on our core businesses in Misses' and Men's, and the roll-out to all stores of our year-round Gift Express department."

Ferber continued, "I would also like to report that we are on schedule with our store opening program for 1990. We opened eight new Ross 'Dress For Less' stores during July, ending the second quarter with 169 stores in 16 states coast-to-coast." The stores were opened in California, Washington, New Mexico, Florida, Maryland, and New Jersey.

Ross stores Inc. operates a national chain of off-price retail stores offering first quality, in-season, branded apparel and apparel-related merchandise for the entire family. The company had 169 stores in operation at Aug. 4, 1990, compared to 146 stores at the end of the like period last year.

SEATTLE (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Ethiopian Airlines became the first carrier outside the United States to operate the Boeing 757 Freighter when it took delivery of its new twinjet at Boeing Field on Friday, Aug. 24.

Ethiopian Airlines' 757 Freighter can carry 39 tons (36 metric tons) of cargo. It is equipped with a large cargo door on the forward fuselage and accommodates up to 15 containers or pallets on the main deck, together with bulk-loaded cargo in the lower holds. The carrier will operate the quiet, fuel-efficient aircraft on routes to Europe, Africa and the Middle East to service the general cargo trade.

The twinjet is powered by Pratt & Whitney PW2040 engines and is certified for a maximum takeoff weight of 255,500 lbs. (115,800 kgs).

The carrier also has four Boeing 757 all-passenger models scheduled for delivery during 1991 and 1992.

Ethiopian Airlines scores additional "firsts" with this introduction of the 757 Freighter: it is the first passenger airline in the world to operate the 757 Freighter (other existing operators are U.S. cargo carriers) and the first airline in Africa to operate both the Boeing 767 and 757.

Being first is not new to the airline. In 1984 Ethiopian introduced the 767 to the African continent. Today it operates a fleet of three 767-200 extended range jetliners on routes throughout Africa and to destinations in Europe, the Middle East and Asia.

The wide-body 767 and standard-body 757 have virtually identical flight decks and a common pilot type-rating, permitting airlines like Ethiopian the flexibility to switch flight crews between the two models. The commonality between the 767 and 757 yields additional savings in training, spare parts inventory and maintenance costs.

ATLANTA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - MCI Communications Corp. is today reducing its Kentucky long-distance service rates by 4.8 percent.

Consumers and businesses in Kentucky can take advantage of the new rates when using MCI Dial 1 long-distance, the MCI Calling Card and MCI Payphone services.

Over the past four years, MCI has reduced Kentucky intrastate rates by more than 20 percent and interstate rates by nearly 40 percent.

"We continue to save our customers money over AT&T," said Linda Zuccari, director of Consumer Marketing at MCI's Southeast Headquarters.

In addition to these latest rate reductions, MCI recently introduced its new PrimeTime Kentucky calling plan -- allowing customers in Kentucky to make both in-state and out-of-state long-distance calls for 15 cents per minute for the first hour, and 11 cents a minute thereafter.

"Kentucky residents can now save even more money," said Zuccari, "using MCI's simplified pricing approach and price reductions in the Bluegrass State."

FAIRFAX, VA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Mobil Chemical Canada Ltd. (MCCL) will expand its polyethylene stretch film operations in Belleville, Ontario, strengthening Mobil's position as the largest stretch film manufacturer in North America. The expansion, which will double the plant's capacity to produce such film, is scheduled to be completed by mid-1991.

Anthony J. Cavanna, vice president and general manager of Mobil Chemical Company's Films Division, said the Belleville project is the latest step in a series of expansions in North America that will increase Mobil's stretch film capacity by almost 100 percent since 1985.

The Belleville project includes the addition of a new film line that incorporates the latest in film-blowing technology and automatic recycling of in-plant film scrap, according to Joseph Murphy, sales manager at MCCL. Plant capacity for stretch film will approach 20 million pounds per year and will support Mobil's position as the leading supplier of this film in Canada.

"Growth at Belleville, from our initial marketing in 1981 to the projected 20 million pounds in 1991, reflects a rapidly expanding Canadian market which is now close to 50 million pounds per year," Murphy said.

Stretch film, which replaces baling wire and strapping, holds together goods on shipping pallets and protects a broad variety of loads during storage, handling and transit. Either machine-wrapped or hand- wrapped around the load, the films provide load-holding power, clarity and cling. Stretch wrap for pallets continues as the primary market, but new uses include wrap for reels of paper, agricultural products and general bundling.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Duke Power Company (NYSE: DUK) announced today plans to test the residential load control system on Wednesday, August 29 or Thursday, August 30.

"The actual date of the test will depend on the projected system load and capacity available to meet our customers' need for electricity," said Walter Campbell, Dukes' manager of power supply.

More than 156,000 residential customers have volunteered to participate in the load control program by allowing Duke to temporarily interrupt service to their air conditioners and/or water heaters if overall demand for electricity is greater than available generation. Customers receive credits averaging $91.60 per year on their power bills for participating in the program.

"It's not a common occurrence on our system to use load control," said Campbell. This week's test is part of Duke's maintenance program and helps ensure that the system will work properly when needed.

No action by customers is necessary for the test. However, if customers notice that their central air conditioners or water heaters are not working on either of these days, they should check the load control device. A red indicator light will be on if the system has been activated.

Customers who have questions about the test or would like information about the load control program should contact their local Duke Power office.

In the event of an emergency requiring the use of the load control system prior to the test, the test will be cancelled.

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Alcoa Mineracao, a subsidiary of Alcoa Aluminio S.A. and of Billiton Metais, has received an environmental license to construct a bauxite mine in the Trombetas River area of the Amazon region in Brazil, it was announced today.

Initial capacity of the mine will be 2.25 million metric tons per year (mtpy) and will be expandable to 4.5 million mtpy. Investment in the first phase will be $150 million. Construction will begin next year with the start of the dry season in the Amazon region.

Alcoa Aluminio and Billiton Metais are partners in the Alumar consortium which began operation of a bauxite refinery and aluminum smelter in 1984 near Sao Luis on the northern coast of Brazil. Alumar operates a 1.0 million mtpy refinery and a 245,000 mtpy smelter. It is in the process of starting up an 83,000 mtpy addition to the smelter. Through Alcoa Mineracao, the consortium holds rights to 230 million metric tons of bauxite deposits in the Amazon Valley.

Bauxite for the Alumar refinery currently is supplied by Mineracao Rio do Norte S.A., a private Brazilian mining company with reserves in the Trombetas River area, and from imports from Africa.

Announcing plans for the new mine, Alain Belda, Alcoa vice president-Latin America based in Sao Paulo, said:

"Alumar operates one of the most efficient bauxite refineries in the world. The ability to obtain bauxite at competitive costs will give Alumar economic advantages it has lacked since its inception. The new mine also represents a final consolidation of Alumar's operations."

He continued: "Alcoa Aluminio has operated mining, refining and smelting facilities at Pocos de Caldas in the south of Brazil for over 20 years. It was the first company in Brazil to institute reclamation and reforestation practices for mined areas. Alcoa Aluminio was recently recognized by Brazilian environmental authorities as a leader in these practices. As a matter of the company's environmental policy, comprehensive reclamation and reforestation activities will be integral parts of the operation of the new mine."

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, CALIF. (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Pratt & Whitney's prototype F119-PW-100 engines powered a YF-23 prototype aircraft during its first flight here today. The YF-23 is the Northrop-McDonnell Douglas candidate for the U.S. Air Force's Advanced Tactical Fighter (ATF).

The advanced technology F119, Pratt & Whitney's newest and most powerful engine, is the result of more than seven years of design and development. It will enable the ATF to cruise at supersonic speeds without using afterburner, significantly increasing the aircraft's range and enhancing survivability.

"We are pleased with the performance of our engines. This flight is a major milestone for the ATF program and we are proud to be part of the Air Force-Navy-Northrop-McDonnell Douglas team that made it possible," said Walter N. Bylciw, Pratt & Whitney vice president for F119 programs.

"We have worked for many years to develop this engine and it is exciting to have it flying. The F119 is the right engine for the ATF and we are looking forward to the flight demonstration program to prove its outstanding performance and operability."

The F119 engine represents a major advancement in jet engine technology, offering performance not attainable from engines now in service. It has fewer and more durable parts and is easier to support and maintain than existing engines.

Much of the technology in the F119 was developed under the Advanced Technology Engine Gas Generator (ATEGG) and Joint Technology Demonstrator Engine (JTDE) research programs, funded by the Air Force, Navy and Pratt & Whitney.

Bylciw explained, "Although many of the F119's advanced features are being incorporated in a flight-test engine for the first time, they have been thoroughly tested in the ATEGG, JTDE and other research programs."

Pratt & Whitney's Government Engine Business, based in West Palm Beach, Fla., designs, develops and supports military jet engines. Pratt & Whitney is a unit of United Technologies Corporation (NYSE: UTX).

BALTIMORE (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Due to the warm weather the region is experiencing and equipment outages at generating facilities, Baltimore Gas & Electric (NYSE: BGE) today asked its customers to conserve electricity for the next few days.

Heavy electric usage, particularly the demand for air conditioning, has strained the ability of utilities in the Baltimore-Washington region to meet present demand.

In order to conserve electricity, BG&E is specifically asking customers to:

-- Curtail air-conditioning usage by setting thermostats as high as personal comfort permits. As a guideline, BG&E suggests setting central air-conditioning and heat pump thermostats no lower than 80 degrees. Window units should be set somewhat higher than the normal setting. These steps will not only lower demand, but will lower customers' bills.

-- If you are going to be out of the house for more than four hours, turn your air conditioner off.

-- Postpone some household chores such as washing and drying clothes or running dishwashers until after 8 p.m. when electric demand subsides.

-- If you own an electric stove or oven, consider using outdoor cooking equipment such as gas or barbecue grills, if feasible.

BG&E personnel will continue to monitor the situation and asked residents to stay tuned to their radios for more information. The company thanked all its customers for their patience and cooperation.

JOHNSTON, R.I. (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Shawmut Mortgage Company today announced a special mortgage program designed for the first-time homebuyer. The program's main feature is a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage product with flexible underwriting guidelines and low downpayment requirements so that first-time buyers can purchase a home of their own.

Specifically, the program features downpayments of as low 5 percent on single-family homes and 10 percent on condominiums. Qualifying ratios, that is, the percentage of an applicant's salary that can be allotted to housing expense and total monthly debt, have also been increased to 33 and 38 percent respectively from Shawmut's normal guidelines of 28 and 36 percent.

Shawmut Mortgage has also tailored the program to help reduce closing costs associated with purchasing a home. Shawmut will allow sellers to pay closing costs up to 3.2 percent of the value of the mortgage loan. These seller payments can, for example, take the form of paying legal fees or a one-time private mortgage insurance premium for those borrowers who do not meet Shawmut's minimum downpayment guidelines. The mortgage company has also been able to limit legal fees for bank representation to $200. This fee, which is normally much higher, must be paid by the buyer.

Through its First-Time Homebuyer Program, Shawmut Mortgage will write loans up to $187,450 and has no income restrictions on those who may apply for mortgage consideration via this program. Shawmut will also, at no charge, pre-qualify borrowers so that they know how much of a loan they qualify for before going house shopping.

"The need for this type of first-time homebuyer program is clearly evident " said Bob Brady, chief operating officer of Shawmut Mortgage Company. Citing a recent report completed by the Joint Center for Housing Studies at Harvard University, Brady noted that although some regions of the country may be experiencing slight reductions in the price of housing, to quote the study's findings, "continued high home prices and rents imply that the housing affordability problems of first-time home buyers and low- and moderate-income renters will not fade away in the 1990s."

In the Northeast, according to research conducted by the Chicago Title Insurance Company, first-time homebuyers make up 46.4 percent of the homebuyer market. The average first-time homebuyer in this region is 30 years old, puts down 21 percent of the purchase price, uses 37.3 percent of household income to make monthly payments, uses his or her own savings for 81.1 percent of the downpayment, and relies on relatives and other sources for the additional 18.9 percent of the downpayment. The average first-time homebuyer saves for 3.8 years to raise the necessary downpayment to purchase a home.

Shawmut Mortgage Company is a subsidiary of Shawmut National Corporation (NYSE: SNC), a superregional bank holding company with assets of $25 billion. Shawmut Mortgage, the leading mortgage lender in New England, has loan production offices throughout Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island.

SAN FRANCISCO (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Bank of America has joined the Visa International ATM Network, opening its Versateller automated teller machines for round-the-clock cash access by all 228 million Visa cardholders.

The addition of Bank of America's Versateller network of more than 1550 ATMs in California brings the Visa ATM network to 54,900 machines, located in 40 countries, including all 50 states. In September, Versateller ATMs in Nevada will also accept Visa cards.

"Now Visa cardholders traveling in the West on business or pleasure have access to the nation's largest proprietary automated teller machine network," said Vice President Deborah McWhinney, head of Consumer Electronic Banking at Bank of America. "Versateller ATMs can be found at most major airports as well as in popular tourist destinations such as Disneyland and Yosemite."

Already the world's largest international network, Visa last month became the first to top 50,000 automated teller machines around the globe.

A Visa cardholder can withdraw cash from any Visa ATM Network machine by using a Visa card and a personal identification number. The transaction amount is drawn automatically from the cardholder's account.

In June, cardholders used the Visa network to obtain $145 million in cash, up more than 101 percent from the same month in 1989.

Visa, with 228 million cards in circulation, including 126 million in the United States, is the world's largest consumer payments system.

TORONTO (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Canadian Auto Workers members at General Motors have given their bargaining committee an overwhelming mandate to strike if necessary to back contract demands in the current round of negotiations, the union announced today.

Workers voted yesterday at eight GM plants in Windsor, Woodstock, London, St. Catharines, Scarborough, Oshawa, and Ste. Therese, Quebec. Talks began with GM on July 24, and the expiration date of current contracts for all three auto majors is Sept. 14.

CAW president Bob White called the vote a strong endorsement of the union's bargaining goals. "Contract negotiations are about making progress for the workers," White said. "We don't want a strike, but we are determined to make significant progress."

On Aug. 19, workers at Ford and Chrysler also voted decisively in favor of strike action if necessary with votes of 97.5 percent and 97.9 percent respectively.

The union will soon decide which of the three auto companies to target to set the pattern for the 1990 negotiations.

DENVER (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Cyprus Minerals Co. (NYSE: CYM) today announced a major modernization and expansion of its Miami, Ariz. smelter which is designed to make Cyprus self sufficient in copper smelting for the long term and reduce the company's overall cost of production. Cyprus' board of directors approved plans for the $92.5 million modernization that will increase the throughput capacity of the smelter from 450,000 tons to 650,000 tons of copper concentrates annually.

The first step in the Miami project will be to obtain the necessary state and federal approvals. Completion of construction and start-up is anticipated in mid-1992. The expansion of the smelter will include the addition of an oxygen enriched combustion process that will reduce the consumption of high-cost electric power for smelting.

The modernization is expected to lower the cost of copper produced from the Sierrita-Twin Buttes copper complex near Tucson, at Bagdad in northern Arizona, and at other Cyprus locations. The greater copper concentrate throughput will also increase the production of acid used in leach copper operations at Miami and other locations, and should eliminate the need to buy acid from outside sources.

"This is a strategic investment which will strengthen Cyprus' position in the copper business," said Kenneth J. Barr, chairman and chief Executive Officer of Cyprus Minerals. "It will have a positive impact on our operating costs and will improve Cyprus' competitive position in the copper industry."

Also Cyprus announced that the mill expansion at its Bagdad, Arizona copper mine has been completed and began operation August 20.

The expansion increases Bagdad's annual copper production by 40 million pounds to more than 220 million pounds. The addition was designed to reduce production costs through added processing capacity and improved productivity. The addition of a fifth grinding line increases daily mill throughput from 60,000 tons to 75,000 tons of ore.

Cyprus Minerals, headquartered in Englewood, Colo., is a major producer of copper, molybdenum, lithium, coal, and talc. Cyprus produced about 600 million pounds of copper in 1989.

DALY CITY, CA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - The first man to take a chance on Colonel Harland Sanders' recipe for fried chicken 38 years ago, today opened the nation's 5,000th Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant here -- and a company official predicted the system will double in the next decade.

Together with senior officers of Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp., Leon "Pete" Harman of Los Altos, Calif., Colonel Sanders' first franchisee and operator of more than 240 Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants, cut the ribbon for the company's 5,000th unit in the United States.

The ceremony took place against a background of 5,000 Kentucky Fried Chicken buckets constructed in the form of a 16-foot-high pyramid at the new restaurant in Daly City, at 287 Westmoor Ave. (at Skyline Blvd.).

"I am very fortunate to have been a part of Kentucky Fried Chicken's growth from a single franchisee with one restaurant to one of the largest restaurant systems in the world," said Harman. "To commemorate this historic milestone, we are donating Kentucky Fried chicken to feed 5,000 of the Bay Area's neediest people."

"We're pleased and proud to have Pete Harman, the first Kentucky Fried Chicken franchisee, operate our 5,000th unit," said John M. Cranor, president and chief executive officer of Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp. "Pete has been a pioneer in our industry, helping to establish Kentucky Fried Chicken as a market leader with enormous growth opportunities. Although it took nearly four decades to build 5,000 outlets, our goal is to achieve 10,000 by the end of this decade.

"Pete Harman has been an outstanding innovator in the quick-service restaurant industry," Cranor said. "Not only did he recognize a concept with extraordinary appeal before it was proven, he has dedicated a lifetime to bringing that concept to millions of consumers."

Harman, who is chairman of the board of Los Altos-based Harman Management Corp., has arranged to donate Kentucky Fried Chicken for 5,000 needy and homeless people in the Bay Area. The food will be distributed through St. Anthony's Dining Room, Glide Memorial Church, and Oakland's Project Outreach.

Since 1952, when Harman and Colonel Sanders sealed their franchise agreement with a handshake, more than 8,000 Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants have opened in 59 countries. Sales at Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants worldwide amount to more than $5 billion annually.

WACO, TEXAS (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - (NASDAQ: ASKC) ASK Corp. (ASK) announced today that it may reactivate its American Solar King subsidiary in response to increasing public interest in solar energy products.

ASK said it has been contacted by shareholders and other interested parties who have urged the company to re-enter the solar market.

American Solar King Corp. is now wholly-owned subsidiary of ASK Corp. Prior to 1985 American Solar King was one of the nation's leading manufacturers of solar thermal products used in residential and commercial applications. In early 1986, favorable renewable energy tax credits expired and the price of oil plummeted to below $10 per barrel. As a result, demand for solar energy products declined to practically zero.

ASK Corp. said today consumer demand for solar products has remained essentially dormant for the last five years. The company said, however, the recent crisis in the Middle East, higher oil prices and a renewed concern for energy security have strongly stimulated public interest in solar energy as well as other alternative energy sources and conservation.

ASK said it is now formulating plants to reactivate American Solar King. ASK maintains a significant manufacturing facility which could begin production of solar products on relatively short notice, the company said.

ASK said it is discussing these plans with certain investors to determine when and how a recapitalization of American Solar King Corp. may occur.

Between 1976 and 1986, American Solar King Corp. produced and sold thousands of solar energy systems from coast to coast and in a number of world markets. American Solar King Corp. produced products under its own tradename and for Sears solar under a licensing agreement with Sears, Roebuck & Co.

ASK said, if activated, American Solar King Corp. will produce solar thermal systems for residential and commercial applications including solar water heating, space heating and air conditioning.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - The Upjohn Company (NYSE: UPJ) will meet with state Medicaid program administrators during the next few weeks to discuss a proposal to offer rebates on its prescription products, the company announced today.

Upjohn's proposal would provide a $1.35 rebate for each Medicaid prescription filled with the company's products. The proposal includes both single-source, those covered by patent, and multi-source medications.

In return, Upjohn is seeking uncompromised access for Medicaid recipients to all of its prescription products except Rogaine Topical Solution.

"Pharmaceutical therapy offers the most cost-effective means of treating many diseases, while holding down costs such as surgery and hospitalization," said Theodore Cooper, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of The Upjohn Company. "In some states, Medicaid patients do not have access to pharmaceutical therapy commonly available to the private paying public. The Upjohn Medicaid prescription rebate proposal assures greater public access to the innovative pharmaceutical products that we develop, while offering savings to Medicaid budgets during a time of increased financial pressures," Cooper said. "We view this proposal as a reflection of Upjohn's commitment to meeting the medical needs of patients while addressing the nation's social and economic needs."

CHICAGO (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - There are too many stores chasing the consumer's disposable income, which is expected to decrease from the levels experienced in the 1980s. This slowdown will result from slower economic growth, a rising tax bite, a declining rate of entry into the work force, and slower household formation, according to the 37th Annual Retail Study of Harris Bank, Chicago.

The study states, "Market share will only be won at the expense of the competition, and the gap between winners and losers will widen at an accelerating rate. Some industry observers predict that as many as 50 percent of existing retailers will no longer be in business by the end of the decade. A finely honed identity and a keen understanding of the consumer will be fundamental to success."

The bank's study reviews the fiscal 1989 financial performance of seven department stores, eight mass merchandisers, 12 specialty non-apparel store chains, 15 specialty apparel store chains and 12 closely held retailers.

Aggregate sales growth in fiscal 1989 was 9.8 percent for the department stores, 12.1 percent for the mass merchandisers, 13.6 percent for the specialty non-apparel stores and 15.6 percent for specialty apparel stores.

The closely held retailer group, comprised of middle market companies ranging in asset size from $4 million to $500 million, enjoyed a successful 1989, with sales up 12.3 percent, primarily as a result of store expansions. Comparable store sales remained flat or below expectations.

Finding reliable, experienced sales personnel to meet service demands will be a challenge, Elizabeth Gilliam, Harris assistant vice president and retailing specialist, said in commenting on the study. Retailers will be forced to pay more attention to work incentives and benefits in order to attract and retain employees that can meet customer needs, "an expensive proposition in this people-intensive industry," she noted. Other trends noted in the study include:

- Retailers will face more opportunities as well as more competition as global barriers fall. The incentive to conquer new, faster-growing markets abroad will be strong given waning domestic growth.

- Quick Response, a computer-driven strategy that can cut delivery times and pare inventories, is on the rise. The strategy is based on a demand-driven distribution chain, wherein products are replenished or removed from the mix based on data gathered at the point of sale. Orders are just large enough to avoid stock-outs and ensure consistent service.

The two executives noted that current uncertainty and instability in financial markets have made prospects for the acquisition less promising and that the parties had decided that termination of the transaction is in the best interests of each of the companies and its respective shareholders.

Wright also announced that FCHT's board of directors had authorized an increase in its stock repurchase program to $4 million from $1.5 million. As previously announced, FCHT intends to make open market purchases of its stock as market conditions may permit.

DALLAS (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - On Aug. 23, 1990, Capital Realty Group Properties Inc. (CRG) was ordered to immediately cease all efforts to send proxy materials to unitholders of six real estate limited partnerships having Consolidated Capital Equities Corporation (CCEC) as managing general partner. These six partnerships are Consolidated Capital Properties, Consolidated Capital Properties II, Consolidated Capital Properties III, Consolidated Capital Properties IV, Consolidated Capital Properties V, and Consolidated Capital Properties IV.

The U.S. District Court in San Francisco issued that order in response to the partnerships' complaint which alleged that the information being used by CRG with respect to the removal of CCEC as managing general partner of these six partnerships was false and misleading. The Court stated that "serious questions were raised...that there is a possibility of irreparable injury" if CRG's solicitation efforts were allowed to continue.

The Court's order restraining CRG's solicitation will remain in effect until Sept. 10, 1990, when a hearing is scheduled to determine whether a preliminary injunction should be issued. The Court also ordered that all ballots submitted by the unit holders of the affected partnerships be sealed pending that determination.

PHILADELPHIA (AUG. 27) PR NEWSWIRE - Prime Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: PSAB) recorded "another prime performance" in the release today of the fourth quarter and annual income figures for the period ended June 30, 1990.

Earnings for the fourth quarter 1990 were $924,000 compared to $767,000 for 1989 representing a 20.5 percent increase. 1990 annual earnings were $3,360,000, almost parallel to 1989 earnings of $3,429,000.

The annual earnings, however, mask some substantial improvements, the company said. 1990's core earnings were stronger, led by a $2.1 million (20.9 percent) gain in net interest income. Prime now has a 4 percent net interest margin. Net income before taxes moved from $5.6 million in 1989 to $6.2 million in 1990. Final earnings after taxes were negatively impacted by the Pennsylvania Thrift Tax on net income, but overall more sustainable core earnings grew strongly. Prime's return on average assets at 1.02 percent and return on average equity of 9.28 percent place Prime near the top of thrifts nationally.

Prime has been rated well in regulatory reviews. In the face of some weakness in the local economy, Prime's credit quality remains good. Non-performing loans were .996 percent of total loans on June 30, 1990.

At June 30, 1990, assets totaled $334,748,000 and deposits $272,915,000. Shareholders' equity increased to $37,294,000 for a book value of $27.73.

Prime Bancorp Inc.'s common stock is listed on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol "PSAB." Its price as of the close of business on Aug. 24, 1990, was $11.13. CHICAGO (AUG. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Playboy Enterprises, Inc. (NYSE: PLA) announced today that it had negotiated the purchase of 200,000 non-voting Class B Playboy shares (PLA) from Industrial Equity (Pacific) Limited, completing the 200,000-share buy back of Class B stock that the company announced nearly three weeks ago. The company acquired the block of Class B shares for $825,000. Industrial Equity remains the second largest owner of Playboy stock, holding a 7.6 percent voting interest in the company's equity. This transaction does not affect the relative voting interest of any shareholders. Playboy founder Hugh M. Hefner, who owns nearly 71 percent of Playboy stock, has held majority voting control of the company since it went public in 1971.

Playboy Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Christie Hefner, who made the announcement from Los Angeles, stated that the company also plans to extend the buy back program, commencing open market and negotiated purchases of an additional 200,000 shares of the Class B non- voting stock as market conditions warrant.

On June 7, 1990, Playboy completed a recapitalization plan, which created a new class of non-voting stock and increased the authorized number of shares of common stock from 15,000,000 to 37,500,000, consisting of 7,500,000 shares of Class A common stock and 30,000,000 shares of Class B common stock. The two classes of stock have substantially identical rights, including dividend rights, except that the Class A stock has one vote per share and Class B stock is non- voting, (unless such class is entitled to vote as a matter of law).

The recapitalization plan also contains an innovative "Minority Protection" feature that was designed to help ensure that the two classes of stock trade at approximately equal market prices and to give all holders the opportunity to participate in any premium paid in the future for a significant block of Class A stock by a buyer who has not acquired a proportionate share of the Class B stock. Any person or group who acquires more than 10 percent of the Class A voting stock without owning an equal or greater percentage of the Class B non-voting stock, must, within a 90-day period, offer to acquire Class B shares proportionate to their Class A holdings.

Playboy Enterprises, Inc. is an international publishing and entertainment company that publishes Playboy magazine in 15 countries, newsstand specials, calendars, limited-edition graphics and catalogs; produces and markets programming for domestic and international television and home video; and licenses Playboy and other trademarks for consumer goods around the world. Two classes of common stock are listed on the New York and Pacific Stock Exchanges, a Class A voting stock (PLA A) and Class B non-voting stock (PLA).

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AUG. 27) UPI - Alaskans go to the polls Tuesday to decide whether to legalize gambling and to choose candidates for governor in a race focusing on two Democrats running neck-and-neck in a debate often characterized by environment vs. development issues.

Like most hotly disputed topics in Alaska, Tuesday's primary election comes down to the perennial debate between promoting economic development, especially oil drilling, and protecting the wild Alaska landscape.

Candidates tout their support for drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge while portraying themselves as protectors of the wilderness, supporting environmentally responsible development.

While political rhetoric from the field of would-be governors sounds similar, differences have emerged that have made some candidates the favorite of the pro-development forces, while others are viewed as friendlier to environmental concerns.

Gambling has become one of those issues characterized by economic development vs. preserving the Alaska lifestyle.

Gov. Steve Cowper, a Democrat, decided last year against running for a second four-year term but has played a prominent role against gambling.

Democrats Tony Knowles, a former two-term mayor of Anchorage, and two-term Lt. Gov. Stephen McAlpine are in a tug-of-war where environmental lifestyles and economic development pull at each other.

Most attention has focused on the warring Democrats because moderate Republican state Sen. Arliss Sturgulewski has a comfortable lead over two conservative Republicans, businessman James Campbell and state Sen. Rick Halford.

Knowles, McAlpine and Campbell have been the big spenders, running campaigns costing more than a half-million dollars.

Sturgulewski, defeated by Cowper in 1986, is expected to face the winner of the Knowles-McAlpine battle in the November.

Alaska has an open primary, which means any voter may vote for any candidate regardless of party affiliation.

In a Sunday editorial, the pro-development Anchorage Times, owned by the large oil field service company Veco, urged conservative Republicans to abandon the candidacies of the trailing Republicans in crossover voting for McAlpine - to defeat the liberal Knowles, who is supported by environmentalists and the Anchorage Daily News.

In two polls published Sunday, the Daily News said Knowles had a 5 percentage point lead and the Times said McAlpine had a slight edge.

Knowles, 47, a restaurant owner, was mayor of Alaska's largest city from 1982 through 1987, suffered through financial problems while overseeing construction of a performing arts center and a coastal trial system, which have come to symbolize his ''lifestyle'' candidacy.

McAlpine, 41, a lawyer, has served an uneventful two terms as lieutenant governor after being mayor of Valdez. His pro-development views have won support from labor and the oil industry.

Sturgulewski, 62, a millionaire state senator, has been involved in local and state politics for 27 years.

Campbell, 57, was a hardware store owner who gained prominence as chairman of the state railroad and on the North Pacific Fisheries Management Council.

Halford, 45, a hunting lodge owner, has been in the state legislature for 12 years.

McAlpine is the only candidate who supports the gambling initiative. Other differences also have surfaced among the candidates: Halford is the only one against abortion; Knowles is the only one against a November ballot measure to recriminalize marijuana; Campbell alone is against surprise state environmental inspections of oil facilities.

Knowles has attacked McAlpine's support of the gambling measure while McAlpine has sought to portray Knowles as soft on drugs.

McAlpine's current boss, Cowper, along with Attorney General Doug Baily, have been leading the fight against gambling, even accusing McAlpine, the state's top election official, of phrasing the ballot initiative in a misleading way.

If approved, the gambling measure ''opens the floodgates to virtually every type of gambling there is,'' Cowper said.

''Casino gambling in Las Vegas in fine and it ought to stay there,'' Cowper said, warning that Alaska ''will be forever changed'' by gambling.

''Alaska has spent a great deal on tourism marketing, emphasizing the state's natural beauty,'' Baily said. ''Although tourists go to Las Vegas to gamble, they come to Alaska for pristine wilderness. The Exxon Valdez oil spill taught us a lesson about how much people value our wilderness. Gambling will hurt this image.''

Baily said gambling would bring crime and corruption to Alaska, but gambling supporter Jeffrey Macktaz said it would bring jobs, money and winter tourism.

''You put slot machines out here at international airport in those two terminals and you'll pay for the airport,'' gambling supporter Bill McConkey said. Referring to Anchorage's role as a refueling stop for flights to and from Asia, he added, ''Those little Japanese guys will sit there and clink that thing until their arms fall off.''

McAlpine said he envisioned a return to historic gambling in Alaska, but Cowper said, ''I don't think there's any way of going back to the old days.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Like winds that sweep across fields, bending the grain into passing waves, the impact of the Persian Gulf crisis is rippling across rural America in the form of higher fuel prices and worries about lost sales.

There were reports of fuel prices rising 40 cents a gallon in the Northwest while Corn Belt farmers, some of them approaching the end of a rain-soaked growing season, worried about unexpected costs for drying their grain.

In the parched Southeast, the president of the Georgia Agribusiness Council said higher fuel prices could worsen the situation of producers who are pumping water to their crops.

''You start pumping hundreds of thousands of gallons of water a day, and you can go through a tanker of diesel (fuel) in a day,'' said council president Gary Black.

An Agriculture Department official estimated that a $5-a-barrel increase in oil prices could add $900 million a year in farm fuel, fertilizer, pesticide and utility costs, assuming a long-lasting oil-price increase.

''Diesel prices are up 40 cents a gallon from a month ago,'' said Gary Benner, petroleum manager for a farm supplier in the Spokane, Wash., area. ''Where (the farmer) used to spend $7,500 per year, he's now spending $11,000.

''Their reaction is the reaction you and I have to rising gasoline prices - they don't like it.''

Iraq was the 12th largest market for U.S. agricultural exports, buying $800 million in goods during fiscal 1989. Even before the U.S. embargo, sales had been expected to shrink because of curtailment of Iraqi access to export credit guarantees.

Iraq was the No. 1 market for U.S. rice exports, buying 20 percent of them in fiscal 1989 and 302,254 metric tons of U.S. rice in the first eight months of this fiscal year.

''The general attitude is one of exasperation. You just want to grow your hands up,'' said rice grower John Tull of Lonoke, Ark. ''Not only does this take your largest market away and affect our price drastically, but it's going to increase our production costs.''

Rice prices have fallen by about 50 cents per 100 pounds since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 and precipitated the international embargo. The Agriculture Department has reduced its forecast of exports by 3 percent, to 74 million hundredweight, based on ''additional sales to other markets'' making up for most of the loss of the Iraqi market.

In addition, it has reduced its forecast of rice prices during the coming year by 50 cents per hundredweight. There is a large world rice crop this year.

Iraq played a far less prominent role in other U.S. farm exports. It accounted for 3 percent of wheat sales and 1 percent of corn sales.

However, the Bush administration was under pressure to protect farmer income against any possible downturn in grain sales and market prices. Farmers are expected to harvest bumper crops of wheat and feed grains this year, with prices expected to fall as a result. Large world crops are projected to put a crimp on export sales.

''The embargo does not have to hurt American grain exports or depress grain prices if the president and the (Agriculture Department) will simply use the tools they have to move farm commodities around the world or into a strategic reserve,'' said Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., whose home state is the No. 1 durum wheat grower.

Dorgan's prescription - putting wheat into long-term storage in the Farmer Owned Reserve, re-stocking the Food Security Wheat Reserve and making heavy use of export subsidy programs - was similar to ideas expressed earlier this month by Wheat Belt congressmen worried about low prices.

Consumers were not expected to feel much of a direct impact from higher farm expenses. Fuel, chemicals and utilities account for 15 percent of farm production costs and farmers get 24 cents out of each dollar spent on food.

The Agriculture Department has forecast food prices will go up 5 percent to 7 percent this year, partly because of double-digit increases for some commodities and the uncertain fuel price outlook.

In addition to the impact on farmers, oil price increases could affect the cost of processing, packaging, shipping and selling food.

In Michigan, state officials said rising fuel prices could cost farmers an additional $3,500 apiece.

In Iowa, dealers reported an upsurge in farmers making advance orders for propane gas, a fuel commonly used in grain drying.

Spring planting was delayed in the central states because of rainy weather. Crop development has lagged because of the late start and continued rainy weather.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Bush administration officials say the only point subject to negotiation with Iraq is when Iraqi forces will withdraw from Kuwait. Other international parties attempted Sunday to construct a framework which would bring about talks aimed at defusing the Middle East Crisis.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met with his French counterpart and prepared to receive Egypt's foreign minister to discuss the tense standoff. Shevardnadze announced that Moscow does NOT intend to join a naval blockade of Iraqi commerce, despite approval of a U-N measure allowing forces in the Persian Gulf region to use minimal force to prevent Iraqi shipments.

Jordanian radio reports that King Hussein traveled to Libya to try to gain suppor for a plan that would give Arab countrys a greater role in resolving the situation. Hussein's journey came as the United Nations announced that Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar will meet with Iraq's foregn minister Thursday in the Jordanian capital.

A published report Sunday says Arab-Americans are keeping close tabs on televison coverage of the Middle East crisis. Arab-American activists say T-V coverage of the standoff has been anti-Arab and lacking depth. The head of the Arab-American Anti-Defamation Committee says very few news items have dealt with America's dependence on the region's oil and whether it is necessary for a land war to erupt to resolve the crisis.

(AUG. 27) UPI - A Portland, Oregon, newspaper reported Sunday that the Bush administration is considering a plan that would slash timber production in the Pacific Northwest by as much as 20 percent. The reported cuts stem from plans to protect the northern spotted owl, which was listed as a threatened species earlier this summer. The U-S Forest Service says the cuts could lead to as many as 25-thousand jobs being lost.

It was all downhill for some 45 well-rounded runners in a weekend trot in Crooked River, Oregon. Participants qualified for the mile-long exercise by having a waistline which surpassed their inseam length by four inches. But race organizers wereN'T too strict about who took part, so long as participants adhered to the code of crossing the finish line en masse. The winning time was said to be slightly more than half an hour.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... news from United Press International:

52 Americans have been allowed to leave Iraq after being driven to Turkey in cars. Most of the 52 were wives and children of U-S diplomats stationed in Kuwait. Three other people, all young men, were originally in the group who left Baghdad yesterday. Iraqi officials prevented them from crossing the border.

The Soviet Union says it does NOT plan to take part in the naval blockade against Iraq. Moscow last week backed a U-N resolution authorizing limited force to tighten sanctions against Baghdad. And the Soviets have demanded that Iraq leave Kuwait. But Foreign Minister Shevardnadze says his nation will NOT join the blockade forces.

North America's northernmost Indian tribe, the Gwich'in, hope to stop oil drilling on Arctic land where caribou breed. They are gathering today for a weeklong meeting in Arctic Village, Alaska. The Persian Gulf crisis gives the debate more urgency. The Gwich'ins are scattered over Alaska and Canada.

Tropical storm Gustav developed into a hurricane yesterday, and hurricane warnings were issued in the northeastern Caribbean. Top winds were 80 miles an hour. Last night, the hurricane was 280 miles east of the island of Guadeloupe, moving northwest at nearly nine miles an hour.

Blustery storms lashed the Midwest yesterday. Winds up to 100 miles an hour hit Wisconsin, doing heavy damage in La Crosse. Trees and power lines were blown over in Osseo and Arcadia, Wisconsin. Large hail fell near Minnewaukan, Minnesota... and Isabel, South Dakota.

Soldiers went through houses in black townships near Johannesburg, South Africa, yesterday to enforce new emergency laws. Anything that could be used as a weapon was confiscated, including lead pipes and bicycle spokes. The search was designed to prevent new violence between rival black groups.

(AUG. 27) UPI - 186 coal miners were killed in central Yugoslavia yesterday in a methane gas explosion. Eight bodies were brought out. 178 other miners were trapped and rescue workers said there was NO chance any survived. It's the worst coal mine accident in Yugoslavia's history.

Thailand's prime minister, Chatichai Choonhavan, shook up his cabinet today in an attempt to recover public support. 20 cabinet members were kicked out or given new jobs. Three non-political experts became ministers. Corruption charges earlier led to two ministers' firing. One was charged with taking bribes.

Observers at an emergency OPEC meeting in Vienna expect a formal conference to be called... one that can increase oil production quotas for the cartel. Only Iraq and Libya are absent from the informal meeting. Oil flowing to the world has been severely cut by the U-N embargo against Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil.

The Lundberg Survey says retail gasoline prices have gone up about a nickel a gallon in the past two weeks. But wholesale prices rose even faster- nine cents- and retailers' profits were actually cut. Trilby Lundberg, director of the survey, says prices could move either way in coming weeks.

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AUG. 27) UPI - Hundreds of U.S. tanks carried by ship neared Saudi Arabia as the largest American military logistical operation since World War II proceeded on schedule in the Persian Gulf, the mission commander said.

The M-1 Abrams tanks, named for a U.S. commander in Vietnam, will be the crucial backbone of U.S. ground forces now assembling to confront Iraq.

Maj. Gen. William Pagonis, who has the daunting task of ushering in the enormous quantities of men and materiel coming to the desert kingdom, told a news conference Sunday that essentials for a combat force had been delivered and the key task now was sustaining the troops.

''We have got everybody to the right place and all the cargo to the right place,'' he said. ''Our combat power is growing rapidly, and we are ready to sustain it for as long as necessary.''

He said the military foundation had been laid by hundreds of air sorties, still being flown at the rate of about 50 a day, and five cargo ships from a pre-positioned maritime force in the region.

The vessels, which had been stationed at the Indian Ocean base of Diego Garcia in case of a Middle East crisis, are delivering enough armor and equipment to sustain a full Marine brigade for 30 days.

Pagonis said the next stage of the deployment would be the arrival of ships bearing an estimated 300 M-1 Abrams main battle tanks, America's top-range heavy armor and a vital attack weapon should U.S., Saudi and Arab forces move against the Iraqi armies stationed in occupied Kuwait.

The tank is named for the late Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, a legendary World War II tank fighter under Gen. George S. Patton who later commanded U.S. military forces in the Vietnam War.

''Right now, they are due in the next few days,'' Pagonis said.

Troops from the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division have been streaming to Saudi Arabia to man the armor when it arrives.

The M-1 is viewed by analysts as overwhelmingly superior to Iraq's Soviet-supplied T-72s, and its employment would allow American forces to take the offensive and actually occupy ground they expect would be yielded by Iraqi troops hit by U.S. airpower and naval barrages.

More than 40,000 U.S. ground troops are estimated to be in Saudi Arabia, and many have been deployed to defend the main port of Jubail, north of Dhahran and about 130 miles south of Kuwait.

Pagonis bestowed accolades on the American military personnel in the desert, who he said had performed ''miracles'' by dealing with a myriad of challenges since Operation Desert Shield began full-scale Aug.8.

''It is probably the largest logistical exercise ever accomplished in the shortest period of time since World War II,'' he said.

Pagonis said the military always kept a 30-day backup of essential supplies, but this could be extended. His units had originally been working 36-hour shifts with four hours sleep, but this was now scaled back to 22 hours, with four hours sleep, he said.

The commander said forward troops were being sustained by ration packs, but about 80 to 90 percent of the food, great quantities of bottled water and certain fuels were being provided by Saudi Arabia.

''The Saudis have cut through any bureaucratic problems very swiftly,'' he said. ''There has been no squabbling or holding back. Even the United States would have a few problems dropping such a number of soldiers, for example, in New Jersey.''

The general also predicted that the Iraqi forces, estimated to number about 170,000 in Kuwait, had equally difficult tasks.

''They have to sustain their forces forward. Kuwait will only be able to provide so much food and water,'' he said. ''I am sure their logistical lines are stretched to the limit.''

AMMAN, Jordan (AUG. 27) UPI - King Hussein of Jordan flew to Libya on the first stop of another round of visits to Middle East capitals in pursuit of an Arab initiative to avert war in the Persian Gulf region, while more than 14,000 foreigners poured into Jordan from Iraq, border officials said.

State-run Amman radio said Hussein flew to Tripoli Sunday with a delegation of senior officials after holding separate meetings during the day in Amman with Turkish Foreign Minister Ali Bozer and the Sudanese leader, Gen. Omar Hassan al Bashir.

The trip was being made ''within the framework of his majesty's continuous efforts to end the gulf crisis by peaceful means and within the Arab fold '' the radio said.

After the Amman meeting, Bashir told reporters, ''We are doing all we can to defuse the crisis and to prevent the outbreak of a devastating war. We are trying to formulate an Arab initiative for this purpose and we will continue our contacts with Arab leaders.''

Officials in Amman and at the frontier post of Rweished said the flood of foreigners pouring in Jordan was expected to continue at a rate of about 15,000 to 20,000 per day.

In the 12-hour period ending at 6 p.m. Sunday, at least 14,440 people - most of them Egyptians and Asians - had crossed into Jordan in cars and trucks, the officials said.

It was not immediately known how many of the 35,000 refugees who were reported to be in Jordan on Saturday had left Sunday aboard the ships and planes of a massive repatriation effort organized by Jordan with help from Egypt, Saudi Arabia, several Western European governments and relief organizations.

Egyptians have been heading to the Red Sea port of Aqaba to wait in makeshift camps for passage home. The border officials said some 2,500 cars carrying Egyptians were in Aqaba.

Thousands of other people, including Yemenis, Bangladeshis, Pakistanis, Thais, Indians and Filipinos, have been going to Amman, where they are being housed in vacant buildings and in camps on two trade-fair grounds, awaiting flights home. Jordan has appealed to the governments of stranded foreigners to help repatriate their citizens.

A team from the European-based group Doctors Without Borders arrived late Saturday with a planeload of medicines and tents sent by the European Economic Community for the camps of foreigners in Aqaba and Amman.

The International Red Cross has also sent food, sanitation equipment and other supplies to reception centers on the border and Jordanian citizens have been contributing donations.

Since the exodus began, more than 185,000 foreigners have flooded into Jordan. The kingdom at first was hard pressed to handle the flood and close its border from Wednesday to Friday afternoon.

With the help it has received, it says can now handle some 20,000 people per day.

King Hussein's new round of trips to promote an Arab initiative followed ventures last week to Sudan and Yemen.

After his discussion Sunday with Hussein, Bashir departed for Iraq for talks with the government of President Saddam Hussein.

Bashir stressed that he was also involved in a search for an Arab plan to prevent hostilities between Iraqi forces and military contingents deployed in the gulf area by the United States, other Western states and several Arab nations.

Bozer, whose nation has sided with the West in imposing sanctions against its powerful Arab neighbor, was quoted by Amman radio as telling Hussein that he was visiting Jordan to stress ''Turkey's keenness'' for a diplomatic solution to the crisis.

After meeting Hussein, Bozer held talks with Crown Prince Hassan, who was sworn in as regent after the king departed for Libya, the radio said.

Meanwhile, Palestine Liberation Organization sources said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat was expected to return to Amman late Sunday from Baghdad after a one-day visit for talks with Iraqi leaders.

PLO sources on Saturday said Hussein and Arafat were coordinating on seeking Arab support for a peace plan calling for a freeze in military movements and the deployment in Kuwait of a U.N. peacekeeping force as a buffer between Iraqi forces and contingents of the United States and other nations.

The sources said that under the plans, talks would be held under U.N. auspices on developing a timetable for a mutual withdrawal of all forces and the future form of government for Kuwait, whose ruling al-Sabah family was ousted in the Iraqi invasion.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Tokyo's stock market continued its rebound Monday, with the key index gaining 4 percent in light trading as investors kept a wary eye on the stalemate in the Persian Gulf.

Extending a rally that began Friday, the Tokyo market's main barometer, the Nikkei Average, shot up 976.00 yen, or 4 percent, to close the day at 25,141.76. The Nikkei reversed a long string of losses Friday with a 428.13-yen gain.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all major shares moved up 58.87 points to 1,904.59, following a 16.47-point rise Friday.

But trading was light at an estimated 330 million shares, and this led some brokers to worry that the rally might not be sustainable.

On Friday, 546.12 million shares changed hands.

Bargain-hunters bought selectively in all sectors, brokers said, investing mainly in blue-chip and large-capital issues.

''The absence of bad news over the weekend brought some new money into the market,'' said broker Brian Tobin of S.G. Warburg Securities. ''But I think the volume figures tell the story - most investors are not convinced.''

Brokers said investor confidence was boosted by a perceived drop-off in futures arbitrage in the spot market.

Financial authorities were said to be pressuring arbitrageurs to reduce their role in the market. The practice of trading simultaneously in the spot and futures markets has been blamed for huge dips in the Nikkei in recent weeks, when trading volume has been low.

Monday's big gains flew in the face of rising interest rates - the stock market's main bugaboo this year.

The overnight rate in Tokyo was up more than 0.15 percentage points Monday to 7.59 percent.

Uncertainty about when and where interest rates will peak is likely to hurt the market again during the week, brokers said.

One broker pointed out that the type of stock favored during Monday's rally had high liquidity, leading him to expect profit-taking ahead.

''You can get out as fast as you got in,'' he said.

The U.S. dollar weakened against the Japanese yen in Tokyo amid prospects of higher interest rates in Japan and a slowdown in the U.S. economy behind tensions in the Middle East.

The dollar closed at 144.80 yen, down .90 yen from Friday's closing rate of 145.70 yen, the Bank of Japan said.

Dealers said the lack of major developments in the gulf region during the weekend encouraged the market to focus on the poor performance of the U.S. economy and prospects of higher interest rates in Japan.

Long-term credit banks reported Friday they plan to raise the long-term prime rate by 0.6 points to 8.5 percent next month.

The dealers said the decision by the banks reminded the market of what a good return the yen promised.

The rally of the Nikkei Average on the stock exchange also helped to restore the market's confidence, they said.

In Australia, bank shares led prices higher on the Sydney Stock Exchange Monday as traders reacted to the weekend upturn in world markets.

Wall Street's 50-point rebound on Friday gave heart to investors in Sydney after the Middle-East-driven selloff of the past three weeks.

The Hong Kong market was closed Monday for a holiday.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait:

Fifty-two dependents of U.S. Embassy workers arrived Monday in Turkey in good condition and looking ''very, very happy,'' but Iraqi border guards detained three young men at the border. The group, which had left the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait for Baghad, gained permission from Iraq to leave the country. Iraq meanwhile rounded up foreigners from Britain, France and Japan and turned off power in several embassies.

TOKYO - Stocks rebounded in Tokyo Monday with the Nikkei Average gaining 4 percent, but light trading kept investors away and led to speculation the rally might not be sustainable. In Australia, bank shares led prices higher on the Sydney Stock Exchange Monday as traders reacted to the weekend upturn in world markets. Wall Street's 50-point rebound on Friday gave heart to investors in Sydney after the Middle East-driven selloff of the past three weeks.

Diplomatic efforts to end the crisis proliferated as U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar planned to meet with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Amman, Jordan, to try to solve ''in all its aspects the critical situation in Iraq and Kuwait.'' Egypt's foreign minister was heading to Moscow and King Hussein of Jordan to Libya, but British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's prognosis was that a negotiated settlement was ''most unlikely.''

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia - U.S. military leaders said Sunday one of their largest logistical operations since World War II was proceeding on schedule as ships bearing hundreds of M-1 Abrams tanks neared Saudi Arabia. The tanks, named for a U.S. commander in Vietnam, will be the crucial backbone of the U.S. ground force now assembling to confront Iraq.

VIENNA - Iraq and Libya skipped the start of emergency OPEC talks held to consider ways to offset losses in crude oil production and restore balance to global markets that have been jolted by the Persian Gulf crisis. Representatives of the 11 other cartel members held private, informal ''consultations'' into early Monday amid predictions they would convene a formal conference at which temporary increases in oil output quotas could be approved.

LONDON - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher reacted angrily to a televised meeting between Saddam and his hostages. ''You are dealing with a dictator who is an absolute tyrant, who had a callous charade on television with children,'' Thatcher said. ''We know full well that he hasn't hesitated to use the chemical weapon against innocent people. This man is a despot and a tyrant and must be stopped.''

(AUF. 27) UPI - Powerful storms endangered mariners along the Gulf Coast Monday and thick fog blinded drivers in the Middle Atlantic states as steaming temperatures greeted returning school children in the South.

A late summer heat wave gripped north Texas and Arkansas, pushing the thermometer over 100 degrees and leading the National Weather Service to post heat advisories.

In Texas, dangerous heat covered Waco, Paris, Dallas-Fort Worth and other cities and no breaks were expected through the middle of the week.

Forecasters warned parents of students returning to school Monday that children are usually among the first to suffer from hot weather.

The heat wave also hit Arkansas, where afternoon temperatures near 105 were predicted for parts of the southwest section of the state through Tuesday.

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rains Monday in the mouth of Vermillion Bay and in the Gulf of Mexico waters south of Vermillion and Atchafalaya bays in central southern Louisiana, about 30 miles south of Lafayette.

Dangerous lightning flashed across the bays as forecasters warned of possible waterspouts. Small craft were advised to seek safe harbor.

Isolated showers and thunderstorms stretched across the coastal waters of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Heavy fog cut visibility to near zero in parts of Kentucky, West Virginia and Wisconsin, but burned off as the day heated up.

In the West, rain fell in California over the northwest region, northern mountains and the northern end of the Sacramento Valley Sunday. Considerable clouds covered the state from the San Francisco Bay area to Lake Tahoe northward, while sunny skies prevailed over central and Southern California.

The unusually early storm system continued to develop well off the southern Oregon and Northern California coasts, while sending clouds and rain inland over the Northern California and southwest Oregon. The storm system was expected to remain offshore through the end of the week, sending clouds and scattered showers mainly over northwest California and the state's northern mountains.

Overall, it was slightly warmer in California, in part because of balmy southern winds ahead of the offshore system.

LONDON (AUG. 27) UPI - The dollar opened mostly lower against the major European currencies Monday on worries about the U.S. economy and the Middle East conflict.

Dealers said the absence of major developments in the Persian Gulf over the weekend left markets focusing on the apparent weakness of the U.S. economy.

The dollar moved down in Frankfurt at 1.5405 from Friday's close of 1.5500 but was slightly higher in Zurich at 1.2655 Swiss francs from 1.2635.

London markets were closed Monday for a one day Bank Holiday.

The dollar slipped lower in Paris, Brussels and Milan, at 5.1690 francs vs. 5.2180, 31.6450 Belgian francs vs. 31.8950, and 1147.25 Italian lire vs. 1159.15.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar weakened against the Japanese yen amid prospects of higher interest rates in Japan and a slowdown in the U.S. economy behind tension in the Middle East.

Dealers said they moved in to buy yen after long-term credit banks reported Friday they plan to raise the long-term prime rate by 0.6 points to 8.5 percent next month. The decision reminded the market of what a good return the yen promised, dealers said.

The dollar closed at 144.80 yen from 145.70 yen Friday.

The U.S. unit closed marginally lower in Singapore at 1.7755 Singapore dollars vs. 1.7765.

Markets in Hong Kong were closed for the Liberation Day holiday.

Gold opened lower in Zurich at $407.50 an ounce from $411 Friday.

Silver moved lower in Zurich at $5.10 an ounce from $5.15.

CHICAGO (AUG. 27) UPI - Police searching the building housing television station WLS cornered an armed robbery suspect in a closet early Monday, two days after the man took refuge in the building and disrupted the station's broadcast schedule.

John Fidel Kane, 28, was found hiding in a seventh floor closet about 1:30 a.m., Police Lt. Frank Kehoe said. He said Kane surrendered without a struggle and police found a gun and some money with him.

Kane and his brother, James Kane, 31, allegedly robbed a pizzeria of about $6,200 Saturday morning and fled the scene in a car, said Police Capt. Robert Sheehan.

The car was pulled over by an officer a short time later and James Kane was taken into custody but John ran and headed for the building where WLS is located, apparently slipping in through an opened garage door, Sheehan said.

Police could not find Kane after three searches of the building were conducted Saturday and early Sunday and they concluded he had escaped. But late Sunday, a resident of an apartment across the street from the station spotted a man believed to be the suspect trying to break out of the tenth floor window of the 13-floor building, said Paul Meincke, an employee with the station.

Police sealed the building and the search went into Monday morning, but the station continued with its regular broadcasts including the 10 p.m. news from its third-floor studio and broke into programming through the night for updates on the search.

Meincke said wire mesh on the window probably kept the man from breaking out of the building. The building was originally evacuated around 11 a.m. Saturday and police searched for an hour but found nothing, Kehoe said.

Later Saturday, station employees reported seeing the suspect, so police were called in for a second search in late evening, Kehoe said. Police did not find anyone in that search either but station general manager Joe Ahern asked for a third search around 11:10 p.m. and accompanied police as they looked through the building.

Ahern said that search ended around 1:30 a.m. Sunday and he was convinced the man had left the building. "I personally went on the search with the master keys," Ahern said. "We have gone through every cubbyhole. He had to have gotten out."

The second search and evacuation forced the station off the air just before the 10 p.m. newscast. A makeshift studio was set up at the Sears Tower, where the WLS transmitter is located. The station went back on the air at about 10:30 p.m. for intermittent reports on the situation but then went off the air for the night.

BEIJING (AUG. 27) UPI - China has evacuated its embassy in Kuwait and sent its diplomats to Baghdad, apparently capitulating to an Iraqi demand that all foreign missions in the occupied emirate be closed, an Iraqi diplomat said Monday.

The Iraqi diplomat, who spoke on the condition his name not be disclosed, said he could not confirm Middle Eastern news reports that the invading Iraqi army had actually entered the Chinese Embassy.

''My information is that the Chinese Embassy has been evacuated,'' the diplomat said. ''China's embassy in Kuwait is now empty and the diplomats have all gone to Baghdad.''

The reported evacuation indicates a crack in China's newfound resolve to align itself with the Western-led embargo of Iraq in reprisal for its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait during an oil and border dispute.

The Chinese action echoed similar moves by the Soviet Union, which last week pulled out the last of its diplomatic personnel from Kuwait even while the Kremlin pledged to abide by the embargo.

China fashions itself a leader of the Third World rather than a peer of what it calls the ''big powers.''

But as recently as last Friday, China issued a statement asserting its right to maintain an embassy in Kuwait, saying it continued to recognize the exiled Kuwaiti regime as the oil-rich emirate's legitimate government.

''China and Kuwait maintain diplomatic relations and China is entitled to keep its embassy in Kuwait according to international practice,'' the statement said.

Over the weekend, China's U.N. Security Council representative surprised observers by voting in favor of a U.S.-sponsored resolution authorizing military enforcement of the embargo of Iraq.

Beijing's ambassador to the United Nations nevertheless qualified China's position after the vote, saying it did not recognize that the resolution actually authorized the use of force.

By evacuating its Kuwait Embassy, China apparently capitulated to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's demand that all countries close their diplomatic missions in recognition of Iraq's sovereignty over the conquered territory.

The timing of the evacuation was not known nor could sources say how many Chinese remained in the embassy in recent days.

A Kuwaiti diplomat in Beijing said two reporters for China's official Xinhua news agency had taken refuge in the mission after their downtown offices were damaged in the Iraqi invasion.

Beijing last week began a full-scale evacuation of 5,000 Chinese nationals who had been working or studying in Kuwait and an equal number in Iraq, suggesting the Chinese government was cautiously aligning itself with Western-led efforts to isolate Iraq.

The leadership also denounced the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, demanded Baghdad's troops pull out, and said it was stopping China's lucrative sales of weapons to Saddam's million-strong army in keeping with the U.N.-ordered embargo.

But at the same time, China's official press and propaganda organs have taken pains to say nothing that could antagonize Saddam, whose government has had close relations with Beijing.

Chinese Premier Li Peng, in a meeting Monday with Tanzanian former president Julius Nyerere, restated China's opposition to ''military involvement by the big powers,'' saying the gulf crisis should be solved by the gulf nations themselves.

Li also said China fears the rise of what he vaguely described as a ''new form of hegemonism'' that was causing a widening of an economic rift between north and south.

SIDON, Lebanon (AUG. 27) UPI - A car bomb exploded Monday in a Moslem Shiite village in southern Lebanon, killing six people, police said.

They said the bomb in a Japanese-made car went off in the village of Houmine, 11 miles east of the port city of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut.

Six people in the car were killed, police said, revising an earlier casualty count.

Houmine is patrolled by the pro-Syrian Amal movement which has been locked in bloody, 3 1/2-year struggle with the Iranian-backed Hezbollah for the control of Lebanon's Shiite community.

Sources in the south said the dead were members of the Amal movement, clad in civilian clothes rather than military fatigues. The car exploded while they were driving on a military route in the village of Houmine.

The Amal command in the south accused Hezbollah and Iran for ''this massacre that targeted innocent civilians.''

This was the eighth car bomb explosion in Lebanon this year. Last July, eight people were killed and 22 others were wounded when a fuel tank blew up in the town of Chtaura, 22 miles east of Beirut.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Although the antagonists in the Persian Gulf crisis have not come to blows since the invasion of Kuwait, they have triggered economic shocks around the world, analysts say.

Jordan, India and Ireland already are feeling the economic impact of the crisis, and other nations expect to within weeks.

The United Nations imposed an economic embargo against Iraq and Kuwait shortly after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of the tiny oil-rich emirate, a punitive measure that has deeply affected the two countries' major trading partners.

Jordan especially has felt the crunch. Iraq had been the kingdom's major trading partner and the embargo has effectively put a stop to the most crucial activities in the key Jordanian Red Sea port of Aqaba, which used to be a main transit point of Iraqi imports and exports.

Jordan could lose $3.5 billion in the next year, an amount equivalent to the country's gross national product, says Dr. Jawad Anani, a senior government economist.

''The cost to Jordan is going to be horrendous,'' Anani said. Some analysts say the economy could completely collapse.

Jordan receives 80 percent of its oil from Iraq, and many Jordanians who were employed in trucking oil supplies from Iraq and moving other goods to the besieged country are now out of work, Anani said.

The U.N. Security Council has developed a special plan to compensate Jordan for the economic hardships it is suffering, but Anani said the kingdom will probably have to renegotiate an already harsh economic recovery plan with the International Monetary Fund.

India, which gets about 40 percent of its crude oil from Iraq and Kuwait, has only a 35-day oil reserve and is being forced to shop for fresh supplies on the spot oil market with a budget that is nowhere near adequate.

Petroleum Minister S. Gurupadaswamy says the impact of the gulf crisis on India will be enormous because all sectors of the nation's economy are dependent on oil.

The crisis has cost the Irish beef industry, Europe's largest exporter of beef to the Middle East, about $76.5 million in trade with Iraq so far. Sales to Iraq, Iran and Libya account for one-third of the industry's market.

Panic buying on the Dublin stock exchange as a result of the gulf crisis last week wiped more than $680 million off the value of the market.

And Iraq still owes Ireland $102 million for beef shipped before the embargo, officials say.

Pakistan is likely to be severely affected by the Iraq embargo because 70 percent of its oil comes from Kuwait. But at this point analysts expect the government, which has a two-month oil reserve, to delay taking actions that could immediately pinch the public until after Oct. 24 elections.

''We will be facing a lot of economic dislocation,'' said M. Ziauddin, a senior Pakistani journalist.

The Soviet Union also expects losses. About 9 percent, or $2.04 billion, of the nation's foreign trade is with Iraq, most of it military supplies and oil.

But Moscow will forgo this trade to support the U.N. economic sanctions.

''Sure. We are going to suffer. But it is not correct to count up those losses right now,'' said Igor Mordvinov, head of the Directorate for Foreign Economic Policy in the Ministry for Foreign Economic Relations.

An Australian foreign ministry spokesman said Australia had almost $1 billion in trade at risk as a result of the sanctions.

''Iraq owes us $480 million for wheat already delivered on credit and another $320 million sales were projected for the coming year,'' the spokesman said.

''Iraq is one of our biggest customers in wheat and this will be difficult to replace,'' he said.

Japan, heavily dependent on imported oil and still reliant on Iraq and Kuwait for 11.7 percent of imports, might have been seriously affected by such a gulf crisis several years ago. It was, in fact, brought to its knees by oil shocks in the 1970s.

But a program of energy diversification and improved manufacturing efficiency has taken a great deal of sting out of the crisis. Japan is now dependent on oil for just 57 percent of its energy needs, compared with 77 percent in 1977.

The main effect on Japan's economy is expected to be increased inflation. The stock market has fallen 25 percent since the crisis broke, and interest rates are headed up. But analysts say the gulf conflict will only chip a fraction of a percent off of Japan's GNP growth.

In the United States, some analysts are expecting a recession that will be made worse by the public's postponing of car and home purchases as a result of economic uncertainty fueled by the crisis. Interest rates are already headed up in the United States, and in Europe as well, they said.

NAIROBI, KENYA (AUG. 27) UPI - Foreign ministers of six east African nations met in the Kenyan capital Monday for exploratory talks on finding ways to stop the region's many civil wars end cross-border rivalries, and forge closer economic links, Kenyan foreign ministry officials said.

Represented were ministers from Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan and Uganda - the six members of the Intergovernmental Authority on Drought and Development, originally conceived as a famine-fighting body in 1985. Of the six, only Kenya and Djibouti are not currently fighting internal wars.

Ethiopia has battled its Eritrean secessionists for nearly 30 years and its Tigrayan hardline Marxists for 13. Sudan has fought a war of mass bloodshed and starvation against southern rebels since 1983. Somalia's civil war has been an on-and-off affair since 1977. And Uganda has suffered insurrections more or less constantly since 1972, the early days of deposed dictator Idi Amin.

Between them, the region's wars - directly or through famine - are thought to have killed at least two million people in the past decade.

The IGADD countries agreed at a first meeting in July to act more closely together, politically and economically, and seek an end to funding of eath other's rebel groups.

Uganda and Sudan have consistently accused each other of harboring cross-border rebels, but earlier this year signed a non-agression pact calling for rebel repatriation.

Sudan has also in the past hinted it believed Kenya was funding the predominantly Christian, black African Sudanese People's Liberation Army.

Somalia and Ethiopia, who fought the Ogaden war in 1977-78, have maintained an uneasy rivalry ever since, but pledged over the weekend to work for closer cooperation.

Even the tiny city-state of Djibouti has in recent months been accused of supporting rebels in northern Somalia.

Opening the meeting, Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi said regional development was impossible without peace.

''All of us should take deliberate steipt to prevent inter-state or internal conflicts which lead to wanton loss of life and the slowing down of the pace of development,'' he said.

''It is within a climate of peace in all our member states that we shall be able to strengthen regional trade, thus paving the way for stronger economic integration,'' Moi added.

Kenyan foreign minister Wilson Ndolo Ayah said last month the talks should be viewed as exploratory. Their purpose, he said, was not to confront civil wars head on, but find areas in which the six countries could cooperate to achieve peace.

HOUSTON (AUG. 27) UPI - The domestic rig count rebounded strongly last week, but poor offshore rig usage in the Gulf of Mexico may prompt companies to move their equipment to more productive areas, industry monitors reported.

A total of 1,002 rotary rigs were working in the United States last week, compared with 987 the previous week and 909 the same week a year ago, Baker Hughes Inc. reported Sunday.

The Gulf of Mexico rig count dropped by one last week, Offshore Data

Services reported. A total of 147 offshore rigs were working in the gulf out of a fleet of 212, for a utilization rate of 69.3 percent.

''Continued lackluster utilization in the area has prompted several drilling contractors to announce their intentions to move a number of rigs out of the gulf later this year and in early 1991,'' ODS said.

Worldwide, 553 of 669 offshore rigs were under contract, for a utilization rate of 82.7 percent.

In European waters, 129 of 136 rigs were working, the same as a week before, for a utilization rate of 94.9 percent.

Other relevant rig counts include Louisiana, 151 last week, 152 the week before and 143 the same week a year ago; New Mexico, 43, 33 and 31; Oklahoma, 126, 120 and 117; Texas, 336, 327 and 265; and Canada, 118, 114 and 100.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Although the antagonists in the Persian Gulf crisis have not come to blows since the invasion of Kuwait, they have triggered economic shocks around the world, analysts say.

Jordan, India and Ireland already are feeling the economic impact of the crisis, and other nations expect to within weeks.

The United Nations imposed an economic embargo against Iraq and Kuwait shortly after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of the tiny oil-rich emirate, a punitive measure that has deeply affected the two countries' major trading partners.

Jordan especially has felt the crunch. Iraq had been the kingdom's major trading partner and the embargo has effectively put a stop to the most crucial activities in the key Jordanian Red Sea port of Aqaba, which used to be a main transit point of Iraqi imports and exports.

Jordan could lose $3.5 billion in the next year, an amount equivalent to the country's gross national product, says Dr. Jawad Anani, a senior government economist.

''The cost to Jordan is going to be horrendous,'' Anani said. Some analysts say the economy could completely collapse.

Jordan receives 80 percent of its oil from Iraq, and many Jordanians who were employed in trucking oil supplies from Iraq and moving other goods to the besieged country are now out of work, Anani said.

The U.N. Security Council has developed a special plan to compensate Jordan for the economic hardships it is suffering, but Anani said the kingdom will probably have to renegotiate an already harsh economic recovery plan with the International Monetary Fund.

India, which gets about 40 percent of its crude oil from Iraq and Kuwait, has only a 35-day oil reserve and is being forced to shop for fresh supplies on the spot oil market with a budget that is nowhere near adequate.

Petroleum Minister S. Gurupadaswamy says the impact of the gulf crisis on India will be enormous because all sectors of the nation's economy are dependent on oil.

The crisis has cost the Irish beef industry, Europe's largest exporter of beef to the Middle East, about $76.5 million in trade with Iraq so far. Sales to Iraq, Iran and Libya account for one-third of the industry's market.

Panic buying on the Dublin stock exchange as a result of the gulf crisis last week wiped more than $680 million off the value of the market.

And Iraq still owes Ireland $102 million for beef shipped before the embargo, officials say.

Pakistan is likely to be severely affected by the Iraq embargo because 70 percent of its oil comes from Kuwait. But at this point analysts expect the government, which has a two-month oil reserve, to delay taking actions that could immediately pinch the public until after Oct. 24 elections.

''We will be facing a lot of economic dislocation,'' said M. Ziauddin, a senior Pakistani journalist.

The Soviet Union also expects losses. About 9 percent, or $2.04 billion, of the nation's foreign trade is with Iraq, most of it military supplies and oil.

But Moscow will forgo this trade to support the U.N. economic sanctions.

''Sure. We are going to suffer. But it is not correct to count up those losses right now,'' said Igor Mordvinov, head of the Directorate for Foreign Economic Policy in the Ministry for Foreign Economic Relations.

An Australian foreign ministry spokesman said Australia had almost $1 billion in trade at risk as a result of the sanctions.

''Iraq owes us $480 million for wheat already delivered on credit and another $320 million sales were projected for the coming year,'' the spokesman said.

''Iraq is one of our biggest customers in wheat and this will be difficult to replace,'' he said.

Japan, heavily dependent on imported oil and still reliant on Iraq and Kuwait for 11.7 percent of imports, might have been seriously affected by such a gulf crisis several years ago. It was, in fact, brought to its knees by oil shocks in the 1970s.

But a program of energy diversification and improved manufacturing efficiency has taken a great deal of sting out of the crisis. Japan is now dependent on oil for just 57 percent of its energy needs, compared with 77 percent in 1977.

The main effect on Japan's economy is expected to be increased inflation. The stock market has fallen 25 percent since the crisis broke, and interest rates are headed up. But analysts say the gulf conflict will only chip a fraction of a percent off of Japan's GNP growth.

In the United States, some analysts are expecting a recession that will be made worse by the public's postponing of car and home purchases as a result of economic uncertainty fueled by the crisis. Interest rates are already headed up in the United States, and in Europe as well, they said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Personal income increased 0.6 percent in July, while consumption slowed to 0.5 percent and the personal savings rate remained unchanged at 4.9 percent, the Commerce Department said Monday.

Disposable personal income advanced 0.5 percent vs. 0.6 percent in June, and a barometer of inflation tied to personal income gained 0.3 percent, according to the data compiled by the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

The Commerce Department said last month's $26.3 billion increase pushed the nation's total personal income to $4.67 trillion at an annual rate and adjusted for seasonal factors.

The 0.6 percent increase in personal income last month was also the best showing since a 0.7 percent gain in March and follows a 0.5 advance in June, a government spokesman said.

The figure was generally in line with economists' predictions.

July's 0.5 increase in personal consumption, meanwhile, follows a 1 percent jump in June and was attributed to slower spending on cars, food and clothing, the spokesman said.

''Wages and salaries increased $16.2 billion in July, compared with an increase of $15.9 billion in June,'' the Commerce Department said.

The services sector of the U.S. economy recorded a July increase in wages and salaries that was bigger than a June increase. But July advances in wages and salaries for the manufacturing, commodity producing and government sectors were smaller than in June, the report said.

''Farm proprietors' income decreased (by $100 million) in July, compared with a decrease of $5.6 billion in June,'' the Commerce Department said. ''Federal subsidy payments to farm proprietors decreased ($800 million) in July, compared with a decrease of $4.2 billion in June.''

(AUG. 27) UPI - Lebanese police now report six people died in a car-bomb explosion in a Shiite Moslem village in southern Lebanon. Authorities say a bomb was hidden in a car driven in a village 11 miles east of the port city of Sidon, some 24 miles south of Beirut. The pro-Syrian Amal movement has been locked in a three-year struggle with the Iranian backed Hezbollah for control of Lebanon's Shiite community.

Oil analysts say the Persian Gulf crisis triggered economic shocks around the world... with India, Ireland and Jordan already feeling the impact. Jordan has been hard-hit because Iraq is the kingdom's major trading partner, getting 80 percent of its oil from Baghdad. India gets 40 percent of its crude oil from Iraq. The Irish beef industry, Europe's largest exporter of beef to the Middle East, has lost about 76-Million dollars in trade with Iraq.

An oil industry analyst says retail gasoline prices rose an average of five cents a gallon during the past two weeks. Analyst Trilby Lundberg says the rate of increase in the last two weeks was half that of the period after Iraq invaded Kuwait. The Lundberg Survey of 13-thousand gas stations nationwide shows the average price was about one-dollar 33 cents a gallon, up five cents from the last survey done August 10th.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Fierce storms endangered mariners along the Gulf Coast Monday and thick fog blinded drivers in the Middle Atlantic states as steaming temperatures baked much of the South, the East and Midwest.

A late summer heat wave gripped north Texas and Arkansas, pushing the thermometer over 100 degrees and leading the National Weather Service to post heat advisories.

In Texas, dangerous heat covered Waco, Paris, Dallas-Fort Worth and other cities and no breaks were expected through the middle of the week.

Forecasters warned parents of students returning to school Monday that children are usually among the first to suffer from hot weather.

After almost a week of lashing rain and wind and temperatures that dipped into the 60s, vacationers in the the New York area were back on the beaches Monday enjoying some traditional August weather - hazy, hot and humid with temperatures forecast heading for the high 80s and low 90s.

Salina, Kan., was the nation's warmest spot Sunday, checking in at 106 degrees. Wichita, Kan., set a record for the date with a 105 reading, breaking the old mark of 104 established in 1943.

Weather officials said the central section of Kansas can expect extreme hot temperatures later Monday.

The heat wave also hit Arkansas, where afternoon temperatures near 105 were predicted for parts of the southwest section of the state through Tuesday.

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rains Monday in the mouth of Vermillion Bay and in the Gulf of Mexico waters south of Vermillion and Atchafalaya bays in central southern Louisiana, about 30 miles south of Lafayette.

Dangerous lightning flashed across the bays as forecasters warned of possible waterspouts. Small craft were advised to seek safe harbor.

Isolated showers and thunderstorms stretched across the coastal waters of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Heavy fog cut visibility to near zero in parts of Kentucky, West Virginia and Wisconsin, but burned off as the day heated up.

In the West, rain fell in California over the northwest region, northern mountains and the northern end of the Sacramento Valley Sunday. Considerable clouds covered the state from the San Francisco Bay area to Lake Tahoe northward, while sunny skies prevailed over central and Southern California.

The unusually early storm system continued to develop well off the southern Oregon and Northern California coasts, while sending clouds and rain inland over the Northern California and southwest Oregon. The storm system was expected to remain offshore through the end of the week, sending clouds and scattered showers mainly over northwest California and the state's northern mountains.

Overall, it was slightly warmer in California, in part because of balmy southern winds ahead of the offshore system.

New York police say two men were killed while coming to the aid of robbery victims in separate incidents early today. Police say Victor Roman was shot to death after chasing a teen-ager who stole a watch and gold chain. In a second incident, a cab driver was killed when he tried to help a fellow driver being robbed in the Bronx.

The government reports the best showing in personal income in four months. The goverment says personal income rose six tenths of one percent in July, in line with economists' predictions. The report comes at the same time that personal consumption slowed to five-tenths of one percent and the personal savings rate was unchanged at four-point-nine percent.

Vacationers in the New York area can head back to the beach today after nearly a week of lashing rain and wind. FORT BRAGG, NC (AUG. 27) UPI - The court-martial of a Fort Bragg soldier who is charged with the murder of a Panamanian soldier began Monday amid charges the prosecution is unfair.

If convicted, Sgt. Enrico Bryan could get a life prison term. The Panama native is the first soldier since the Vietnam war to be charged with murder in combat.

''The Army knows that everybody is watching,'' said Emile A. Milne, an aide to Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., whose office has questioned the Army's motivation for pressing the case against Bryan. ''This one is not behind closed doors.''

Bryan's court-martial began against a backdrop of a full-scale deployment of troops to the Middle East and mounting questions about what lies behind the Army's decision to charge the sergeant.

Concern that Bryan was being prosecuted unfairly intensified this summer after Fort Bragg's commander decided to proceed with the case. Lt. Gen. Gary Luck's decision to recommend a charge of unpremeditated murder came after investigators concluded that the charges should be dropped.

Luck's decision was in opposition to Bryan's commanding officer, Col. Jack P. Nix, who recommended that the charges be dismissed.

Army investigators had recommended a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The trial should shed some light on the ambiguous question of when deadly force by U.S. troops is warranted. An eyewitness to the shooting is expected to take the stand to describe a fuller picture of what U.S. soldiers encountered during the first chaotic days of the invasion that ousted strongman Manuel Noriega.

The shooting took place December 23 after the beginning of the airborne assault on Panama known as Operation Just Cause.

Bryan claimed he shot the soldier after the Panamanian threw a hand grenade that wounded 10 U.S. soldiers.

The sergeant and other witnesses said Bryan fired the fatal shot as the soldier was about to use a second hand grenade.

However, Lt. Brandon Thomas said the shooting took place as Bryan dragged the Panamanian away from the area.

One of the major problems in the case is that Army officials identify the man only as ''an unidentified Panamanian.''

GAINESVILLE, FL (AUG. 27) UPI - A young woman was found slain Monday in her apartment about 2 miles from the building where two University of Florida coeds were found murdered eight hours earlier, authorities said.

An Alachua County deputy discovered the third woman lying on the floor of her apartment about 1 a.m. Monday after she failed to report to work for a midnight shift, said sheriff's spokesman Spencer Mann.

Mann would not release the woman's name or the apparent cause of death, except to say that she had suffered trauma.

There was no word on whether her death was linked to those of the two coeds whose nude bodies were found in their apartment Sunday. However, sheriff's employees said deputies were comparing information with that gathered by city police investigating those killings.

''Obviously, it's a grim day around the university campus for the first day of school today,'' said Angie Tipton, spokesman for the University Police Department.

The victims were all in their late teens or early 20s and lived within 2 miles of each other.

The coeds' bodies were found by police Sunday about 4 p.m. in their apartment about four blocks from campus. The parents of one of the victims called authorities to say they had tried repeatedly to telephone their daughter, and when no one answered, they drove there but could get no one to come to the door.

One of those victims was a freshman from Jacksonville. She was to begin her first day of classes Monday at the University of Florida. The second also was a student, believed to be from the Palm Beach area.

''It's obviously a murder, obviously foul play,'' said police Lt. Sadie Darnell.

Police were withholding the names of both victims until they could identify the second woman, said Darnell. Autopsies were scheduled Monday.

Darnell said the students died either Friday or Saturday.

Jennifer Hayck, who lives across the street at the same apartment complex where the coeds were found, said she saw one or two people coming from the victims' apartment about 5:45 a.m. Saturday, but she did not recognize them.

Polive called Art Sandeen, vice president of UF student affairs, to the coeds' apartment complex about 7 p.m. Sunday to talk to a crowd of about 100 people who had gathered.

''It's time for people to stand together. I don't think anything like this has ever happened before,'' he said.

He called the killings a tragedy and said university officials were to meet Monday morning to discuss them.

University officials alerted students living in UF dormitories and sororities about the homicides, and university police doubled the number of people assigned to escort students home after dark.

''We have increased patrols for students on campus. We're maintaining a very high profile, both in uniform and plain clothes,'' Tipton said.

Tipton said because authorities were not releasing the names of the victims, university offices were being flooded by calls from frightened parents.

''We have concerned students and concerned faculty and staff and a lot of concerned paeents, and we want to make sure that they understand that this situation is not out of control. ... We're not sure what we have here, but (we want) to reassure students to have good common sense standards,'' Tipton said.

TOKYO (AUG. 27) UPI - Sources close to the Japanese struggle to find a role for itself in the Middle East crisis said Monday a breakthrough was near and one senior figure said it could come ''in a matter of hours, or at most, days.''

The chances of an active role for Japan increased when a powerful senior politician, Shin Kanemaru, said publicly Monday that failure to do more than contribute money would have negative consequences for the nation.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu has been trying to gain consensus within his party and government on sending personnel to the Middle East for more than two weeks. The Foreign Ministry was anxious for what the sources called an ''unprecendented'' show of Japanese responsibility in the international community.

Ministry officials, aware of mounting criticism abroad over Japan's inaction, had hinted they would be able to unveil some measures before the return of Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama from a Middle East tour.

But Nakayama returned Saturday and nothing was announced.

Kaifu met Sunday with Ichiro Ozawa, a key figure in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, but was still unable to do more than announce he wants to wrap up the process by midweek.

Conservative, isolationist elements within the party and nearly every ministry have dragged their feet, analysts said.

''There are tremendous domestic political constraints,'' said political scientist Seizaburo Sato, an adviser to former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. ''But I believe the Japanese government will make a breakthrough in a matter of hours, or at most, days.''

Sato recalled that Nakasone, whose power-base was far greater than Kaifu's was unable to win support in 1987 for sending a minesweeper to the Persian Gulf at the time of an international effort to protect shipping there during the Iran-Iraq war.

''This is a golden opportunity for Japan to change its policy,'' Sato said adding he believes the government will send medical personnel, logistical support and desalinization equipment to supply fresh water to the U.S.-led multinational forces confronting Iraq.

But James C. Abegglen, an experienced consultant on Japan, said that while Kanemaru's support will help Kaifu, the government may be forced to seek new legislation to gain the authority and funding for those kind of actions.

''People don't realize how little power the prime minister has. His discretionary budget is miniscule. It is petty cash,'' Abegglen said.

Going to Parliament would mean a battling the Japan Socialist Party, which has already declared its opposition to sending personnel overseas.

Japan's long-standing reluctance to engage in active foreign policy stems largely from horror of its militaristic adventurism earlier in this century, which ended in Japan's defeat in World War II.

The nation's postwar constitution, drafted by the United States, renounces the right to use force in settling international disputes.

Additionally, Japanese have long felt that crises such as the current one are somebody else's problem - unless Japanese lives are at stake.

Iraq's transfer of 20 Japanese men from a Baghdad hotel where they were being held to an unknown location Saturday has complicated the government's task of reaching consensus on sending personnel, analysts said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Sales of existing homes were up 3.3 in July for the second straight monthly increase on a steady decline in mortgage rates, the National Association of Realtors said Monday.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Co. - Freddie Mac - reported the average rate on a 30-year conventional fixed rate mortgage slipped to 9.98 percent from 10.06 percent last month.

But the median price for an existing home in the United States inched up by 0.9 percent in July to $98,400, according to a survey by the trade group representing 800,000 members of the real estate industry. July sales calculated at an annual rate, stood at 3.44 million homes.

Although the two consecutive monthly increases in resales appeared to signal renewed strength in the housing economy, realtors president Norman Flynn warned the volatile situation in the Middle East is causing problems. "Iraq's craziness will be felt in U.S. housing markets," Flynn said.

But John Tuccillo, chief economist for the association, said a benefit of the latest Persian Gulf crisis is that the housing market in Texas and other parts of the Southwest will strengthen as oil prices surge. "Rising oil prices will push up real estate values in those areas," Tuccillo predicted.

By region, sales of existing homes:

- Jumped 14.3 percent in the economically depressed Northeast, where the median prices dipped to $143,300 from June;
- Increased 6.9 percent in the South, in part to the oil-related activity in the Southwest. The median price rose to $88,900;
- Plunged 10.3 percent in the West on weaker activity in coastal housing markets in California. The median price increased to $141,500;
- Slid to 3.1 percent in the Midwest, but nonetheless, continued to show signs of strength. The median price edged up to $76,300.

Looking ahead, the National Association of Realtors said it is not forecasting a long-term increase in rates and expects another spurt in resale activity in the final months of the year.

(AUG. 27) UPI - The small Persian Gulf state of Qatar today became the fifth Arab state to turn against fellow Arab nation Iraq. Qatar announced that it will permit the deployment of foreign forces on its soil in a bid to solve the gulf crisis. The announcement came as Iraq's ambassador was summoned to the State Department. A source says the topic of discussion was- quote- ''restrictions to be placed on the Iraqi embassy in the United States'' in retaliation for Iraq's decision to keep three young male dependents of U-S diplomats from leaving Baghdad.

In Tokyo, sources say Japan is on the verge of a breakthrough it its effort to find an active role for itself in the Middle East crisis. One senior Japanese figure says it could come ''in a matter of hours, or at most, days.'' The possibility increased today when a powerful senior politician said publicly that failure to do more than contribute money would have negative consequences for Japan.

Blues guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan was killed in a helicopter crash this morning near East Troy, Wisconsin, southwest of Milwaukee. The chopper carrying Vaughan, Eric Clapton's booking agent, two members of Clapton's crew and the pilot went down following a concert at Alpine Valley Music Theater. Officials say all aboard were killed. A spokesman for Vaughan in New York City says authorities believe the helicopter hit a man-made ski hill.

Two citizen's groups want a Pennsylvania coroner to re-open an investigation into the death of political activist Abbie Hoffman for signs that he was driven to suicide by a controversial drug. The groups say Hoffman took the anti-depressant drug Prozac six weeks before he died April 12th 1989. The groups cite a Harvard study that found three percent of Prozac users developed suicidal thought that lasted up to three months after taking the drug.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 27) UPI - Palestinian families and institutions face economic hard times during the Persian Gulf crisis as the flow of money from the gulf into the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip dries up.

Arab institutions such as hospitals and schools that are heavily dependent on Kuwaiti government funding are already in dire straits.

''We have been acutely affected,'' said a spokesman for Mokassed Hospital, East Jerusalem's main Arab medical institution. ''Seventy-five percent of the budget used to come from Kuwait, something around $15 million. ... We can manage for just the coming two months.''

Israeli security sources predicted Monday that Palestinian families will begin to feel the loss of income from the gulf in a month or two. Their family members working in Iraq and especially in Kuwait will not be sending home their usual income and families in the gulf territories will wear through theirsavings.

''There will be a strong effect on the flow of funds from the gulf, but at the moment it is not being felt,'' said one security official. ''Money is still coming in from Jordan, and people still have money in their pockets from last month's salary.''

Before Iraqi tanks rolled into the oil-rich Kuwait Aug. 2, Palestinians living in the territories received about $125 million annually from family members working in gulf countries. As many as 400,000 of the 750,000 Palestinians employed in the gulf worked in Kuwait.

With a U.N. economic embargo, the flow of money into the West Bank and Gaza Strip is expected to drop significantly. An estimated 20,000 skilled Arabs suddenly unemployed as a result of the gulf crisis are expected to return home, Israeli security sources said Monday.

Despite the prospect of economic hardship, many Palestinians remain stubborn supporters of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who enjoys wide popularity as a strong Arab leader.

''We will not be influenced if the money is no longer coming,'' said Jalil Salah, 65, of Gaza City, whose two sons employed in Kuwait have stopped sending money home. ''We can eat salt and black bread, and all the world's wealth will not stop us from supporting Saddam Hussein because he wants to distribute the (oil) money to all the Arabs.''

Salah's son Ahmed, 35, worked in a Kuwaiti bank while another son, Kamal, 37, is the director of a construction company in Kuwait.

''My sons have worked there since 1980. Within 10 years we succeeded in building a new house and improving our living conditions,'' he said. ''Their support was high. They used to send me $7,000 each half a year. But now this amount has stopped coming.''

In order to replace lost funding, Arab hospital officials have begun approaching Western nations and plan to send a delegation to Saudi Arabia, a Mokassed Hospital spokesman said.

Another institution severely affected is the Abu Dis College of Science just outside Jerusalem in the West Bank. The college is almost entirely dependent on money from Kuwait. Last week, college officials decided to sell bank shares owned by the school in order to pay faculty during the fall term.

Many other charitable and educational Palestinian institutions also will have to make do with less. No longer can officials travel to Kuwait, seeking funding for special projects, such as a new classroom or roof.

Many Palestinians whose savings were in Kuwaiti dinars have had their nest eggs almost halved by the Iraqi devaluation of the currency. The Jordanian dinar, held by many Palestinians, also has slipped in value in the occupied territories because of the unstable situation.

Another check on the Palestinian economy will be Israeli restrictions on Palestinian exports to Jordan that might make their way to Iraq.

Nevertheless, Palestinians have become used to living on less during the Palestinian intifada or uprising. Before the intifada began in December 1987, $400 million arrived annually from family members the gulf. But the Israeli army has succeeded in sharply reducing that amount as part of its campaign to suppress the uprising.

Khalil Rekhawi, 68, whose son Salem sent home $2,000 every six months from his engineer's salary, was confident he could weather further deprivations.

''The money is not essential. We are used to economizing because of the intifada,'' he said as he sold cigarettes and candy from a roadside stand in Gaza City. ''We can live on the money we saved in the past. We will not die of starvation.''

Samir Hulaileh, a Palestinian economist at the Economic Development Group in Jerusalem, played down the economic impact and forecast political gains from the return to the West Bank of educated Arabs.

''The loss is there. We will be affected. But it won't be dramatic,'' he said. ''More and more Palestinians will be coming here. This is very positive.''

(AUG. 27) UPI - Qatar announced Monday it would permit the deployment of foreign forces on its soil, becoming the fifth Persian Gulf state siding against fellow Arab nation Iraq in a bid to solve the gulf crisis.

In Washington, Iraqi ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat was called to the State Department this morning to meet with acting Secretary Lawrence Eagleburger about Iraq's decision to stop three young male dependents of U.S. diplomats from leaving Iraq early Monday. The subject was ''restrictions to be placed on the Iraqi embassy in the United States,'' a source said.

Jordan's King Hussein meanwhile held more talks in Tripoli Monday with Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi to find a so-called Arab solution to the standoff, Amman Radio reported.

Libya opposed Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, but also joined Iran in calling for the withdrawal of U.S.-led Western forces from the gulf. Most members of the Arab League including Egypt have opposed what they said was Iraqi ''aggression.''

It was not immediately known when or what type of foreign forces would be stationed in Qatar, a small peninsula state in the gulf with Saudi Arabia as its eastern neighbor. Qatar is allied with Kuwait as part of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council, which also includes the United Arab Emirates, Oman, Bahrain and Saudi Arabia.

In other developments:

-Iraq forced Lebanese diplomats in Kuwait to go to Baghdad, but then allowed them to head home, Lebanese officials said. Lebanese Foreign Ministry sources said ambassador Adnan Badra and his diplomatic team were en route to Lebanon.

-An Iraqi diplomat in Beijing said China had evacuated its staff from Kuwait and moved them to Baghdad. The Iraqi diplomat said he could not confirm reports that invading Iraqi troops had stormed the Chinese embassy compound. There was no immediate confirmation from China's foreign ministry.

-Hungary closed its embassy in Kuwait after resisting for three days an Iraqi order to close down the mission. Hungary was among some 20 countries that refused to obey Baghdad's order to shut down their embassies.

-Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries huddled for a second day in Vienna to discuss raising oil output quotas.

-In Baghdad, a government-run Iraqi newspaper described foreign nationals being held in Iraq and Kuwait against their will were Iraq's ''second kind of weapon'' after military hardware.

Saddam has said foreigners will be held at key military and economic sites in Iraq and Kuwait to guard against attack by Western forces, which were dispatched to the gulf region after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Fifty-two U.S. Embassy dependents, in good condition and looking ''very, very happy,'' arrived Monday in Turkey after driving in a convoy of 13 cars from Baghdad. But three young male dependents, who had been with the group, were prevented by Iraqi officials from crossing the border.

The Americans - most of them wives and children of U.S. diplomats stationed in Kuwait - crossed the border into Turkey at 2 a.m. Monday, a U.S. official said. They were met by U.S. diplomats and plans were under way for the journey home.

''Their conditions were very normal,'' a Turkish Interior Ministry employee said of the Americans. ''They looked very, very happy.''

The Americans had traveled to Baghdad from Kuwait last week after Iraq ordered all foreign embassies in the occupied city to close. The United States, along with most other countries, defied the order but sent most of its personnel to Baghdad, leaving behind a skeleton staff in Kuwait.

The release of the Americans followed an appeal by King Hussein and intensive contacts between U.S. Embassy officials and the Iraqi Foreign Ministry. Iraq had said it would hold the group until the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait was completely closed - something the United States has refused to do because it would be a tacit admission that Iraq's annexation of the oil-rich emirate was successful.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar will meet Thursday with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Amman, Jordan, to try to solve ''in all its aspects the critical situation in Iraq and Kuwait,'' a U.N. spokesman said.

Diplomatic efforts to end the conflict continued with Egypt's foreign minister in Moscow.

In a message possibly signaling a stiffening resolve to round up Western foreigners, Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council announced anyone found hiding foreigners would be executed because the government considered such action, a ''crime of espionage,'' the Iraqi News Agency reported.

CHICAGO (AUG. 27) UPI - Sharp gains in the stock market and lower prices for crude oil, gold and silver pressured the grain market.

Favorable weather conditions during the weekend and forecasts for good growing weather this week also weighed on corn and soybean values. In addition, traders expected some improvement in the condition of the corn and soybean crops in the weekly surveys.

Trading was active early in the session with locals and professionals dominating the selling across the floor.

Wheat was lower in line with losses in corn and soybeans. Wheat also were pressured by the lack of export business and a large crop around the world.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AUG. 27) UPI - Kenyan police Monday arrested prominent Kenyan lawyer and magazine editor Gitobu Imanyara, a leading advocate of multi-party democracy, for the third time in two months, Imanyara's office said.

A spokeswoman for the lawyer, already charged with sedition, said Imanyara was arrested again when he went Monday morning to report routinely to the Kenyan police.

The latest charge against him is theft of a client's money in 1984, the spokeswoman said. His office was attempting to raise bail of $8,800, she added.

A longtime advocate of freedom of speech and multi-party democracy, Imanyara was first detained in early July when the government began to clamp down after a six-month period of freer political debate. At least 12 other supporters of multi-party politics were arrested with him.

Imanyara was released Jul. 25 with other lawyers, but he was immediately re-arrested and charged with publishing seditious material, the May edition of his controversial magazine, Nairobi Law Monthly.

The May edition, which advertised itself as a ''souvenir issue'' on the multi-party debate, carried on its cover a cartoon of the two-finger salute that has come to symbolize support for more than one party in Kenya. Articles in the magazine also called for the government's resignation.

The sedition trial is due to begin Sept. 14.

Kenya has been a constitutional one-party state since 1982, but in practice has had only one party, the Kenya African National Union, since 1969.

Concern at the spate of detentions in July led the United States to halve military aid to Kenya.

A banned gathering in support of a multi-party system July 7 degenerated into rioting that lasted five days and left at least 25 people dead.

SRINAGAR, India (AUG. 27) UPI - Moslem militants waging a bloody independence campaign in the Kashmir Valley assassinated a former state legislator and wounded a political leader early Monday as they walked home from a wedding party, police said.

They said three militants armed with handguns approached Nazir Ahmad Niloora and his companion, Gulshan Qadiri, about 1 a.m. near the village of Wachi, about 30 miles south of Srinagar.

The gunmen opened fire, killing Niloora, a member of the National Conference party and a former Jammu and Kashmir state legislator, and wounding Qadiri, president of the local Janata Dal party, police said.

Qadiri was listed in serious condition at a local hospital, they said.

The two men were walking home after attending a wedding party when the attack occurred, police said.

A lawyer who was acquainted with Niloora said militants had asked the former state lawmaker to resign from the National Conference and publicly announce his support for the militants' independence movement.

Niloora refused to comply and was probably killed for that reason, the lawyer said.

Kashmiris believe the National Conference party was corrupt and came to power in 1987 through rigged elections. Its government was dismissed earlier this year and the state was placed under the direct control of New Delhi.

Thousands of National Conference party workers and some former legislators have resigned from the party over the past several months and announced their support for independence for Kashmir through local newspapers.

Niloora and Qadiri are the latest victims of a bloody independence movement that has been underway in the northern Kashmir Valley, home to the region's 4 million Moslems, since mid-January when security forces opened fire on demonstrators, killing at least 35 people.

Since then, at least 700 people have been killed in near-daily assassinations, bombings and battles between security forces and militants.

The militants, who enjoy broad support from the Moslem community in Kashmir, believe that separation from India is necessary because of years of discrimination against Kashmiri Moslems by successive Hindu-dominated administrations in New Delhi.

The central government has deployed tens of thousands of soldiers and paramilitary forces to the region but the move has failed to crush the uprising.

The crisis has also caused many political observers to fear war could erupt between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi has repeatedly accused its Islamic neighbor of arming and training militants active in Kashmir. Islamabad denies the allegation, but admits to offering moral support to the movement.

VIENNA (AUG. 27) UPI - OPEC ministers huddled behind closed doors for a second day Monday as Iran and other key members resisted efforts to convene an extraordinary formal conference to raise oil output quotas.

The informal talks in the Austrian capital are considered one of the critical moments in the 30-year history of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which has been plunged into crisis by the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Saudi Arabia and Venezuela are seeking OPEC's blessing to begin boosting oil production to compensate for a worldwide shortfall of nearly 5 million barrels a day resulting from U.N. sanctions against Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude.

But the two countries have made clear they will increase production regardless of what OPEC decides.

The Washington Post Monday cited informed oil sources saying the Saudi government has already ordered its state-owned oil company, Saudi Aramco, to begin increasing production, but has not set a new ceiling. The dispatch from Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, said the order was issued early last week.

Iran and its allies oppose any steps that might lower oil prices, which have risen nearly $10 above the $21 target price set by 13-member cartel at its last formal conference a month ago.

''I think this is not the necessary time to increase production - maybe in the future, if we change the situation, but not now,'' Iranian Minister of Petroleum Gholamreza Aghazadeh said during a lunch recess.

Earlier he told reporters it was ''not necessary to have formal meetings'' to boost output quotas.

Iraq and Libya, who also oppose raising quotas, have been absent from the talks so far. But OPEC sources said the two countries would likely send representatives to a formal conference, and said Libya's oil minister may arrive in Vienna as early as Monday evening.

Kuwait's government-in-exile was represented at the talks by former oil minister and current Finance Minister Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah. The new Kuwaiti oil minister, Rasheed Al Ameeri, was in the Indonesian capital for an official visit. He told a news conference in Jakarta his government supports raising output quotas.

''Kuwait encourages other producing countries in OPEC to produce to make up for this lost production in order to stablize the market and reach a reasonable price,'' Al-Ameeri said.

A third group, said to include Indonesia and Algeria, is proposing a compromise solution in which quotas could be raised but not enough to completely erase the shortfall.

''The form of the conference is not the fundamental issue. The fundamental problem is to find solutions for the problems OPEC is facing,'' said Gabon's Jean Ping.

OPEC, which pumps about 40 percent of the world's crude oil, tries to control prices by regulating the production of its members.

A leading Japanese oil executive, Cosmo Oil Chairman Yoshiro Nakayama, urged the cartel to take steps to lower oil prices to the ''reasonable level'' of $21 a barrel, the OPEC News Agency reported Monday from the United Arab Emirates. Nakayama noted the disastrous economic impact of previous oil price shocks in 1973 and 1979.

''From our experience, an artificial, drastic price increase is not good for the world economy,'' he was quoted as saying during a visit to the U.A.E. capital Abu Dhabi.

Sunday, Venezuela's oil minister, Celestino Armas, said it was crucial a decision be reached within the framework of the current meeting because of the danger some nations could unilaterally increase production.

''We think a decision should be taken ... because not to take a decision is a decision in itself,'' Armas said.

He proposed that losses in production stemming from the gulf crisis should be offset through a combination of increased oil production by both OPEC and non-OPEC countries, a gradual drawdown of existing stocks and the release of strategic oil reserves held by United States and other countries.

Earlier this month, the United States and other industrialized nations declined in a Paris meeting to drain oil from their strategic reserves, saying a supply crisis did not exist.

BONN (AUG. 27) UPI - West German oil distributors Monday hiked gasoline pump prices by 14 cents a gallon, the third hike since Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Officials attributed the move to the fact that spot prices for oil in Rotterdam had gone up by almost 49 cents between Aug. 2 and Aug. 24.

With the latest increase, a gallon of unleaded regular now costs about $3.08 retail in West Germany.

Last week, the pump price was raised 9.6 cents a gallon after an earlier 14 cent a-gallon hike.

SOWETO, South Africa (AUG. 27) UPI - Tens of thousands of workers and students in the nation's largest black city of Soweto and other townships staged a boycott Monday to honor victims of two weeks of internecine violence that left more than 500 dead.

As more than 10,000 people turned out for the burial of eight victims killed in street battles in black areas near Johannesburg, police declared that special emergency measures imposed on Friday ''have had the desired effect. Peace has returned to these strife-torn areas.''

A call by the African National Congress and aligned movements for a ''stayaway'' or work boycott to coincide with the funerals drew widespread support Monday. Many businesses were closed and tens of thousands of workers did not report for work in Johannesburg and other industrial satellite cities, according to transportation surveys.

Department of Education Regional Director Peet Struwig told state-run radio most schools in black townships east of Johannesburg were empty and that there was a ''complete stayaway'' from schools in Soweto.

Nearly 5,000 people filled Soweto's Jabulani Stadium for a midday service for six people who died in the sprawling city in clashes between supporters of the ANC, many of them Xhosas, and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha.

The stadium shook to the rhythmic foot-stomping of the predominantly youthful crowd, many dressed in military-style khaki.

The six coffins, placed in front of the stage and draped in traditional Xhosa blankets, were carried after the ceremony to nearby Avalon cemetery, where they were buried with two others, as more than 10,000 mourners watched.

People filed past the graves tossing in soil, and hundreds chanted anti-government slogans. But the crowd dispersed peacefully after the burial, ignoring scores of police and soldiers watching from a distance.

Heavily armed black soldiers ringed the stadium during the funeral services and a police helicopter hovered overhead, but no incidents were reported.

A police spokesman put the death toll in Soweto alone at 126 after three people died over the weekend of injuries sustained in earlier fighting.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, joined on stage by ANC veteran Walter Sisulu and a khaki-clad Winnie Mandela, wife of ANC leader Nelson Mandela, addressed the crowd and blamed the outbreak of violence on the South African police.

''They (police) say the cause of the fighting is tribalism. That is a lie '' Tutu said, before leading the crowd in chants of ''I am proud I am black'' and ''We want peace.''

The clashes, which erupted two weeks ago and left at least 515 dead and some 1,500 wounded, drew a massive clampdown by the government of President Frederik de Klerk on Friday and the imposition of special emergency security laws.

Relative calm appeared to have returned to the townships over the weekend as troops carried out weapons seizures and patrolled hardest-hit areas. In a statement Monday, police again denied the allegations of impartiality.

''As the police have said right from the start, the allegations are malicious, propagandistic lies,'' the statement said. ''It would be to the benefit of all concerned if those who falsely accuse the S.A. police, rather direct their efforts to finding solutions for ending the conflict.''

Also Monday, seven buses carrying some 300 Xhosa people arrived in Johannesburg from the nominally independent tribal homeland of Transkei to help identify bodies still unclaimed in township mortuaries.

A spokesman at the homeland's consulate in Johannesburg said the passengers were relatives of missing Xhosa migrant workers who may have died in the violence.

''Most of these people have just been informed that their relatives are missing here,'' said the spokesman. ''We expect them to go out to various mortuaries to identify the bodies of their relatives.''

(AUG. 27) UPI - The State Department retaliated against Iraq today. The department announced the expulsion of 36 Iraqi diplomats from Washington because of Iraq's actions against Americans in Kuwait and Iraq. The announcement also held open the possibility of further moves against Iraq. State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the Iraqi embassy in Washington will be forced to send 36 diplomats home as quickly as possible... leaving a total of 19 diplomatic personnel in Washington. That's exactly the same number of American diplomats left operating in Kuwait and Iraq.

In another development, U-N Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar will meet with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Amman, Jordan, on Thursday. A U-N spokesman says the meeting will be an attempt to solve- in his words- ''in all its aspects the critical situation in Iraq and Kuwait.''

Officials say blues guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan was killed today with four other people when a helicopter crashed into a Wisconsin hillside at the Alpine Valley Music Theater. Also killed were the booking agent for rock star Eric Clapton, two members of Clapton's crew and the pilot. The crash occurred after Vaughan had finished a concert with Clapton and guitarist Robert Cray.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - A Federal Reserve Board survey of senior bank loan officers indicated Monday there is further evidence of a credit crunch on American businesses of all sizes seeking to borrow money.

Lending for commercial real estate was also off as that hard-hit market disintegrated across the country, according to the survey of 78 banks.

''The results ... suggest that the weakness in growth of commercial and industrial loans this year owes in some part to a reduced willingness on the part of banks to lend,'' the survey said.

In mid-July, Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee that banks appeared to be lending less to U.S. businesses. The latest survey confirms his testimony and data from other sources.

The survey blamed the crunch on more conservative banking practices in the aftermath of the savings and loan crisis, the general slowing of the domestic economy after years of strong growth and problems in specific industries.

''Domestic respondent banks indicated that since May they have further tightened lending standards and terms'' on business loans not tied to mergers and acquisitions, the Fed said.

''The tighter stance was particularly noticeable for lending to middle-market firms but was significant for larger and smaller firms as well,'' the survey indicated.

''Branches and agencies of foreign banks reported that, on balance, they too have moved to restrict the availability of business credit,'' the Fed said.

No changes were reported in the willingness of financial institutions to loan money to U.S. households through credit cards and other consumer instruments, but the survey found less ''enthusiasm'' for home-equity loans.

''This apparent relative de-emphasis on home-equity lending ... may be attributable to a number of factors, including some recent slowing in the appreciation of home prices and increases in delinquency rates on home-equity lines of credit,'' the survey said.

HOUSTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Brown & Root Marine, the world's largest marine engineering company, said Monday it will shift most of its business focus from offshore construction to engineering, project management and technology development.

The company, a unit of Brown & Root Inc., already has sold 23 offshore construction vessels operating in the Far East, Middle East and Gulf of Mexico, and a fabrication yard in Bahrain.

Offshore Pipelines Inc. of Houston bought the assets for $77.2 million.

In 1989, the assets sold generated 20 percent of Brown & Root Marine's revenues and 5 percent of its parent company's revenues, the company said.

The asset sale allows Brown & Root to focus on enhancing its engineering, project management and technology development business, the company said.

The company will reassign its marine construction management team to those areas, while continuing to offer total marine project management capability through joint ventures and subcontractors.

''Our driving interest for the 90s is to harness the imagination of our work force to find new, reliable, low-cost solutions to the challenges of offshore petroleum production,'' said Larry Farmer, managing director of Brown & Root Marine.

''We're seeing an increasing number of offshore developments in nearly all parts of the world. And we expect this trend to continue well into the 90s. These markets are growing technologically more sophisticated and greater emphasis is being placed on cost-savings, quality, productivity and safety.''

Brown & Root Marine is retaining its interests in Rockwater Ltd., the world's largest subsea construction company; European Marine Contractors, a leading North Sea pipeline contractor; Highlands Fabricators, a builder of North Sea platforms; and P.T. Gema SemBrown, a joint venture in Indonesia that operates Sunda Straits fabrication yard.

''In the North Sea, they will retain vessels and the fabricating yard there and continue working as always,'' spokesman Max Watson said. ''The vessels in the North Sea are a little higher tech, so they have retained the capability to directly provide those services in harsh environments.''

Brown & Root Marine also will continue to operate a fabrication facility in Houston.

Brown & Root Marine pioneered the marine engineering and construction industry in 1947, and has recorded a number of ''firsts,'' including fabrication and installation of the first offshore platform and first offshore pipeline in the North Sea.

DOYLESTOWN, PA (AUG. 27) UPI - Two citizens groups Monday asked the Bucks County coroner to reopen an investigation into the death of political activist Abbie Hoffman for signs that he was driven to suicide by a controversial anti-depressant.

Hoffman had taken the drug Prozac six weeks before he was found dead on April 12, 1989 in his Solebury Township apartment, the Citizens Commission on Human Rights and the Prozac Survivors Support Group said in a letter to the coroner.

County coroner Thomas Rosko's autopsy showed Hoffman, a founder of the 1960s anti-war Yippie movement, died from an overdose of the sedative phenobarbitol and alcohol.

In their letter, the groups cite a Harvard study linking the drug to obsessive suicidal thoughts. Published in the February edition of the American Journal of Psychiatry, the study found that 3 1/2 percent of Prozac users developed suicidal thoughts that lasted up to three months after taking the drug.

The maker of Prozac, Eli Lilly and Co. of Indianapolis, has admitted the drug can cause a restless, agitated state that can have violent side effects, the groups said.

At least six lawsuits seeking more than $300 million have been filed against Eli Lilly in connection with alleged Prozac-induced murders, self-mutilations and attempted suicides, the groups said.

Hoffman, who was 52 years old when he died, used Prozac for two weeks in February 1989 and then stoppped, the groups said citing information in the June 1990 edition of the magazine Mother Jones.

''We have been contacted by hundreds of people who have been turned suicidal by Prozac and continued these obsessive suicidal thoughts for months after coming off the drug,'' said Sanford Block, executive director of the Los Angeles-based commission, which is part of the Church of Scientology.

''Abbie Hoffman fits the pattern and could well have been driven to suicide by Prozac,'' Block said.

The letter urges Rosko to contact Hoffman's friends and relatives to determine his moods and behavior before the suicide.

Rosko said the letter provided no new information and was unlikely to cause him to seek more information on Hoffman's death.

''The facts still seem to be that he died of a drug overdose and the death was suicide,'' Rosko said. ''Whether the suicide was caused by the medication used or despondency over a personal situation is not really a matter for the county coroner to investigate.''

Hoffman made his reputation as an anti-war activist first by helping to found the Youth International Party, known as the Yippies, and then as a member of the Chicago Seven who were convicted of organizing violent demonstrations at the Democratic National Convention in 1968.

Hoffman was a fugitive from the law on cocaine charges for seven years before surrendering in 1980. He moved to Bucks County in the mid-1980s to oppose a controversial water project.

MOSCOW (AUG. 27) UPI - The No. 3 reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant was shut down Monday because of a partial failure of its control system, the Izvestia newspaper said.

The shutdown did not cause any ''breaches of the limits of safe operation'' at the sister reactor of the No. 4 unit that exploded in April 1986 in the worst atomic energy accident in history, Izvestia said.

The newspaper quoted Nikolai Steinberg, deputy chairman of the Soviet Atomic Energy Safety Committee, as saying personnel stopped the operation of the No. 3 reactor at 7:30 a.m. Moscow time.

Steinberg told Izvestia ''the operation of the control system of the third reactor was partially violated because of a malfunctioning in the electrical system.''

''Personnel stopped the reactor in full correspondence with the technical rules of operation,'' the newspaper said.

The No. 3 reactor shared cooling and ventilation systems with the No. 4 unit and was more contaminated in the 1986 explosion. It was shut down for more than a year after the accident, opening in July 1987.

The No. 2 reactor was briefly closed for unspecified repairs in January of this year.

GDANSK, POLAND (AUG. 27) UPI - Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa returned home Monday after briefing Pope John Paul II in Rome on the situation in Poland.

''I am satisfied with the visit,'' Walesa told the reporters on landing in the Gdansk Rebiechowo airport.

''My battery has been charged (for further acitivity),'' he said.

Walesa spoke for three hours with the pope and told him Poland's new democratic society is '' full of hopes for the future.''

Walesa, on a two-day visit to Italy, attended a mass with the pope in a chapel dedicated to the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, regarded by Polish Roman Catholics as the protector of the nation.

''Walesa gave the pope a panoramic account of the present situation in Poland 10 years after the birth of the Solidarity union,'' chief Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro Valls told reporters. ''The situation he described was one of a free and pluralistic society full of hopes for the future.''

In recent months, the pope has frequently expressed concern for the problems facing the new Poland and urged its people to stay united to overcome difficulties.

Walesa has announced his readiness to run for president in elections that may be held as early as this autumn. He is also urging the division of the Solidarity-led democratic movement into left and right wings, to avoid a single-party state.

MIDWAY, Utah (AUG. 27) UPI - Authorities sent in more firefighters Monday to battle a 2,500-acre blaze that killed two people, destroyed 50 structures and triggered the evacuation of 340 homes.

Firefighters spokeswoman Vicki May said the destroyed structures included year-round homes and summer residences on state land in the Devil's Hole area between Midway and Wasatch Mountain State Park.

The names of the two dead firefighters were not released pending notification of relatives. No other injuries were reported.

About 400 firefighters battled the blaze early Monday, which began at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in thick oak brush and exploded rapidly as it was fueled by winds estimated at 35 to 40 mph, officials said.

Three-hundred additional structures were threatened by the blaze and 40 more homes were evacuated early Monday in the Bonanza Flat and Pine Canyon areas, May said.

Power to a large part of the area was restored by Monday morning as pilots continued making water and fire retardant drops over the area. Officials were unsure what sparked the blaze.

With weather forecasts calling for continued dry, windy conditions, officials would not estimate when the blaze would be contained.

''I understand it's going to be hot with gusty winds and low humidity, which means they are going to be continued to be hampered by problems with the wind,'' May said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - With one of the nation's largest guarantors of student loans alive but on life support, Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos issued recommendations Monday to reduce the huge loan default rate, which will cost taxpayers about $2.4 billion this year.

The federal Guaranteed Student Loan program provides low-interest, long-term loans for post-secondary education to students in financial need. However, loan defauts, many of which involve trade schools, are expected to reach $2.4 billion in fiscal year 1990, about 44 percent of the Education Department's entire $4.6 billion budget for the program this year. About $12 billion will be loans to about five million students during fiscal year 1990, the department said.

In the handbook called "Reducing Student Loan Defaults: A Plan for Action," Cavazos said all those involved must accept a share of the blame for the student loan default crisis and take responsibility for resolving the problem.

"Behind the default statistics are students who are either unable or unwilling to repay their loans. Many of the defaults could have been prevented if everyone involved in student loans - students, post-secondary institutions, lenders, guarantee agencies, and the federal and state governments - had worked together," Cavazos said.

He said that "only through such cooperation" can integrity be restored to the student loan program. "Defaults are a waste of valuable student aid money and must be stopped."

The Higher Education Assistance Foundation, or HEAF - one of the largest guarantors of student loans - is facing serious financial problems. HEAF, like other guarantee agencies, insures student loans by paying bank lenders 100 percent of a defaulted loan.

The Education Department, in turn, reinsures the guarantors' loan, but at a lower amount, usually 80 percent, if defaults reach a certain level. HEAF is on the brink of collapse because it is losing the other 20 percent.

In the last few weeks, the Student Loan Marketing Association, known as Sallie Mae, came to HEAF's rescue by extending an additional $200 million in credit. Education Department officials said negotiations continue for a more permanent solution for HEAF. Among the recommendations in the handbook, which grew out of 1989 Education Department proposals on default reduction:

- Post-secondary institutions should counsel students on loan responsibilities, work closely with lenders, improve the quality of education, improve retention programs to keep students in school, reduce defaults by dropouts, teach students to budget and manage their personal finances, keep in touch with borrowers after they leave school and analyze the default problem at the institution and take action.

- Lenders should research loan risks before lending money, communicate effectively with student borrowers during all phases of the loan process, use effective collection techniques and carefully monitor loan servicers.

- Guarantee agencies should monitor lenders and post-secondary institutions and fully enforce existing laws and regulations, help institutions in default reduction efforts, help lenders collect repayments before loans enter default and pursue collections diligently.

- Agencies that accredit post-secondary schools should assess educational quality during accreditation reviews and evaluate the administrative capabilities of institutions. State officials are encouraged to establish and enforce stringent licensing and approvl procedures for these schools and take strong action against defaulters.

Cavazos said the handbook is not intended for students. If they have questions, they should call the Federal Student Aid Information Center at 1-800-333-INFO.

LISBON, PORTUGAL (AUG. 27) UPI - Delegations from Angola's leftist government and the U.S.-backed UNITA rebels met in Portugal Monday for a third round of secret talks aimed at ending the country's 15-year civil war.

Portuguese sources, asking to remain unidentified, said the talks had started under Portuguese mediation but declined to disclose the agenda.

Each Angolan side said in recent days it was ready for a cease-fire but demanded political flexibility from the other.

The Soviet- and Cuban-backed government in Luanda has insisted that a cease-fire must precede discussions on political solutions to the conflict which began at independence from Portugal in 1975.

UNITA rebel chief Jonas Savimbi, however, has demanded political recognition of his movement, the setting of a date for national elections and agreement on a single national army to be formed from Angolan and rebel forces before accepting a truce.

The Portuguese sources expressed ''cautious optimism'' that progress would be made in the talks despite the tough public declarations by the Angolan rivals.

Under the mediation of Portuguese Foreign Affairs Minister Jose Durao Barroso, negotiations began in secrecy in April with a second round in June.

The current round, originally scheduled for early July, was postponed without explanation three times.

Portugal assumed the role of mediator in the Angolan conflict after the collapse of a brief cease-fire arranged by Zaire President Mobuto Sese Seko in June 1989.

Direct negotiations between the Angolan factions opened after a 1988 U.S.-brokered accord produced an agreement from South Africa to end support for UNITA and to grant independence to Namibia, while Cuba agreed to gradually withdraw its 50,000 troops who were in Angola to support to the Luanda government.

DUBLIN (AUG. 27) UPI - Freed Irish hostage Brian Keenan is undergoing tests for arsenic poisoning based on the experience of former American hostage Frank Reed, doctors said Monday.

Dr. Richard Firth said there were no clinical indications so far that Keenan was poisoned. But he said Reed, who has been visiting Keenan at the Mater Clinic, said he had been poisoned shortly before his own release and suggested Keenan be tested.

Keenan, 39, in his first statements about the conditions under which he was held for 4 1/2 years by an Islamic group before being freed Saturday, told doctors he had been blindfolded, beaten and chained to a wall during his first three years of captivity in Beirut.

Firth and Dr. Sean Blake said Keenan, a teacher, told them he had also been subjected to frequent beatings for no apparent reason while he was held in a small, dark, mosquito-ridden cell, forbidden to speak above a whisper.

''Mr. Keenan said he was kept in a room the size of one of our bathrooms here, which is about eight-by-six (feet) along with (British hostage) John McCarthy. Imagine the two of them in that space,'' Blake said.

Keenan has said his time in captivity was brightened by the presence and wit of McCarthy, a journalist with the British television news agency Independent Television News.

''They shared a reciprocal sense of humor and were very close,'' Firth said of the two men, who were both taken hostage in April 1986 after the U.S. bombing of Libya.

Six months ago, Keenan has said they were given more freedom to move around, given meat for the first time in their captivity and no longer chained and blindfolded.

The doctors said they found Keenan to have dental problems, sore eyes, malnutrition and a persistant noise in his ears, but was otherwise in good condition. Keenan is expected to undergo further tests and observation for about three more days before he can leave the private hospital.

Reed, who had at times had been held with Keenan and McCarthy before his release in April, has been offering support to Keenan during his visits at Mater. Reed is said to be suffering from post-traumatic stress syndrome since his ordeal and said he understood what Keenan was going through.

''Everyone is going to want him to do something. We have got to give him some breathing space and let him absorb this thing called the past, although Brian is a tough little guy and will fight through it,'' Reed told The Independent newspaper in a story published Monday.

Several friends of McCarthy - who is still held captive in Beirut and whom Keenan did not want to leave behind when he realized he was being freed - headed to Dublin to visit the freed Irishman.

Keenan had argued with his captors to let him stay with McCarthy as they took him away from his prison in a Beirut basement.

The road from Dublin to Belfast will be lined with yellow ribbons to mark Keenan's return to his home in Northern Ireland later this month, officials said.

In Belfast, rival political factions have been arguing over who should have first access to Keenan, who is a Protestant, and the nature of any public ceremonies.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AUG. 27) UPI - Launch of the shuttle Columbia Saturday on a 10-day astronomy flight may be delayed one day and possibly two in a bid to keep the shuttle Discovery on track for a high-priority Oct. 5 liftoff, officials said Monday.

Columbia's countdown is scheduled to begin at 1 a.m. EDT Wednesday and the ship's seven-man crew plans to fly to the Kennedy Space Center from Houston later in the day for final preparations.

Launch is scheduled for 1:17 a.m. Saturday, but the flight may be delayed a day or so that Discovery can be moved to nearby launch pad 39B before Columbia's takeoff.

At issue is a drive to preserve as much spare time as possible in Discovery's ground processing schedule to handle unexpected problems that might otherwise delay launch of the European Ulysses solar probe, grounded in 1986 by the Challenger disaster.

NASA only has 18 days to get Discovery off the ground or Ulysses will be grounded for another 13 months because of technical issues involving the probe's trajectory to the sun.

For that reason, NASA managers want to have Discovery ready to go at the opening of its ''launch window'' if at all possible. Given that engineers typically lose a day a week at the launch pad, they need as much contingency time as they can get.

But Discovery's move from its hangar to the Vehicle Assembly Building for attachment to a pair of boosters and an external fuel tank fell behind schedule over the weekend and the ship did not reach the VAB until early Monday.

Roll out to launch pad 39B now is scheduled for Friday. But Columbia, grounded May 30 by a hydrogen fuel leak, is scheduled to be loaded with fuel Friday night for an early Saturday liftoff.

For safety reasons, engineers are not allowed to work on one pad during another shuttle's final countdown on the other.

Shuttle program manager Robert Crippen has said he will delay Columbia's flight one day to get Discovery to its pad before its sistership takes off.

Forrest McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said a final decision on how to proceed was not expected until Tuesday.

''We're going to have to play it by ear,'' he said in an interview. ''What we want to do is get the Ulysses bird on the pad. We want to hit the beginning of the Ulysses (launch) window. I think we've got 3 1/2 or four days of contingency. What they're trying to do is preserve those contingency days.

''We'd like to be down on the pad so that if we have ... a delay (with Columbia), be it weather or be it technical, we could do work getting Ulysses ready to go. That's our game plan.''

But that does not take into account Hurricane Gustav, which could cause additional problems for NASA depending on its eventual course.

Otherwise, McCartney said, agency managers likely would agree to slip Columbia's launch one day if Discovery stays on track for a move to the pad Friday.

''I'm not sure we'd slip it two days, but I'm not sure we wouldn't,'' he said.

The only other problem under discussion that could have an impact on Columbia's launch is trouble maintaining the proper flow of coolant through one of two refrigeration systems aboard the shuttle that are used to cool the ship's telescope payload.

Fixing the ''flow proportioning valve'' would delay launch a week or so, but engineers said they were optimistic the shuttle can take off on time.

''It's probably going to be above the redlines when we launch,'' said an official. ''They don't think it's going to be a problem.''

Other officials were not so sure. A manager at the Kennedy Space Center said such hardware should be working properly before a shuttle is allowed to take off.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Iraqi television Monday debuted a slick new television program called Guests News, featuring foreign hostages playing pool, sharing their thoughts on peace and wishing relatives happy birthday.

The program - excerpts of which were fed to U.S. networks - has snappy Western music and colorful graphics, including an Iraqi flag that spins across the closing credits.

Hostages featured in the edited program said in interviews in English that they were being well-treated and well-fed despite the economic embargo that has slowed supplies to Iraq. It was not known under what circumstances the hostages made the comments or what comments were edited out by Iraqi authorities.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who calls the foreign nationals detained in Iraq and Kuwait his ''guests,'' has said they will stay at key economic and military sites as a shield against attack by Western and Asian forces gathered in the Persian Gulf.

''We are very well-treated. The food is OK. We have sporting facilities as well,'' a young German named Greg said in English. He said he hoped other ''foreign guests'' in Iraq were being treated as well.

''Hope you had a nice birthday, Dad,'' he said in closing.

Other hostages, shown at one point playing pool, said they hoped the crisis could be solved through diplomacy rather than war.

''It's not worth the sacrifice of thousands of lives before we can sit together and talk,'' said another hostage, also identified as a German.

A couple with their young son were shown on a couch in a wood-paneled room.

''The children are being amazingly strong and brave,'' the mother said, cradling her sleepy child in her arms.

Last week, Iraqi television showed Saddam meeting with a room full of about two dozen British hostages, shaking hands, patting children on the head and answering questions. The hostages in the tape, which was also edited, appeared uneasy but calm.

World leaders universally condemned the broadcast, but Saddam appears intent on trying to convince the Western world in general, and the English-speaking world in particular, that the hostages are being well-cared for.

Analysts suggest he may also be giving the hostages names and faces in order to sway world public opinion away from launching an attack on Iraq and endangering their lives.

Robert Vinton, an American in Baghdad, said in a telephone interview with Cable News Network that he was free to move around the city but was not completely aware of world events because he had no access to outside media.

''We have a sense of freedom in Baghdad,'' he said. ''People ask, 'Well, are you a hostage or not?' We are, but we have a limited sense of freedom.

Vinton said there were food shortages in the country, which has been suffering for almost a month from economic sanctions imposed by the United Nations following its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Oil prices plunged at record rates early Monday, with gasoline falling nearly 15 cents a gallon as prospects for war in the Middle East appeared to recede.

''There are (unconfirmed) reports that Iraq has told its ship captains not to resist boarding by warships enforcing the U.N. embargo, and Iraq appears to be making overtures to the United Nations on a possible peace settlement,'' said Peter Beutel, vice president of Merrill Lynch Futures Inc. in New York.

He mentioned the possibility of Iraqi officials meeting with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar toward resolving the Persian-Gulf crisis precipitated by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

As a result of the invasion, the United Nations imposed an embargo Iraqi and Kuwaiti exports Aug. 6.

''It looks like Saudi Arabia, Venezuela and the United Arab Emirates are going to raise production'' at the Vienna meeting of oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Beutel added.

''The market is relieved that there may be a settlement of the Middle East crisis. It appears closer than it did Friday,'' echoed Robert Baker, senior energy analyst with New York's Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

In early afternoon trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, unleaded gasoline for September delivery was down 14.91 cents to 89.75 cents a gallon, still more than 25 cents higher than its Aug. 1 Merc close of 64.27 cents a gallon.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery had fallen $3.81 a barrel to $27.10 a barrel on the Merc, while September home heating oil had nosedived 11.70 cents a gallon to 79.25 cents a gallon.

Beutel said he could not remember prices falling as rapidly in the history of oil trading on the exchange.

''Not like this,'' agreed Joe Miller of Shearson Lehman Hutton's International Energy Desk in New York.

The exchange could not provide any confirmation of this. A spokeswoman said, ''Unfortunately, we do not keep any records on declines.''

Miller said the drastic drop was basically limited to U.S. trading. London's International Energy Exchange, which often provides a lead for the Merc, was closed Monday for a holiday.

By contrast, on the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold to the highest bidder, the United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was down $1.15 at midday to $28.45 a barrel.

Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent fell 60 cents to $30.40 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, prompt delivery WTI was off $1.30 a barrel to $26.55 a barrel.

In Vienna, OPEC ministers huddled behind closed doors for a second day as Iran and other key members resisted efforts to convene an extraordinary formal conference to raise oil output quotas.

The informal talks in the Austrian capital are considered one of the critical moments in the 30-year history of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which was plunged into crisis by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Saudi Arabia and Venezuela are seeking OPEC's blessing to begin boosting production to compensate for a worldwide shortfall of 4 million barrels a day resulting from U.N. sanctions against Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude.

But the two countries have made it clear they will increase production regardless of what OPEC decides.

Iran and its allies oppose any steps that might lower oil prices.

''I think this is not the necessary time to increase production - maybe in the future, if we change the situation, but not now,'' Iranian Minister of Petroleum Gholamreza Aghazadeh said during a lunch recess.

ANKARA, TURKEY (AUG. 27) UPI - A group of 52 American women and children who were permitted to leave Iraq early Monday were taken to a NATO air base in southern Turkey for a flight to the United States, U.S. embassy sources said.

The 52, mainly dependents of U.S. Embassy personnel in Kuwait, drove through the Iraqi border and entered Turkey early Monday in 11 cars at the Habur checkpoint more than 20 hours after being allowed to leave Baghdad.

U.S. Embassy sources in Ankara said the 52 Americans were driven from the border to Diyarbakir, Turkey, where they rested, and were then flown to the NATO air base at Incirlik in southern Turkey at noon.

They were expected to be flown directly to the United States. An embassy official in Ankara said an earlier report that the group would fly to Frankfurt was incorrect.

Three male members of the original group of 55 were turned back by the Iraqi authorities because they were older than 18 years, sources at the Habur border gate said in a telephone interview.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the embassy had received information that the three young men ''were taken back to Baghdad.''

The original group of 55 left Baghdad at 5 a.m. Sunday and arrived at the Turkish side of the border gate about 2.30 a.m. Monday.

Reporters waiting at the border were not peritted to talk to them, and therewas no immediate explanation of why it took the group more than 20 hours to take a journay that normally takes eight or nine hours.

The 52 women and children were met at the Turkish border gate by the wife of U.S. Ambassador to Turkey Morton Abromowitz and other American officials sent to Habur to receive them. Turkish passport officials said they looked happy and relieved.

Earlier, Sirnak Governor Aydin Aslan said he ordered the border gate kept open for 24 hours to allow them through immediately on their arrival. Officials said they got through passport and other formalities in the minimum time possible.

The 52 women and children were among more than 100 American dependents and non-essential embassy personnel who left Kuwait for Iraq last week after assurances they would be allowed to leave.

A U.S. Embassy official in Ankara said 54 male embassy personnel were however forbidden to leave Baghdad Sunday when the women and children drove to the Turkish border. ''We are working very hard to secure their release as well,'' an embassy spokeswoman said.

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (AUG. 27) UPI - A government medivac helicopter lifted eight wounded soldiers from a 300-year-old Dutch fort where they had been trapped for more than two months, a senior air force official said Monday.

The rescue took place Sunday evening on the fifth day of a major offensive against guerrillas in the area. The government seized control of a strategic island in northern Sri Lanka and prepared to storm the rebel stronghold of Jaffna, the military official said.

The object of the ''Operation Eagle'' offensive, which was launched last Wednesday and involves some 3,600 troops, was to capture the area surrounding the star-shaped former Dutch fort, where about 200 soldiers and policemen have been under siege for weeks.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, who control most of the northern Jaffna Peninsula, have used automatic weapons and mortars in sporadic attacks on the fort, preventing government helicopters from landing inside to deliver food and other supplies, and evacuating wounded soldiers.

Details of the medivac mission were sketch.

Government troops were reported closing in on the fort, however.

They came under heavy resistance from the rebels, who weree firing mortars and using small arms to fend off the assault, officials said. The security forces were advancing slowly under cover from helicopter gunships, they said.

According to military sources, troops who earlier captured the islands of Kayts and Mandaitivu, which are separated from the fort on the Jaffna mainland by a lagoon, fought their way toward the fort in boats.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Approximately 1,400 newly introduced Sunbeam Mixmaster stand mixers are being recalled voluntarily by the manufacturer because they pose a severe electric shock risk, the government said Monday.

The recall, conducted by Sunbeam Appliance Co. of Milwaukee in cooperation with the Consumer Product Safety Commission, involves Models 01930 and 01940, both distributed nationwide between February and April of this year. Both stand mixers have chrome-plated housings.

The affected models have the model number and the date code on the nameplate, located between the beater openings on the underside of the mixer housing. The only mixers affected are Models 01930 and 01940 with the following date codes: JPD, JPE, FPB, FPC, MPA, MPB and MPC.

The consumer agency cautions consumers to stop using these mixers immediately and contact Sunbeam. Motors and other electrical components, through shipping, use or handling, may shift and contact the inside of the chrome-plated mixer housing, which could create a risk of severe electric shock to the user, the agency said. Even though no consumers have reported electric shocks from using these mixers, Sunbeam recognized the possibility and reported the potential hazard to the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Consumers can call Sunbeam at 1-800-441-7068. Consumers with affected mixers will be sent a pre-addressed, pre-stamped box in which to return the motor housing of their mixer. Sunbeam will provide a replacement unit free of charge.

MOSCOW (AUG. 27) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev told the visiting Egyptian foreign minister Monday the Arab states must ''consolidate quickly'' to avoid an all-out war in the Persian Gulf.

Gorbachev said while he believed the crisis over Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait could still be solved peacefully, time may be running out for a political settlement.

''The countdown is quickening,'' Gorbachev told Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat-Abdel Meguid, according to an account of the meeting carried by the official Tass news agency.

''Arabs should display their ability to consolidate quickly, to take joint decisions in their own interests and in the interests of the entire world '' Gorbachev said.

Meguid gave Gorbachev a message from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, the Egyptian Embassy said. The contents of the message were not released.

Tass said the Gorbachev-Meguid meeting focused on the need to increase ''the Arab factor'' to prevent an armed conflict in the gulf.

''It is necessary to exert every effort to realize this opportunity and to prevent an armed conflict,'' Gorbachev said.

The Arab League has condemned the Iraqi invasion and called for a quick Iraqi pullout, and Egypt and other Arab countries have sent troops to join a U.S.-dominated multinational force in the Persian Gulf.

Tass said ''special attention'' was paid during the talks Monday to the plight of foreigners being held in Iraq and ''the inadmissibility of any anti-humane, illegitimate actions against them.''

The one-day visit by Meguid to Moscow for talks with Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was part of an intense diplomatic effort by Moscow to find a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis.

Shevardnadze met French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas Sunday, and in the last week has hosted special envoys from Iraq and Saudi Arabia in addition to holding near-daily telephone conversations with Washington. The Soviet Union also has a special ambassador touring the Middle East.

The Soviet Union has condemned the Iraqi invasion and voted for a U.N. Security Council resolution early Saturday authorizing limited military enforcement of sanctions against Iraq, but Shevardnadze said Sunday the Soviet Union did not plan to participate in the blockade.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (AUG. 27) UPI - Leftist rebels claimed Monday to have killed or wounded 187 members of the Salvadoran armed forces during the past week of combat, while the army admitted two deaths and seven injuries.

''During the week, we have inflicted a total of 187 casualties on the army '' the rebels said in a broadcast on their clandestine Radio Venceremos.

The short-wave radio station of the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front said many of the casualties resulted from guerrilla attacks on a major army operation in the mountainous rebel stronghold of Chalatenango province, some 30 miles north of the capital, San Salvador.

Rebel casualty reports do not distinguish between dead and injured.

Military sources confirmed that the army had made a large-scale incursion into the zone. They said rebel explosives went off on Saturday in the army's temporary command post for Chalatenango operations, killing two soldiers and wounding five, including operation commander Lt. Col. Carlos Camilo Hernandez.

A judge recently freed Hernandez on bail after charging the lieutenant colonel with participating in a coverup of the Nov. 16 slaying of six Jesuit priests by members of the Salvadoran military.

(AUG. 27) UPI - A gun-shy Iraq has ordered its tankers to avoid conflicts with U.S.-led warships in the gulf region and Washington ordered the expulsion of 36 Iraqi diplomats apparently to retaliate for treatment of U.S. diplomats in Iraq.

''We understand the Iraqis have ordered their people to keep low and not break the blockade for now,'' a shipping source in Bahrain who monitors gulf ship movements and radio communications said.

Defense Secretary Brent Scowcroft has told ABC news that the United States will offer asylum to any Iraqi sailors who ''respond peacefully'' to efforts in the gulf to prevent supplies from moving to and from Iraq.

The order to Iraqi tankers appeared to indicate Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was shying away from a confrontation with Western forces that poured into the gulf region after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz was quoted on Baghdad Radio as saying his country would not be the one to ''strike first,'' and Saudi Arabia has said Iraqi troops had pulled back from the Saudi border.

''I think the Iraqis are very wise under the circumstances to avoid giving the Americans any chance to retaliate,'' said the Bahrain shipping source. ''Quite clearly, they would be blown out of the water within seconds.''

The United States was apparently retaliating in other ways, however, for the forced detention in Baghdad of U.S. Embassy personnel from Kuwait. Iraq has said it will keep almost 50 male embassy employees in Iraq until the United States capitulates and closes its embassy in Kuwait - an order America has refused because it does not recognize Iraq's annexation of the emirate.

Iraqi ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat was called to the State Department Monday morning to meet with acting Secretary Lawrence Eagleburger to discuss ''restrictions to be placed on the Iraqi embassy in the United States,'' a source said.

Afterward, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the number of authorized people at the Iraqi embassy in Washington was being cut to 19 from 55. She said the 36 required to leave would include seven accredited diplomats.

Qatar meanwhile announced Monday it would permit the deployment of foreign forces on its soil, bringing to five the number of gulf Arab states which have approved the deployment of foreign troops on their soil.

In other developments Monday:

-Oil prices plunged at record rates early in the day, with gasoline falling nearly 15 cents a gallon as prospects for war in the Middle East appeared to recede.

-In Vienna, members of OPEC failed to agree on a Saudi proposal that would allow the cartel countries to pump more oil than their quotas in order to make up for the 5 million barrels a day shortfall caused by the boycott of Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude.

-Iraqi television debuted an edited new program called Guests News that features hostages playing pool, declaring they were well treated and wishing relatives happy birthday.

-In Turkey, 52 American and children who are the dependents of U.S. diplomatic staff in Kuwait arrived at a NATO base in southern Turkey and then departed on a flight for Frankfurt.

-India said it would start pulling its 170,000 nationals out of Kuwait in buses across the Iraqi-Iranian border.

-Iraq announced a total of 1.5 million people had volunteered for military duty, supplementing its regular army on 1 million men.

Arab leaders continued efforts to mediate an end to the crisis, which began with Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. King Hussein of Jordan met Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi in Tripoli and Sudanese leader Gen. Omar al Bashir ended talks in Baghdad with Saddam to try and ''pluck the fuse of war because war would be destructive,'' Baghdad Radio said.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid traveled to Moscow and discussed the crisis with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who reportedly said the Arab states must ''consolidate quickly'' to avoid an all-out war in the Persian Gulf.

Meguid gave Gorbachev a message from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, the Egyptian Embassy said. The contents of the message were not released.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency meanwhile said eleven countries had agreed to attend an emergency summit in Cairo Thursday to discuss the gulf crisis. Iraq and allies Jordan, Yemen, the Palestine Liberation Organization would not be attending.

The crisis seemed to escualate when dozens of countries defied an Iraqi order to close their embassies in Kuwait, but turned into a standoff over the weekend when Iraqi troops cut power to the missions but did not attempt to close them by force.

China and Hungary threw in the towel Monday, with Beijing reportedly withdrawing its staff from its mission and Budapest closing its facility completely. An Iraqi diplomat who spoke of the Chinese pullout said he could not confirm reports that invading Iraqi troops had stormed the Chinese embassy compound.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said morale was high at the U.S. Embassy where diplomats believed to number fewer than 10 were living without electricity and water.

King Hussein, whose kingdom's economy has suffered significantly because of the embargo against its largest trade partner, Iraq, was expected to visit other North African states on his most recent tour to support peaceful negotiations.

North African states such as Algeria, Tunisia and Mauritania have generally backed otherwise isolated Iraq.

In Turkey, a group of 52 American women and children, mostly dependents of U.S. Embassy personnel in Kuwait who were allowed to leave Baghdad, drove to the Incirlik NATO air base in southern Turkey Monday to be flown to Frankfurt. But three male members of the original group of 55 were turned back by the Iraqi authorities because they were over 18.

''We're disappointed that the Iraqi government once again has reneged on its promise to allow the entire convoy to depart,'' Fitzwater told reporters in Kennebunkport, Maine.

He said 63 Americans were believed among the Western and Asian hostages held by Saddam at key economic and military sites to guard against attack.

Iraqi's foreign minister Aziz was scheduled to hold talks in Amman Thursday with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to try and reach a diplomatic solution to the crisis, Baghdad Radio said. Kuwait's exiled government welcomed the move, but warned against any negotiations until Iraqi troops withdrew.

Also in Baghdad, a government-run Iraqi newspaper described foreign nationals being held in Iraq and Kuwait against their will as a weapon ''in the battle of history.''

In Beirut, Lebanese foreign ministry officials said Iraqi troops moved the Lebanese ambassador in Kuwait, the consul and 10 non-diplomatic staff to Baghdad. The officials said the group was now on its way to Lebanon. Lebanon's pro-Syrian government was the first Arab state to condemn Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

(AUG. 27) UPI - Why do guys go into rock 'n' roll? ''Money and girls were the two big motivations,'' Don Henley says in the upcoming issue of Rolling Stone. ''That's what it was for everybody. Then you become a serious artist and set out to change the world.'' Henley, who is working with former Eagle mate Glenn Frey, says he now seeks rock as a way to improve life. ''I think rock 'n' roll has always been that from the standpoint of rebellion but I'd like to build upon that and make it more adult,'' he says. ''I mean, let's face it - there's not going to be anarchy in this country ... so let's get with the program and start effecting some real change and get something done besides just yelling and screaming about it.''

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE (AUG. 27) UPI - Most workers walked to their jobs Monday and hundreds of drivers were turned away from gas stations as the capital was hit with a severe fuel shortage.

Most regular gas, diesel fuel and kerosene stocks in the West African nation were exhausted three weeks ago, and Monday almost all sources of fuel were dry.

A Trade Ministry official told United Press International that the nation's fuel-acquisition patterns were in confusion as a result of the Persian Gulf crisis. He said Sierra Leone requires some 225,000 barrels of crude oil every eight weeks but with the price of oil jumping over $30 a barrel from the earlier $17 price Sierra Leone had paid, no arrangements have been made for the next consignment.

Some workers walked as far as 20 miles to their jobs Monday because fuel shortages had ended virtually all modes of motor transportation.

(AUG. 27) UPI - World stock markets scored sharp gains Monday on sentiment that tension was decreasing in the Middle East and expectations that several OPEC members were about to increase their output, driving oil prices down.

The Nikkei index in Tokyo scored a 4 percent gain and the key Dax index in Frankfurt jumped 6.1 percent.

In New York, the Stock Exchange was recording strong gains of about 3.4 percent in active afternoon trading extending a powerful morning rally fueled by an easing of fears about a possible war in the Middle East.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped 49.50 Friday, was up 87.62 to 2620.54 at 1 p.m. EDT.

''The tension is decreasing and it will remain this way until the meeting Thursday in Amman, Jordan, between U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz,'' said David Mizrahi, editor of the authoritative MidEast report.

''The decreased tension had a favorable impact on world markets and this will last for a few more days at least.''

Perez de Cuellar and Aziz are expected to attempt to solve the conflict in the Persian Gulf through a diplomatic settlement.

As share prices soared on world markets, oil prices dived on indications the informal meeting in Vienna of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was about to allow higher individual country production to make up for the loss of Iraqi and Kuwaiti output. Late afternoon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, oil prices were down $4.51 a barrel.

Investors from Tokyo to New York steadily pushed stock prices up and most world markets scored gains amounting to several percentage points of their respective indexes.

In Tokyo, the Nikkei index of 225 selected issues gained 976.00 points to close at 25,141.76 - a 4 percent gain. The Nikkei had started its rebound Friday, gaining 428.13 points, after suffering severe losses.

The prospects of higher interest rates in Japan and the continued strength of the yen also helped attract investors to the Tokyo market.

Mizrahi said markets worldwide were reacting to the perception that a full-scale war was not about to break out in the Gulf.

''Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has let time elapse, allowing the build-up of U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia,'' Mizrahi said. ''If Hussein had wanted to attack Saudi Arabia, he would have moved against Saudi Arabia right after invading Kuwait, and investors are aware of this.''

However, trading in Tokyo was a moderate 330 million shares, down from 546.07 million shares Friday, indicating that investors still viewed the Tokyo market as extremely vulnerable to the volatile Middle East situation.

Share prices scored solid gains on the Singapore Stock Exchange, where the key Straits Times industrial index jumped 40.17 points to close at 1,198.23 - a 3.5 percent advance. The gain, however, remained small compared to a 25 percent decline of the Straits Times index since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Elsewhere in Asia, the Weighted Index in Taipei gained 6.8 percent on a major rebound following big losses after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. In Manila, the Composite Index gained nearly 30 points - or a 4.3 percent advance. In Seoul, the index ended six straight sessions of losses with a similar percentage gain.

On the Sydney Stock Exchange, traders reacted positively to the upturn in world markets, with the All Ordinaries index ending the day up 7.4 points to 1,477.

The upward trend spilled over from Asia to Europe and stock prices surged 6.1 percent on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange Monday on reports of decreased tension in the Middle East. The Frankfurt market also attracted British investors since the London International stock exchange was closed for a bank holiday.

The closely watched German Stock Index gained 95.76 points to close at 1,654.80 points, closing at the day's high.

At the Paris Bourse, the Agefi General Index gained 4.3 percent, an advance based on increased confidence about the Middle East situation as well as on the return to the market place of many investors after the traditional month-long summer vacation in France.

In Zurich, dealers said the Credit Suisse Stock Index made some advance in sympathy with the main world markets, up 18.7 points to 561.3. In Milan, the Stock Index gained 5 percent of its value on the same technical rebound that dominated other markets.

DALLAS (AUG. 27) UPI - Producers, a high school classmate and other admirers remembered Texas-grown blues guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan Monday as a young rebel who overcame personal problems to become a great artist.

Vaughan, who first picked up a guitar in Dallas with his brother Jimmie, was widely respected as a superstar who never forgot his roots, often returning to his Oak Cliff neighborhood to attend reunions with high school chums.

He was killed early Monday in a helicopter crash after a concert at East Troy, Wis.

''Stevie had longer hair than most of the boys at that time. He was kind of a rebel, but a real nice guy,'' recalled Patti Tunnell, who went to junior high school with Vaughan and now works in an Oak Cliff music store.

''I was a cheerleader, and he used to play at all our parties. He was pretty good, but this was just the beginning.''

Tunnell said Vaughan had returned a couple of times in recent years to see old friends at the reunions and his mother would stop by the music store to pick up sheet music and the latest magazine stories about her famous son.

Vaughan went on to make his name as a rock star and win two Grammys. His early Austin jam sessions were so legendary that the Rolling Stones came down to check him out. He recorded his first album, ''Texas Flood,'' at Riverside Studios in Austin.

The news of Vaughan's death shocked his many Texas friends and associates. Among them was Terry Lickona, producer of Public Television's ''Austin City Limits,'' where Vaughan appeared in 1983 and this year.

''We all commented after the show that he was at the peak of his career,'' he said. ''He was still young enough and had the energy and vitality. He probably would never be better and it showed in his music.

''He had completely cleaned up (drug, alcohol problems). The only drug he did while he was here (taping on Oct. 10, 1989) was an allergy pill. He was off everything. He had such a positive outlook on life and his music. He had no ego. He was just very down to earth.''

Earlier in his career, Vaughan had a reputation for being moody, unfriendly and difficult to work with, Lickona said.

''In terms of modern day blues guitarist, I think he was the best. Nobody came close. That's why it's especially sad and ironic that it (his death) should happen now. He really had the future right in the palm of his hand.''

Another producer, Larry Trader, was in Dallas Monday to put on a Willie Nelson benefit concert at the Longhorn Ballroom Monday night.

''There's no question this is a great loss. He had lots of followers and friends in this area. He was a great musician. It's a sad day for our business,'' he said.

Although some critics pointed to his older brother as the virtuoso, there were others who saw Stevie as the real superstar. Joe Nick Patoski, a Texas Monthly senior editor, was one of those.

''It ain't fair. I think of all the times I heard him for two bucks, like at the Continental Club (in Austin),'' he recalled. ''It was obvious back in the mid-70s that the kid had it.''

NEW DELHI, INDIA (AUG. 27) UPI - About 500 people were arrested Monday when high-caste Hindu students protesting a government decision to reserve civil service jobs for lower-caste workers burned vehicles and damaged more than 200 parked buses during a general strike, police said.

The demonstration resulted in at least three injuries and disrupted life in the capital, although shopkeepers apparently were in favor of the protest.

Those arrested were charged with rioting, police said.

The strike resulted in shops shuttered, schools and colleges closed, thin attendance in government offices and public buses being kept off the roads.

Strike sympathizers crowded into commercial areas to ensure that shops remained shuttered and erected road blocks to distrupt vehicular traffic. They paralyzed public bus services by breaking window panes on the vehicles and deflating tires.

The strike was called by high caste students to protest a government decision to reserve 27 percent of government jobs for low-caste Hindus called the ''backward caste,'' who make up 52 percent of India's 830 million people.

The government early this month announced that it was extending job reservation benefits to ''backward caste'' Hindu groups so that their representation in government jobs could be raised.

The announcement increased total job reservation in government offices from 22 to 49 percent.

India's lowest-caste Hindu groups, who are considered ''untouchable'' because of their low social status and heritage, have been assured of 22 percent reservation in government jobs since independence from Britain in 1947.

The announcement extending job reservation by 27 percent to members of the''backward caste'' - one rung higher on the system to ''untouchables'' - sparked agitation in northern India.

The anti-reservation stir has disrupted normal life in major towns of northern India with near-daily rallies, strikes and clashes between police and protesters, and between pro and anti- reservation groups.

The agiation has now spread to the western Gujarat state, where students called a strike for Tuesday.

Much like the ''Affirmative Action'' program in the United States, the reservation system is supposed to make up for years of oppression and discrimination against certain groups in India.

Opponents of job reservation, who are from the high caste, claim that job reservation would adversely affect their future. They claim the ''backward caste'' is already economically and politically powerful.

The protesters want jobs reserved only for poor people and open to all castes.

The anti-reservationists also claim the policy will pull down the general standard of services and that it will only deepen the chasm among members of various Hindu caste groups.

KOTU, GAMBIA (AUG. 27) UPI - A new round of talks to negotiate a settlement of the eight-month Liberian civil war was delayed Monday to await the arrival of a delegation that may include former Liberian rebel leader Prince Johnson, officials said.

The conference, called by Gambian President Dawda Jawara under the auspices of the Economic Community of West African States, was scheduled to begin late Monday afternoon at the Kairaba Beach Hotel in Kotu, a beachfront resort about 7 miles west of the Gambian capital of Banjul.

Jawara called the conference several weeks ago in an effort to bring an end to the war between rebels and troops loyal to Liberian President Samuel Doe.

It has been at a stalemate for about two months, with rebel leader Charles Taylor's troops in control of most of the countryside and parts of the Liberian capital of Monrovia but unable to dislodge Doe from his heavily protected seaside palace.

A second rebel faction led by Prince Johnson decided to join Doe's forces earlier this month in an attempt to keep Taylor from taking power.

Johnson was expected to attend the talks in an effort to exert influence over the formation of an interim government, sources close to the negotiations said.

The expected arrival in Kotu of Johnson, an ally of Taylor's before breaking away to form his own rebel faction, probably means that Taylor himself will not appear for the talks, the sources added.

A delegation representing Taylor has been in Gambia for several days, but it was not clear Monday whether it will take part in the formal talks. Other participants include the Liberian Action Party and the Group of Concerned Liberians in the United States, two factions not involved in the hostilities.

Royal Wharton, who was on his way to serve as a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Monrovia, will attend the talks as an unofficial U.S. observer, sources close to the negotiations said.

Jawara's goal is to establish an interim government in Liberia once a peace-keeping force formed by five African states - Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Guinea, Gambia, and Ghana - is able to establish a cease-fire in the country.

The peace-keeping force has been in place since late last week.

Not all West African countries support placement of the peace-keeping troops, and there were reports from Lagos that Nigeria was expected to begin a diplomatic effort to heal rifts between governments created by formation of the international force.

Burkina Faso President Capt. Blaise Campaore has denounced the decision to create the peace-keeping force and stated that intervention will only lead to an extension of the conflict. Togo rescinded an decision to join the force just hours before it the force moved into Monrovia.

Reports of fighting over the weekend between Taylor's National Patriotic Front of Liberia guerrillas and the peacekeeping force, however, have made the establishment of a cease-fire and an interim government more difficult sources close to the talks said.

The talks have also been stalled by Taylor's unclear attitude toward them. Last week, Taylor failed to appear, dooming three days of scheduled talks between the National Patriotic Front and the other groups present in Gambia. The guerrilla representatives have already met four times with Jawara and Nigerian President Ibrahim Babangida, but the talks have produced no results.

A proposal by Patriotic Front delegate Tom Woewiyu, who would become defense minister if Taylor reaches power, to arrange a 10-day cease-fire and send a group of civilians to assess the situation in Liberia was rejected because it required Doe to leave the country for the period.

Woewiyu also called for elections to be held six months after the formation of an interim government while the Economic Community of West African States has called for elections one year after the interim government takes power.

Doe, who took power 10 years ago in a bloody coup, had earlier called new elections for next year and promised not to run again, but the rebels rejected the move as too little, too late and have demanded his immediate ouster.

Gambia's Jawara, who supervised last week's mediation efforts, said in a statement Sunday that negotiators attempted to persuade the front to agree to a cease-fire but ''it became apparent that the (front) would only be satisfied if peace were to be achieved on its own terms and to the exclusion of all other interested parties.''

Nearly 500,000 Liberian refugees have fled to three countries adjacent to the strife-torn nation, a fact-finding group from the Organization of African Unity reported during the weekend.

More and more members of the Gio and Mano tribes that supported Taylor have been fleeing Liberia because Doe's troops have targeted them for reprisal massacres, officials said.

Tens of tousands of Liberians have died, most the victims of grisly massacres.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 27) UPI - Two passengers suffered minor injuries sliding down an emergency escape chute Monday after the pilot of a United Airlines 747 jumbo jet arriving from Australia was forced to land without nose gear authorities said.

Fire engines and crash crews at Los Angeles International Airport were called to one of the four main runways, designated 25-R, about 10 a.m. by a report that the pilot was having trouble with the Boeing 747's front wheels, Fire Department spokesman Greg Acevedo said.

The pilot of United Flight 816 from Sydney, Australia, had declared an emergency aboard after he was unable to lower the nose wheel. The craft, with 323 passengers and 20 crew members aboard, circled the airport for some time before landing.

The fire crews stood by as the plane landed at 10:25 a.m. No fire was reported, but emergency rescue crews surrounded the plane after it rolled to a stop.

The pilot managed to keep the nose off the ground for about 1 1/2 miles until the craft came to a stop, Federal Aviation Administation spokeswoman Elly Brekke said.

Passengers were evacuated through emergency chutes. Two suffered minor injuries in the evacuation. A firefighter was also reported hurt, but details and names were not available.

United Airlines officials issued a brief statement, saying that the plane's nose gear failed to deploy.

HEMPSTEAD, NY (AUG. 27) UPI - The New York Jets Monday traded unsigned second-round draft pick Reggie Rembert to Cincinnati for two possible starters, linebacker Joe Kelly and tackle Scott Jones.

The two new Jets come from the Bengals, where rookie head coach Bruce Coslet was offensive coordinator the past four seasons and an assistant for nine years.

The Jets were unable to sign Rembert, a wide receiver from west Virginia, and the two sides were far apart in negotiations with the season less than two weeks away. Rembert was made expendable when New York selected Rob Moore of Syracuse in the supplemental draft over the summer.

In Cincinnati, Rembert will join a thin group of wide receivers if he signs with the Bengals.

Kelly, who started all 16 games at inside linebacker for the Bengals last year, missed the first three weeks of training camp because of a contract holdout and lost his job to Kevin Walker. Kelly is expected to start for the linebacker-poor Jets, but will probably move outside in New York's 4-3 alignment.

Kelly, a first-round draft pick from Washington in 1986, became a starter for Cincinnati midway through his rookie season. He started for the Bengals in Super Bowl XXIII after the 1988 season.

Jones, who is 6-foot-5 and 278 pounds, played in 15 games as a reserve last season and impressed the Bengals coaches after he was drafted in the 12th round out of Washington. He joins a thin Jets offensive line, which has only left tackle Jeff Criswell as a returning starter.

The Jets also placed 12-year veteran defensive tackle Marty Lyon on injured reserve with a torn right bicep and waived veteran defensive backs Carl Howard and George Radachowsky, tackle Jeff Oliver and linebacker Demetrious Douglas.

Lyons, who underwent surgery Sunday, will be lost for the year and the injury may end his career.

SAN FRANCISCO (AUG. 27) UPI - San Francisco supervisors introduced union-backed legislation Monday that would set strict safety standards for workers who use video-display terminals, or VDTs, on the job.

Backers of the legislation said they hoped it would serve as a model for local governments nationwide that want to set VDT safety standards in the absence of state or federal guidelines.

The legislation was believed to be the first local VDT ordinance introduced since a similar Suffolk County, N.Y., law was struck down by a New York state judge earlier this year.

The San Francisco legislation, which was backed by a majority of city supervisors, would require employers to provide adjustable workstations and chairs, regular rest breaks and training for workers who spend at least half their time at VDTs.

The legislation would apply only to companies with 15 or more workers who regularly use VDTs. Violations would carry fines of up to $500 a day.

Doctors have blamed the proliferation of video-display terminals in the workplace for a sharp increase nationwide in worker-related illnesses, including wrist and hand injuries caused by repetitive motions, such as typing.

Several injured workers appeared at a news conference at City Hall to promote stricter safety standards. Charles Ward, a former reservations sales agent for Delta Airlines, wore braces on both wrists, the result, he said, of bilateral tendonitis caused by typing at a keyboard all day.

''If there had been appropriate computer hardware and guidelines for people who work at a computer, it may have helped keep my condition from becoming chronic,'' Ward said.

Becky Hogue, a directory assistance operator for Pacific Bell, said she could no longer cut her own meat at dinner because she had lost strength in her hands. Hogue said she asked her employer to provide a support for her wrists and she was given two towels stuffed in a pillow case and taped in front of her keyboard.

Under the proposed legislation, employers in San Francisco would have two years to adopt the new VDT guidelines, which include making wrist rests available to all VDT workers. The ordinance also requires the city's director of public health to conduct research on the effect of VDT use on pregnant women and a user's vision.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 27) UPI - The fast-developing prospects for Middle East peace may stop the recent climb of retail prices at the gasoline pump over the next few weeks, oil industry analysts said Monday.

''I'm pretty much expecting retail prices to hold steady for awhile, although that could change very quickly,'' said Francis Morris, an analyst with Provident National Bank in Philadelphia.

As crude oil prices plunged nearly $4 a barrel Monday, wholesale gasoline prices fell nearly 15 cents a gallon as new developments indicated the growing possibility of negotiations in the Iraqi crisis.

''The markets are reacting to sentiment, and the sentiment is heavily toward a negotiated settlement,'' Morris said. ''I would not expect to see prices at the gas pump jerked around for the immediate future unless something big happens in the Middle East.''

Analyst Michael Mayer of Wertheim Schroeder in San Francisco said, ''It's almost impossible right now to predict what direction gasoline prices will go, but there may be some stability. The companies can't be in the position of changing their prices every day.''

Thomas Samuelson, an energy analyst with Duff & Phelps in Chicago, said, ''The changing perception of what is happening in the Middle East is what is driving the price of oil down right now, but it's difficult to say what the long-term effect will be.''

''If Iraq does invade Saudi Arabia, the price of oil would probably go to $40 a barrel,'' Samuelson said.

Because of the loss of about 4 million barrels of oil from the world's supply, the price of crude oil had nearly doubled from $18 a barrel in July to more than $30 a barrel before Monday.

But gas prices had not been nearly as volatile since the crisis began with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2. The Lundberg Survey of retail gasoline prices nationwide, taken Friday, showed an increase of an average of a nickel a gallon over the last two weeks.

That rate of increase was half that of the period immediately after the Iraqi invasion.

According to the survey of some 13,000 outlets, the weighted average price per gallon was 133.16 cents, up 5.22 cents from the last survey on Aug. 10.

Trilby Lundberg, director of the survey, said that in the same two-week period, wholesale prices increased by more than 9 cents but retailers have chosen not to pass all of that through to consumers.

Lundberg also said prices could be pulled down in early September by the traditional drop in demand following the peak driving months of July and August.

Analyst Samuelson said that the lag in retail prices compared to wholesale prices shows that marketers have been showing some restraint in passing along price increases. Additionally, the lag also reflects reflects relatively high levels of crude and gasoline inventories, he said.

Richard Drobnick, director of International Business Education & Research program at University of Southern California, agreed.

''The lag in retail price is due to the low-cost crude that is still in the system,'' Drobnick said. ''If the oil companies have to buy more and more on the spot market, not only will their costs go up, but so will their profit opportunities.''

Drobnick said companies have been holding down retail prices because of social pressure and because many of them probably thought that the Iraqi crisis was not going to be a long-term situation.

''The bottom line is that retail prices will have to move the same way that wholesale prices do,'' Drobnick said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - Several farm and food-related bills - such as seafood inspection, pesticide residue rules and farm loan reforms - face an uncertain future as time runs out for Congress to act, observers said Monday.

They unanimously agreed only one piece of legislation is sure to be enacted - the new farm policy law. With Congress aiming to adjourn in early October, other bills could be abandoned as too controversial, too unimportant or too slow in development.

The farm bill ''is a must'' for passage, said one House staff worker, because it would succeed a 1985 law that expires this fall. The bill would set the terms for commodity support programs for the coming five years as well as export, research, food aid and public feeding programs.

If necessary, action could be delayed on other matters, such as reforming the money-losing crop insurance program or revising food residue laws, the staff worker said, but the farm bill is a top-priority item.

With that in mind, there have been efforts in the House and Senate to use the farm bill as a vehicle for gaining passage of other initiatives.

''It was assumed from the start of the farm bill process that ... the one bill certain to go was the farm bill,'' said Ken Cook of the Center for Resource Economics, an environmental group. ''We tried to add a few more box cars.''

Proponents succeeded in toughening the protection for wetlands in the House and Senate versions of the farm bill. The bills contain slightly different provisions for organic food labeling, protecting sensitive lands and requiring farmers to keep records of pesticide use.

The outlook for other bills is less certain. Proposals to revise food safety laws have been hobbled by disagreements such as whether to use the administration's ''negligible risk'' standard or ban residues that pose a risk of cancer higher than one in 1 million over a lifetime.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., said last week that he doubted food safety legislation would pass this year.

If pesticide residue legislation is sidelined, the major consumer bill of the year could be creation of a mandatory federal seafood inspection program - assuming it passes. A voluntary system now inspects a fraction of the seafood consumed each year by Americans.

A well-informed Senate staff worker said there was ''a good chance'' for passage of the inspection bill. There are two rival plans in the Senate and three in the House. This is the first time in two decades that a seafood bill has achieved committee passage.

''We're optimistic,'' said a spokeswoman for a consumer group, Public Voice for Food and Health Policy.

SOFIA (AUG. 27) UPI - Bulgaria's major political parties sharply condemned Monday the overnight ransacking and torching of the offices of the ruling Socialist party, an attack linked by Socialist leaders to "neo-fascists" who were propelling the country "toward civil war."

About 20,000 demonstrators converged on Sofia's main square late Monday to protest the attack, which caused extensive damage inside the party's headquarters and two nearby office buildings.

"This barbaric act is one of the most dangerous manifestations ... of those reactionary forces and hawks of the opposition which we call neo-fascists," Socialist leader Alexander Lilov told the rally. "They want to push the country to the precipice and toward civil war. But we should not be afraid ... We can defend ourselves," he said.

Hundreds of protesters broke away from a massive anti-communist demonstration late Sunday and stormed the headquarters of the former Communist Party, now known as the Bulgarian Socialist Party, witnesses said. They smashed windows, ransacked offices and set several fires in the worst unrest since the overthrow of hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov in November.

The attackers blocked firefighters from entering the building for several hours until riot police regained control early Monday. More than 50 people were detained by police, including 39 who were expected to face charges, the official news agence BTA said. It said several people were injured by broken glass.

The attack was strongly condemned by both the Socialist and the democratic opposition, with both sides appealing for an end to the violence. Union of Democratic Forces leader Peter Beron called for a ten-day moratorium on new demonstrations.

But Lilov urged Bulgarians to take to the streets in a "day of protest" - capped by a mass demonstration Monday night - to denounce the attack on his party's headquarters.

Demonstrators at the rally waved Bulgarian and Socialist party flags and chanted, "Fascists" and "No more retreats." A shouting match erupted with a smaller group of opposition supporters entered the square and began chanting, "Murderers" and "Mafia." There were no reports of violence, and the demonstrators later dispersed peacefully.

President Zhelyu Zhelev, former leader of the UDF, appealed for calm in a nationally broadcast address late Sunday. "This is a gross violation of public peace which nothing can justify and which puts the country in the danger of riots, chaos and civil war," BTA quoted Zhelev as saying. "This act is not a struggle for democracy but one of recklessly pushing the country toward military dictatorship."

The anti-communist demonstration Sunday was called to protest the Socialists' failure to tear down a giant red star atop of the party building. Socialist lawmakers had promised the star - which many Bulgarians regard as a blatant symbol of Stalinism - would be removed by the weekend.

Witnesses and Bulgarian journalists said police seemed strangely passive during the early hours of the assault on the party building. Several police officers later explained they had been waiting for direct orders to intervene.

National police director Christo Velichkov told BTA he believes the circumstances of the attack "raise reasonable suspicion of a conspiracy," but he did not elaborate.

Sofia was rife with rumors that the Socialists had allowed or even orchestrated the arson attack to destroy secret documents in the party's archives - a charge party officials flatly denied.

When Lilov and former President Peter Mladenov arrived to inspect the damaged building they were booed and jeered by a crowd of onlookers, some of whom began chanting "Bokov did it all." They were referring to Philip Bokov, an outspoken member of the BSP parliamentary caucus who once served as government spokesman under Mladenov.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 27) UPI - Israel said Monday it would be satisfied if the gulf crisis ended without fighting, but warned that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein would still pose a threat to world peace if he remained in power.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens each said in separate interviews that Israel had no intention of attacking any Arab country.

Appearing on Israel Educational Television's ''New Evening'' news program, Arens said he hoped the crisis would not be resolved with Saddam still in control of Iraq.

''We will be satisfied if the crisis ended without blood being spilt,'' he said. ''If Saddam Hussein remains in power and if the same weapons remain in his possession, then there is reason for us to worry, and for worry in the entire area and in the whole world.''

Arens said one positive aspect of the nearly 4-week-old crisis resulting from the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait was that the world had become aware of the danger Saddam presented.

The defense minister also dismissed a statement by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz that he believed Israel would attack his country during an Iraq-U.S. conflict.

''We are not dragging anyone into a war or into anything else,'' Arens said. ''We are presently not involved. Kuwait is situated more than 600 miles from Israel. We will be involved if we are attacked of course.''

Israel has repeatedly warned it would retaliate if attacked.

Shamir echoed the defense minister's sentiments that Israel did not habor hostile intentions.

''Israel has no plans to attack any Arab state, even the most extreme one '' the prime minister said. ''We want to live in peace in this area. If they don't touch us, we won't touch anyone.''

Reacting to Aziz's statement, Shamir said, ''I hope we will overcome this crisis peacefully.''

In an effort to increase civil defense preparedness, the city of Tel Aviv began distributing a booklet telling residents where to find their local bomb shelter and what to do during an attack on the coastal city, Israel Radio reported.

''It refers to shelters, it refers to chemical warfare, (it tells how) to take precautions,'' Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat told the radio. ''Since people were to a very small extent in a very small situation of panic because they didn't know (what to do), here we give them all the answers.''

Since the start of the gulf crisis, Israeli officials and the media have stepped up efforts to instruct the public on civil defense procedures to counter increased concern about the prospect of an Iraqi conventional or chemical weapons attack.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - The State Department announced Monday the expulsion of 36 Iraqi diplomats in retaliation for Iraq's actions against Americans in Kuwait and Iraq, and it held open the possibility of further moves against Iraq.

In the steps announced by State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler, the Iraqi Embassy in Washington will be forced to send 36 diplomats home as quickly as possible, leaving a total of 19 diplomatic personnel in Washington.

That is exactly the same as the number of American diplomats left operating in Kuwait and Iraq.

President Bush, speaking to reporters at his summer home in Maine, said he does not believe the steps would escalate tensions in the Persian Gulf crisis, stressing that, unlike the situation in Iraq, the United States is not detaining any Iraqis.

''Nobody will be held against their will,'' Bush said. ''They are all free to go. In essense, we're kind of keeping some reasonable parallelism in terms of numbers. So I don't think there's any chance of misunderstanding on that account.''

Deputy Assistant Secretary of State David Mack talked late Sunday to representatives of 34 other nations who have been restricted by the Iraqis in Kuwait, and they were urged to take similar steps against the Iraqis.

Visiting Bush in Maine, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said if his nation viewed itself as being in a similar situation, it also would take steps against Iraqi diplomats in Ottawa.

''What you have is an abuse of one of the most fundamental privileges of democratic and civilized nations, namely to be represented in another country without our representatives being harassed or intimidated or assaulted,'' Mulroney said. ''Those assaults can take place in many ways. We have to make sure that the fundamental rule of international law is respected.''

The Iraqis remaining in Washington will be forbidden to travel 25 miles beyond the center of the District of Columbia. The Iraqi mission to the United Nations will not be affected by the new orders.

The State Department, in describing the ''measured'' steps against the Iraqis, linked it directly to the blockade of the American Embassy in Kuwait and the seizure by Iraqi military authorities of Americans as human shields to prevent Iraqi military and industrial sites from being attacked.

Tutwiler said that seven more Americans have been seized by the Iraqis during the past 24 hours, bringing to 63 the confirmed number of Americans in the custody of the Iraqi authorities. She said it is not known where the Americans were being held.

In addition to limiting the number and travel of the Iraqi diplomats, the State Department also informed the Iraqis that the diplomatic dependents will also be expected to leave. It said the visas for the remaining diplomats will be changed so that they will have to apply for permission to re-enter the United States every time they leave the country.

The Iraqis were informed of the new measures by deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger Monday morning when he called in the Iraqi ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat.

Al-Mashat is not being expelled.

Tutwiler said that Secretary of State James Baker, in Wyoming on a vacation that had been scheduled to last until Labor Day, will return to Washington early Tuesday to meet with President Bush.

Tutwiler said she would not discuss the next steps the United States had in mind if the gulf crisis continues, but she alluded several times to such further moves and a continuing study of U.S. options.

In a prepared statement, the department pointedly said that Iraq's diplomats at the United Nations will not be affected ''at this time.''

Tutwiler noted that food and electricity at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait City have been cut. The ambassador and a staff of about 10 are believed to have enough food, water and fuel for auxiliary power to last ''several days.''

There has been no attempt by the Iraqis to enter the diplomatic compound, but the entrance remains blocked by Iraqi military forces.

According to Tutwiler, 25 other embassies in Kuwait remain open and staffed. When the crisis began there were about 65 foreign embassies operating in the Kuwaiti capital.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - A new type of pill with the potential to release medication in the stomach constantly for up to 60 hours may free patients from taking pills for several days or more, researchers said Monday.

Before it is swallowed, a ''hydrogel'' pill looks like an ordinary solid tablet, with drug hidden away inside a jelly-like center. But when a hydrogel is exposed to stomach-like conditions in the test-tube, it slowly absorbs water, starts swelling and gradually delivers the drug in a fashion similar to a time-released drug capsule.

Kinam Park, developer of the hydrogel and an associate pharmacy professsor at Purdue Univeristy in West Lafayette, Ind., said studies of dogs show hydrogels are capable of staying in the stomach for up to 60 hours. That is five times longer than the duration of current commercial oral-drug forms, said Park, whose work was funded by ICI Pharmaceuticals Group of Wilmington, Del.

Another advantage of hydrogels is that they appear to release drugs at a constant rate, while other oral routes of drug delivery release drugs only sporadically.

''The hydrogel overcomes the problem of drug levels fluctuating in the bloodstream, which is caused by taking multiple doses of the same medication over time,'' Park told the American Chemical Society's annual meeting.

Hydrogels' unique staying power stems from their surface, which becomes soft, flexible and slippery in water and enables the medication to resist strong stomach contractions that occur every two hours to move food through the intestines, Park said.

The new pills do not interfere with digestion in dogs, but so far the animals have only received hydrogels that do not contain drugs, he added. Studies of drug-containing hydrogels in animals are expected to begin next month.

''Our initial goal was to develop a drug-delivery form that would keep drug levels in the bloodstream constant for 24 hours,'' says Park, who has been working on hydrogels since 1986. ''It's not inconceivable that hydrogels could be developed to release drugs for one week at a time.''

Hydrogels' main components are a biodegradable polymer and albumin, a natural protein. After the hydrogel has finished releasing drugs in the body, it is broken down by a stomach enzyme and eliminated from the body naturally.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 27) UPI - The State Department named Libya Monday as the chief backer of an abortive terrorist raid on an Israeli beach, calling it ''one of the clearest examples ever established of state sponsorship of terrorism.''

The charge, and supporting evidence that Libya supplied the mother ship for the May 30 operation, came in a white paper released Monday by the State Department.

Abu Abbas, a Palestinian leader with a history of connections to terrorism claimed responsibility for the failed raid on a beach near Tel Aviv. Since he is a member of the Executive Council of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the United States has suspended its dialogue with the PLO until the organization distances itself from the incident.

In the white paper, the State Department said planning for the operation began as early as October 1988, with training of the Palestinian commandos taking place at Libyan military bases.

The report said Libya supplied the the assault boats used in the attack and also purchased the mother ship, a small freighter, ''Tiny Star,'' in April. The freighter's previous name had been ''Inger M.''

The white paper said the Tiny Star was first spotted in port in Tripoli, and was then moved to a Libyan naval base east of Tripoli, where six of the assault boats were loaded aboard.

It then sailed to Ras el-Hilal, a port near the Egyptian border, where 16 Palestinians were taken aboard.

After launching the assault boats on May 30, the Tiny Star, according to the report, sailed west, mingling in with Suez Canal traffic and then returned to Tripoli in late June.

The Israeli navy spotted the Palestinian assault boats, sinking several and capturing two of the boats, along with four Palestinians who said that their instructions had been to create as many civilian casualties as possible. No Israelis were hurt in the operation.

''The May 30 attack showed that Libya continues to consider international terrorism to be a tool of its foreign policy,'' the State Department said.

''Tripoli's support for the attack makes a mockery of its public promises in 1989 to end its support for terrorism.''

The State Department said it believes that ''pressure is needed to persuade (Libya) to change its policy'' and it has asked other nations to join the campaign until Libya stops its support of terrorism.

The report also linked Libya with attacks in the Philippines on American targets by the New Peoples Army.

In addition, it said Abu Bakr, the leader of the violent attempt to overthrow the government of Trinidad and Tobago, has publicly acknoweldged links to Libya.

DALLAS (AUG. 27) UPI - The Justice Department Monday said E-Systems Inc., a defense electronics company, agreed to plead guilty to defrauding the government on contracts and to pay $4.65 million to settle criminal and civil charges.

The contracts were for Army field radios, built by an E-Systems division and used by soldiers and commanders in the field. The nation's 58th largest defense contractor had been accused of falsifying the test results.

The government said that in a plea, entered Monday in a Florida federal district court, E-Systems and its Memcor Division in Bushnell, Fla., agreed to plead guilty to a three-count criminal information.

The information charged that the company and others conspired to falsify records and test results of tactical field radios supplied to the Army. The company also agreed to plead guilty to filing and receiving payments based on the submission of false information.

The department said E-Systems will be pay $2 million criminal fine and $1.8 million in restitution. An additional $850,000 will be paid as civil settlment.

The agreement also called for E-Systems to drop its pending $38 million lawsuit against the government.

The government said that the testing practices themselves were defective. It said the test and performance records were repeatedly altered and that the company concealed repairs and defects in test radios to ensure that the Army would accept and pay for them.

The case resulted from an investigation by the Justice Department, the Army's Criminal Investigation Command, and the FBI. The investigation began after the 1985 termination of two E-Systems contracts.

E-Systems appealed the termination to the Armed Services Board of Contract

Appeal and that the testing program irregularities were noticed at the time.

Earlier this month, three former managers and a former supervisor at Memcor Division were charged by a federal grand jury with repeatedly falsifying records and test results to conceal failures and defects in the radios, the government said.

DETROIT (AUG. 27) UPI - The Roadmaster name is back on a Buick for the first time in 33 years. And there are even hints of a port hole or two.

General Motors Corp.'s Buick division was expected to announce Tuesday at its new model preview in Novi, Mich., that its largest Buicks will carry the Roadmaster name, used from 1936 to 1958 on its posher models.

The name will appear this fall on a large, aerodynamically styled rear-drive station wagon that shares the same platform as GM's new Chevrolet Caprice and Oldsmobile Custom Cruiser wagons that will also be 1991 models.

A Roadmaster and Roadmaster Limited sedan will bow in the spring as 1992 models, Buick executives said. The Roadmaster Estate wagon will be powered by a 170-horsepower 5-liter V-8 engine, while the sedans will get a 180 hp 5.7-liter V-8.

Appearing on the Roadmaster sedan will be one of the most famous Buick design hallmarks ever - the ''port holes'' that adorned the front fenders of many Buicks starting in 1949.

The 1992-model Roadmaster has a hint of them on its sail panels, described by Buick's chief exterior designer, Wayne A. Kady, as four ''segments.''

But Kady stressed that the Roadmaster is anything but a throwback in time.

''We believe that the traditional, large American rear-wheel drive luxury car should not stand still in terms of progress,'' he said, adding that the new Roadmaster ''combines a traditional name with contemporary technology.''

Buick also plans to offer a limited number of its new front-drive Park Avenue sedans with a supercharged version of its 3800 V-6 engine. The Park Avenue and Park Avenue Ultra sedans, which have been completely redesigned for 1991, have a normally aspirated version of that engine as standard equipment.

Both the new Roadmaster and Park Avenue sedans will have a driver's side air bag and anti-lock brakes as standard equipment.

NEW YORK (AUG. 27) UPI - Stocks had their best day of 1990 and their biggest gain in almost a year Monday, with the runup fueled by fading fears of war in the Mideast and a resulting plunge in oil prices, as well as by a bond market rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped 49.50 Friday, soared 78.71 to close at 2611.63. The gain was the biggest of the year and the best since a surge of 88.12 posted last Oct. 16, when the market bounced back from the 190-point ''mini-crash'' the previous trading day.

Monday's advance was broad-based as well, with winners leading losers 1,457-254 - a margin of 7 to 1 among the 1,982 issues traded.

Among broad market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 5.14 to 176.19 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rallied 9.93 to 321.44. The price of an average share surged 90 cents.

Secondary markets also scored strong advances.

NYSE volume was moderate, amounting to 160,150,000 shares vs. 199,040,000 traded Friday.

The Dow soared 50 points in the first 10 minutes of activity, triggering for the first time the exchange's rule curbing stock buying linked to index arbitrage. The rule says such buying can only be completed after the issues involved trade at a lower price and remains in effect unless the Dow retreats to a 25-point gain. The blue-chip index showed a gain of as much as 94 points during the day but ended off those highs.

Analysts called the sharp gain a ''reflex action'' after the market's plunge since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2. The Dow industrials had lost more than 415 points - about 14 percent of their value - since the invasion, before rallying Friday and Monday.

''Thursday's smashing brought us to an extremely oversold condition,'' said Ralph Bloch, chief market analyst at Raymond, James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Analysts mainly attributed the dramatic surge to relief among investors that the situation in the Middle East seems to have stabilized, at least for now.

''The market had discounted (factored into stock prices) a war,'' Bloch said, ''and then when it didn't happen over the weekend, we rallied. I think even if some hostility had started over weekend, we would have sold off for about 21 minutes and then rallied with people saying, 'Let's get some bargains.'''

The market was heartened by news that U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar plans to meet Thursday with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, boostinghopes that the crisis could be resolved diplomatically.

Falling oil prices and a rally in the bond market also gave rise to sentiment that stocks had fallen too far, too fast.

Oil futures for October delivery closed down $4 a barrel amid reports of progress among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in efforts to boost production and in light of the relatively stable state of affairs in the Persian Gulf, analysts said.

Bloch noted that many oil stocks began to retreat last week even while oil prices were rallying ''in anticipation of something like this,'' Bloch said. Oil stocks followed the dominant trend Monday, gaining even during a plunge in crude prices. And airline issues, heavy users of fuel, rallied, sending the Dow transportation average up almost 4.5 percent. The average soared 38.32 to 908.03.

A rally in Treasury issues - and a consequent drop in interest rates - also fueled the rally in stocks. Bonds were up 1 1/2 points in late action bolstered by the plunge in oil prices, since an oil price rise is an indicator of inflation. A Wall Street Journal report that the Federal Reserve is leaning toward lowering interest rates to forestall a recession also boosted the bond market.

So where will Wall Street go from here? ''We won't take off in a straight-line advance, but any pullback or testing of the low hit Thursday should be successful,'' said Bloch. ''I think the peak downside momentum was reached on Thursday, and any subsequent test of those levels will not have that kind of intensity.''

On the trading floor, Philip Morris was the most active issue, up 1 1/2 to 44 3/4.

Wal-Mart followed, surging 2 1/4 to 29. General Electric was third, jumping 2 1/8 to 63 1/2. Boeing was also active, advancing 2 1/2 to 48 3/8.

Among other blue chips, AT&T climbed 1 1/4 to 33 1/8, IBM rallied 4 to 104 3/8, Procter & Gamble surged 4 to 75 7/8, Merck soared 3 5/8 to 81 and General Motors rallied 1 5/8 to 39.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 197,941,480 shares, compared with 241,133,530 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices rallied in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index jumped 4.44 to 320.73. Advances led declines 480-157 among the 831 issues traded. The price of an average share rose 15 cents. Composite volume was 20,164,000 shares vs. 24,619,695 shares traded Friday.

Corona Corp. Class A led the Amex issues, down 7/8 to 5 3/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rallied 13.94 to 381.27 - the over-the-counter market indicator's biggest one-day gain since rebounding from the October 1987 market crash. It surged 16.25 on Oct. 30, 1987.

(AUG. 27) UPI - The United States today gave 36 Iraqi diplomats three days to get out of the country. The Bush administration is encouraging other countries to follow suit. The move is a payback for Iraq's dragnet around U-S Embassy officials in Kuwait... and for Iraq's taking of hostages. President Bush said the move helps equalize the number of Iraqi and U-S diplomats on each other's turf.

The U-N secretary-general during his meeting with Iraq's foreign minister, he will seek the withdrawal of Iraqi soldiers from Kuwait and the release of detained foreigners. Both conditions have been called for in U-N resolutions. U-N leader Javier Perez de Cuellar has known the Iraqi foreign minister for many years. Perez de Cuellar mediated the cease-fire between Iran and Iraq in 1988.

Another verdict in an Iran-Contra-related case was returned today. A federal jury in a civil case in Miami refused to award damages in a lawsuit filed after a supply plane for Nicaraguan rebels crashed. Airman Eugene Hasenfus and the family of his deceased co-pilot filed the suit. Wallace Sawyer was killed in the crash of the Southern Air Transport plane four years ago. Hasenfus was jailed for three months in Nicaragua.

Two aircraft companies and three executives were indicted in Miami today on charges of conspiring to export missiles and airplane parts to Iran. The indictment named Bet-Air Incorported and its chairman and general manager. Also charged were Victoria Aircraft of Luxembourg and its operator. Prosecutors say the shipments to Iran from 1983 to 1985 included parts for the the Grumann F-14 Tomcat.

Vaughan was a 35-year-old two-time Grammy-winning blues guitarist.

NEW YORK (AUG. 27) UPI - Boris Becker and Steffi Graf came through with straight sets victories Monday to begin defense of their U.S. Open titles in impressive fashion.

Becker, faced with a difficult opening day opponent in Juan Aguilera, ranked 19th in the world, responded in championship style by posting a 7-5 6-3, 6-2 victory over the 28-year-old Spaniard.

Graf, seven months removed from her last Grand Slam crown, faced a different kind of obstacle than her countryman, enduring two rain delays before completing a 6-1, 6-1 rout of Canadian qualifier Maureen Drake.

Graf, the world's No. 1 woman player, did suffer the indignity of dropping her service once before capturing her 11th consecutive match since losing the Wimbledon semifinals to Zina Garrison.

Becker, mindful of his first-round loss to Goran Ivanisevic in the French Open, as well as a defeat to Aguilera in the Hamburg final in May, stumbled only slightly before closing strong.

After breaking for a 3-2 edge in the opening set, Becker fell behind 5-3. But he swept the next four games to take the set.

Again in the second set Becker won the last four games, and in the third set he jumped to a 4-1 lead.

''It felt this year much better than any other year, even with the rain delay,'' Becker said of his return to Center Court, where he defeated Ivan Lendl in the 1989 final.

This was only Aguilera's second appearance at the U.S. Open, the first since 1984, and Becker commented, ''He hasn't played many hard court tournaments, and I hope he doesn't play many more.''

Becker delivered only two aces, but put in 66 percent of his first serves and totaled 11 service winners.

Graf had won eight of nine Grand Slam titles before failing in the French and at Wimbledon, but she since has had sinus surgery and says she is back in top form.

The Stadium Court match required merely 41 minutes of playing time, but started in bright sunshine under temperatures of 90 degrees, and ended in premature darkness just a few minutes before the start of another heavy rainstorm.

French Open champion Monica Seles, awarded the honor of playing the first match on Center Court, crushed Elena Pampoulova of Bulgaria, 6-0, 6-0, in 44 minutes.

Seles, a 16-year-old Yugoslavian who lives in Florida, now has won 42 of her last 43 matches, the only loss coming to Garrison in the Wimbledon quarterfinals.

A thunderstorm struck the stadium with Graf leading 4-1, 30-30 in the opening set. Following a delay of 62 minutes, Drake reached break point, but was unable to convert.

A second suspension of 25 minutes came with Graf leading 2-1 in the second set. Drake, an amateur ranked No. 173, broke Graf's serve in the second game, but the 21-year-old West German retaliated in the next game.

After the second delay, Graf swept the final four games.

''I think she was quite nervous, you could feel it,'' Graf said of Drake. ''It was quite good to win a match like that.''

Drake agreed, saying, ''The nerves were rattling in my body. I was thinking 'my God, I'm playing Steffi.' I was just thinking about getting a game.''

Asked if she wished her opponent had played with more consistency, Graf joked, ''Then I would be waiting for the court to dry again.''

Seles is making a conscious effort to minimize her grunting on court, and said it was easy to control Monday because of the easy time she enjoyed. Pampoulova, 18 and ranked No. 75, won merely 23 points. She never had a break point and only in one game did she get to deuce.

Seles, ranked third in the world, believes that in theory the U.S. Open should determine this year's top woman player. She won the French, Graf won the Australian and No. 2 Martina Navratilova captured Wimbledon.

''If one of us won here, she would have two Grand Slams,'' Seles explained. ''It is going to be very competitive here. It's been many years since women's tennis has been this close. It's a more open field here and anyone can beat anyone.''

Thomas Muster, seeded sixth among the men, overcame Aki Rahunen of Finland 5-7, 6-4, 6-0, 3-0 (ret.), then said he was appealing a severe penalty imposed Sunday by the Association of Tennis Professionals.

Muster was suspended for 10 weeks and fined $20,000 for violations of the ATP code of Conduct. The Austrian retired after dropping the first game of a match against Claudio Pistolesi Aug. 6 because of an injury.

Jim Courier, the 14th seed, defeated Australian Wally Masur, 6-4, 6-0, 5-7 6-1, and Tim Mayotte, a quarterfinalist at Flushing Meadows in 1989, was an opening round victim this year, bowing to Thierry Champion of France in four sets.

Eighth seed Mary Joe Fernandez breezed past Ann Henricksson, 6-1, 6-1, and No. 11 Helena Sukova barely edged Britain's Jo Durie, 1-6, 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (7-5), in 2 hours and 17 minutes. Sukova, a 1986 Open finalist, was saved by her big serve as she registered 5 aces and 14 service winners.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Imatron announced revenues of $2,797,000 for the quarter ended June 30, 1990, as compared to $3,955,000 for the June 30, 1989 quarter.

The net loss was $1,653,000, as compared to $982,000 in the prior quarter. Revenues for the six-month period ending June 30 were $5,096,000, as compared to $8,417,000 in the prior six-month period.

Results were unfavorably impacted by fewer machine shipments, continued high R&D expenditures for new products, and lower parts and services revenues. The backlog for ultrafast scanners increased to five units at June 30 compared to three units at Dec. 31.

A major R&D effort in the company has been the development of an explosive detection baggage scanner for use at airports. The company met certain pre-prototype demonstration specifications in May and received an additional advance of $500,000 in July from FI.M.A.I. Holding, S.A., a parent of its European distributor.

Imatron and FI.M.A.I. have entered into an agreement to establish a joint venture corporation, Imatron Industrial Products (IIP), to proceed with the commercial development of the new baggage scanner.

The new joint venture will provide better product focus and a facility for funding a greatly expanded program. Effective on Aug. 1, IIP will contract with Imatron for services and facilities resulting in a major reduction in Imatron's research and development expenditures. Imatron continues to discuss financial participation by other companies in the development of new generations of Ultrafast Scanner products.

Imatron Inc. designs, manufactures and markets CT products for medical diagnostic imaging, industrial applications and airport security baggage screening. Imatron products include the electron-beam Ultrafast CT scanner, which captures high-speed images of the heart as well as radiological chest and body scans free of motion-induced artifacts.

The company also produces compact CT products that provide high throughput and continuous scanning capability in medical imaging and airport security explosives detection.

DALLAS (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - To demonstrate that its EtherSwitch EPS-700 creates a parallel network environment that can improve Ethernet throughput 300 percent, Kalpana Inc. will use Novell Inc.'s LANalyzer network analyzer and LANtern network monitor in a real-time test environment at NetWorld Dallas, Sept. 10-13.

The EtherSwitch can interconnect seven different Ethernet segments to support concurrent Ethernet LAN conversations. A six-port EtherSwitch will be used in the NetWorld test.

One EtherSwitch port will be connected to a NetWare 386 file server. A second port will be attached to 386-based workstations running Novell's performance benchmark program and an SNMP (Simple Network Management Protocol) network console.

Two EtherSwitch ports will be connected to Novell LANalyzers that will load the network, and the remaining two ports will support LANalyzers to monitor traffic through the EtherSwitch.

Using Novell's network performance test, the 386-based workstations will be able to generate approximately five Mbits/sec of network traffic through the switch. The two LANalyzer traffic generators will each produce 9.7 Mbits/sec of network traffic.

Using Novell's LANtern, it will be shown that the EtherSwitch can support three simultaneous data conversations totalling 25 Mbits/sec of data traffic, or more.

The SNMP-based network console is capable of measuring overall Ethernet traffic by polling the LANtern monitoring devices attached to each segment. The LANtern network monitor gathers statistics to show overall network capacity, such as per-station and per-conversation statistics.

The EtherSwitch EPS-700 can support from two to seven Ethernet Packet Processor module ports. Prices range from $4,995 for the 3/8wo-port version to $9,995 for the fully configured version.

SAN DIEGO (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Windows 3.0 users now can take advantage of the memory-management features of Turbo EMS software from Merrill & Bryan Enterprises Inc., thanks to a new agreement between the San Diego-based firm and Microsoft Corp.

By using Microsoft's new virtual device driver (VxD), which makes Turbo EMS compatible with Windows 3.0, personal computer users can load network drivers and other programs into high memory, giving them more room for non-Windows applications.

The VxD driver will be standard with Turbo EMS 5.0, the latest version of Merrill & Bryan's memory-management software package.

''This virtual device driver ensures a robust solution for users of Turbo EMS in the Windows 3.0 environment,'' said Rich Abel, Microsoft's group product manager for Windows. ''We are happy to be working with Merrill & Bryan to provide support for Windows 3.0 and Turbo EMS users.''

According to Al Merrill, executive vice president of sales, Merrill &

Bryan's enhancement of Turbo EMS for VxD bundling will allow Turbo EMS users to use the high DOS memory-loading capabilities of Turbo EMS and still run Windows in 386 enhanced mode.

''While slightly insulating Windows from some of the memory-manager software features, the VxD gives Turbo EMS a more structured interface so we don't have to reverse engineer the entire software program for each new Windows release,'' he said.

''The Turbo EMS update also will include an automatic install, mapping of multiple blocks of memory in the high DOS memory area, a best fit loading of TSRs and device drivers and compatibility with Microsoft's HIMEM.SYS driver,'' Merrill added.

''Turbo EMS 5.0 provides full EMS support for both 386- and non-386-based PCs, as well as the capability to relocate TSRs, device drivers and network shells on both 386 and non-386 systems,'' he said.

The complete program is offered on one diskette for $99.95.

SUNNYVALE, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Donald J. Massaro has been named chairman of SF2 Corp., a developer of high-performance fault-tolerant intelligent storage systems, it was announced Tuesday.

Massaro, a 20-year veteran of the data processing industry, has been chairman and chief executive officer of Metaphor Computer Systems Inc., a producer of desktop decision support systems which he co-founded in 1982. He will continue as its chairman.

Massaro was a co-founder of Shugart Associates, a floppy disk drive pioneer, in 1973 and subsequently president of Xerox Corp.'s Office Products Division, which acquired Shugart in 1977. NEW YORK (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Federal Express Corp.'s $350-million medium-term notes, series A, are rated triple-'B'-plus by S&P. The notes are a final drawdown of an August 1989, $600-million Rule 415 shelf filing.

An 'E-3' event risk covenant ranking is assigned to the medium-term notes.

In addition, the company's triple-'B'-plus senior debt and industrial revenue bond ratings outstanding on $800 million of debt and its 'A-2' commercial paper rating are affirmed.

Through its integrated air-ground transportation system, Federal Express provides express delivery of small packages and documents throughout the United States and Canada, Europe and parts of Asia. In addition, the company also transports heavyweight air cargo shipments worldwide.

Federal Express' ratings are supported by its extremely strong competitive position in the domestic air-freight industry, moderating international losses and slowing capital-expenditure levels.

Nevertheless, any near-term rebound in key credit measures will likely be limited by continued international losses, its heavy interest and aircraft operating lease burden and a possible resurgence of competitive pricing pressures in the domestic market.

For fiscal 1990, the company posted $115.8 million of income before accounting adjustments on just over $7 billion of revenues, compared with $166.5 million on $5.2 billion in the prior year.

Should the company's international losses worsen or should the level of capital expenditures increase significantly, then the ratings could be jeopardized, S&P said.

DUBLIN, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Lucky Stores Inc. Tuesday announced that any of its employees who are called to active duty, to serve in support of U.S. forces in the Mideast crisis Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia or the Persian Gulf, will be retained in active status with the company for up to six months, to protect the employees wages and benefits not covered by their military service.

With the concurrence of the appropriate labor unions, for all represented employees, the company will pay the difference between military pay and benefits, based on an employee's wage experience for the prior six months of service with the company.

Lawrence A. Del Santo, chairman and chief executive officer of Lucky, said: ''We do not believe that any of our employees who are called to active duty, or their families, should suffer an economic hardship while serving their nation.

''In the event that the present crisis should extend beyond six months, and the President's authority to keep forces in the Mideast is renewed by Congress, we are prepared to revisit the problem at that time. However, we believe there is an immediate need to provide our employees and their loved ones with assurances that they will have our support now and be protected into the future.

''We encourage all others in the business community to join with Lucky in assuring employees who are called to serve that we, their employers, support them during this difficult period.''

PHOENIX (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Talley Industries Inc. (NYSE:TAL) Tuesday announced that the decision by General Motors Corp. to significantly increase the number of its U.S.-built cars equipped with air bags will have a major impact on Talley's receipt of air bag royalties.

The sale of Talley's air bag business to TRW Inc. in April 1989, resulted in a 12-year agreement that provides Talley with a royalty for every air bag sold in North America by any manufacturer, plus a royalty for every air bag sold worldwide by TRW.

''Our original projections indictated that the company could realize $190 million or more in royalties over the life of this contract,'' stated William H. Mallender, chairman. ''Consumer and automotive manufacturer acceptance of automotive air bags has developed faster than we anticipated. It is possible that this accelerated market demand will generate an additional $50 million to $75 million of royalties during the remaining 10-1/2 years of the royalty agreement.''

''Talley worked with General Motors in the initial air bag development program during the early 1970s. After years of involvement in the developmental stage, it is very gratifying to finally see that this important safety feature is becoming widely available to automotive customers,'' Mallender said.

''The effectiveness of air bags has been proven in crash situations with a demonstrated reduction in deaths and injuries,'' Mallender concluded.

Talley Industries is a diversified designer, manufacturer and supplier of aerospace, industrial and commercial products and services, including high-reliability electronic components and stainless steel rod and bar products.

Talley also invests in and develops real estate, primarily in the Phoenix area, and operates a federally chartered savings bank as an autonomous, wholly owned subsidiary, which specializes in serving the Asian population in the greater Los Angeles area.

TALLAHASSEE, FL (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - MHI Group Inc. (NYSE:MH) today announced results for the fiscal 1991 first quarter ended July 31, 1990.

For the three months ended July 31, 1990, revenues were $2,982,000 compared with $2,685,000 for the comparable period last year. Net income for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 was $228,000 or 2 cents per share as compared to $227,000 or 2 cents in the first quarter of fiscal 1990. Weighted average shares outstanding for the first three months of fiscal 1991 and fiscal 1990 were 15,151,239 and 12,753,796, respectively.

Fred O. Drake Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, commented, ''We are very pleased with MHI's revenue growth during the first quarter of our 1991 fiscal year. The two funeral homes and the cemetery that were acquired in April 1990 are showing progress, but to date have not had the impact we expect on the revenues and profits of the company. We expect these acquisitions to positively effect revenues and earnings during the second quarter. Revenue growth is also anticipated from the increase in pre-need sales associated with MHI's newly acquired cemetery in Okaloosa County.''

Drake continued, ''In addition, the company's trust funds under management have grown by nearly $700,000 during the quarter to approximately $22,200,000 at July 31, 1990, which bolsters future investment income. All of these events will continue to improve the company's performance in the remainder of the year.''

SAN FRANCISCO (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - URS Corp. (NYSE:URS) announced Tuesday commencement of an offering to qualified shareholders of nontransferable rights to purchase an aggregate of approximately 800,000 common shares at a price of $4.774 per share.

The rights will be exercisable until 5 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time on Sept. 27th.

URS agreed to make the rights offering in connection with a capital restructuring of the company that was otherwise completed on Feb. 21. SAN DIEGO, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Telios Pharmaceuticals Inc. Tuesday announced it has formed a long-term partnership with Ono Pharmaceutical Co. Ltd. of Osaka, Japan, to develop therapeutic products.

Backed by a significant equity investment from Ono, the agreement also includes several million dollars to develop drugs that block the abnormal tissue scarring involved in kidney inflammations, pulmonary fibrosis, liver cirrhosis and other fibrotic disorders. Financial details were not disclosed.

Under the agreement, Ono will fund Telios' research, development and clinical testing of drugs that inhibit a naturally occurring protein known as Transforming Growth Factor-Beta (TGF-b) in exchange for exclusive rights to manufacture and market the drugs in Japan, Taiwan and South Korea.

Telios will conduct clinical testing, and retain manufacturing and marketing rights in the United States and other territories.

Telios is also obligated to provide Ono the first choice of accepting or declining license rights, in the same countries, to all other human therapeutic products developed by Telios -- excluding blood-clot inhibitor drugs and Telio-Derm, a product designed to speed the healing of chronic wounds.

The partnership follows a previously announced, multimillion dollar agreement between the two firms aimed at developing the first product to treat ''dry eye,'' whereby inadequate production of tears results in damage to the cornea.

The agreement comes in the wake of a major discovery by scientists at the La Jolla Cancer Research Foundation and at the University of Utah School of Medicine showing that kidney disease scarring, the leading cause of chronic kidney failure, can be blocked by neutralizing the activity of TGF-b. Telios holds the rights to the findings, which were published in the July 26th issue of the British journal Nature.

Previous studies have shown that TGF-b helps to regulate the formation of the normal fibrous meshwork surrounding cells of the kidney and other body organs.

In diseases such as diabetes that result in chronic kidney failure, abnormal accummulation of this extracellular matrix is the basis of fibrotic scar tissue found in the kidney's filtration units which remove waste products and excess fluid from the body.

In the July study, conducted in rats, scientists found that kidney inflammations are tied to the increased production of TGF-b and the abnormal accumulation of fibrotic tissue. Researchers were then able to inactivate the growth factor's effects and prevent additional scar tissue from forming.

Based on these findings, Telios has already developed prototype drugs that inhibit TGF-b for treating tissue fibrosis in kidney diseases (glomerulonephritis), pulmonary fibrosis, liver cirrhosis and other fibrotic disorders. Telios estimates that the market for these applications of its TGF-beta inhibitors is in excess of $1 billion for the United States alone.

Founded in 1987, Telios Pharmaceuticals is developing therapeutic products based on the company's proprietary ''matrix-peptide'' technology in the areas of wound healing, biocompatible implants and cardiovascular disease.

Formed in 1717, Ono Pharmacetuical is one of Japan's oldest pharmaceutical companies, and is ranked as the third-fastest growing pharmaceutical manufacturer in that country.

FREMONT, Calif. (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Lam Research Corp. (NASDAQ:LRCX) reported Tuesday a net loss of $8.8 million, or 77 cents per share, for the fiscal year ended June 30, reflecting a previously announced special pre-tax charge of $18 million for the restructuring of its Gemini epitaxy operations.

A year ago the company reported net income of $9.3 million, or 84 cents per share.

Revenues for fiscal 1990 increased by 9 percent to $137.3 from $126 million a year earlier.

For the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, the company reported a net loss of $14.6 million, or $1.29 per share, compared with net income of $2.6 million, or 24 cents per share, for the like quarter last year. Revenues for the quarter decreased to $29.2 million, compared with $34.2 million in the like period of the previous year.

According to Roger Emerick, chairman and chief executive officer, ''Responding to the sharp decline in the epitaxy market, our strategic decision to phase-out production of the unprofitable Gemini epi systems will enhance our financial position going forward and allow us to focus our resources on our flagship etch products, as well as emerging opportunities in the chemical vapor deposition area.''

The company will continue to take orders for the Gemini systems during the phase-out and has booked $2.4 million in epitaxy orders during the past month.

Emerick further noted, ''We're committed to supporting our customers' near term epi sytems requirements, as well as providing superior on-going service and support to our large installed base of over 250 Gemini reactors.''

Commenting on fiscal 1990, Emerick said, ''We've managed through a complex year and have made some real accomplishments through our strategic alliances and the introduction of enhancements to our Rainbow etch products. Although we're seeing increased demand for those products both domestically and internationally, we remain cautiously optimistic about our near-term prospects in light of the U.S. economic uncertainty.''

The company's broad product offerings are focused on etch and deposition technologies, two of the most vital areas in the fabrication of current and future integrated circuits. MARLBORO, MA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Stratus Computer Inc. Tuesday announced that the Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication, S.W.I.F.T., has chosen fault-tolerant Stratus XA2000 Continuous Processing Systems as the basis of a new electronic file transfer service being offered to financial institutions worldwide.

S.W.I.F.T., which operates the world's largest financial telecommunications network, has placed an initial $2.3 million order for XA2000 Series 200 computers through Stratus Computer S.A., the company's Belgian subsidiary. The order marks a significant milestone in S.W.I.F.T's drive toward implementing its Interbank File Transfer (IFT) service, which will provide subscribers with a timely and secure way to transmit large volumes of information which previously had to travel by mail, fax, or telex.

The new service will focus on the transmission of general business data between financial institutions, such as accounting information, credit requests, and risk management information.

Brussels-based S.W.I.F.T. was originally established by its member banks to transmit payment messages across borders. By using Stratus systems as dedicated message-processing servers in its existing network, S.W.I.F.T. will enable financial institutions to automate the flow of general business information in addition to payment-related messages.

The potential user base for IFT includes major banks, securities firms, and other institutions who already use the S.W.I.F.T. network to exchange financial messages -- more than 2,900 users in 73 countries. Plans call for the initial IFT service to become available to users around end-1991.

Marben, a Paris-based software company specializing in Open Systems Interconnection (OSI) products, is providing the X.400 message handling software.

S.W.I.F.T. provides automated international processing and transmission services to financial institutions. The service is based on standardized message formats representing a broad variety of transactions. The computerized telecommunications network processes an average of 1.2 million messages daily between more than 2,900 users in 73 countries. Initially restricted to banks, the service was opened to non-bank institutions in 1987.

S.W.I.F.T. messages, which cover the full range of banking transactions including funds tranfers, foreign exchange, securities, and documentary credits, can be delivered on the system worldwide at a fraction of the cost of other media. The security of the information transmitted is guaranteed by a multilevel combination of physical, technical, and procedural features.

Stratus Computer Inc. is a leading supplier of fault-tolerant systems for critical online applications, such as online transaction processing and online data communications and telecommunications applications. The company offers the broadest range of fault-tolerant systems and maintains the highest standard for computer reliability.

One of the fastest-growing companies in the industry, Stratus reported revenues of $341.3 million for fiscal year 1989, up 29 percent from $265.3 million in 1988. The company, whose headquarters are in Marlboro, Mass., U.S.A., has 11 international subsidiaries. Stratus Computer Inc. Common Stock is traded via the New York Stock Exchange and the Boston Stock Exchange under the trading symbol SRA.

In fiscal 1989, the company reported a loss of $5,265,000, or 99 cents.

Steloff further stated, ''As previously reported, the company is proceeding with discussions with various parties regarding a capital infusion for the growth of the company.''

SANTA BARBARA, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced Computer Communications (ACC) Tuesday announced it has dropped the prices of its ACS Series 4000 products by 25 percent, strengthening the company's competitive position of offering the lowest-priced bridge/routers currently available.

''ACC has recently implemented a number of manufacturing efficiencies which allow us to pass cost savings on to our customers,'' stated Gary Krall, ACC's director of marketing. ''We haven't compromised quality. We're selling the same product with a full set of standard features that other companies sell as extras.''

According to Krall, ACC's reseller network is prepared to ship products within 14 days from the customer's order.

Previously listing for $7,500, the ACS 4100 hardware platform, now priced at $5,500, comes bundled with multiprotocol bridge/router software that lets users configure the unit as a bridge only, multiprotocol router, or combined bridge/router. ACC has also lowered the prices of its expandable ACS 4400 chassis, which supports the same multiprotocol bridge/router software as the ACS 4100.

ACS 4400 prices have been reduced as follows:

ACS 4400 (2 WAN and 1 LAN port) from $8,500 to $6,500;

ACS 4400 (4 WAN and 2 LAN ports) from $12,500 to $10,500;

ACS 4400 (6 WAN and 3 LAN ports) from $16,500 to $14,500;

ACS 4400 (8 WAN and 4 LAN ports) from $20,500 to $18,500.

When configured as a bridge/router, the ACS 4100 or ACS 4400 routes TCP/IP and DECnet protocols, and bridges all others. According to Krall, the company will be announcing the addition of new routing protocols at the upcoming Interop '90 trade show in San Jose, Calif., Oct. 8-12.

All Series 4000 products support industry standards such as 802.1 Spanning Tree Protocol, the Simple Network Management Protocol (SNMP), 802.3 standard Ethernet (10Base5), 802.3 Thinwire Ethernet (10Base2), Unshielded Twisted Pair (10Base-T).

Since its incorporation in 1975, ACC has been developing and manufacturing data communications hardware and software products that focus on customer needs. ROSEMONT, IL (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Comdisco Inc. (NYSE/M:CDO), the world's largest independent lessor and remarketer of high-technology equipment, Tuesday announced that Joseph A. Kafka, a senior vice president of marketing for Comdisco in the United States, has been promoted to senior vice president of Comdisco Europe, replacing Michael Joseph, who has left the company to pursue personal interests.

Kafka began with Comdisco in 1983, most recently serving as a senior vice president of marketing in the company's midwestern U.S. sales region. In his new capacity, Kafka will oversee the entire sales, marketing, operations and administrative functions for Comdisco's European division.

''After thirteen years with Comdisco in Europe, watching the division grow from one person to over two hundred, the mutual decision to separate was not an easy one,'' Joseph said.

''We are very sorry to see Mr. Joseph depart from the company,'' said Kenneth N. Pontikes, chairman of the board and president. ''He was our first employee in Europe, and throughout his years of service he has made many valuable contributions to our growth in the European marketplace.

''However, I am confident that Mr. Kafka will continue to facilitate the exceptional growth Comdisco has experienced in Europe in recent years. His breadth of experience in our U.S. markets and his keen understanding of high-tech leasing and remarketing make him the ideal person to manage the challenges we have set for ourselves in Europe,'' Pontikes said.

As evidence of its increased commitment to the European market, Comdisco announced that in recent months it has entered into agreements for additional European capital resources totalling in excess of $400 million (U.S. dollars).

The company said that it plans to continue to strengthen and enhance its primary European business centers in the United Kingdom, France, Germany, and the Netherlands, as well as its other European locations. In addition it plans to begin actively pursuing additional high-tech markets in Europe, parallelling the company's successes in the United States.

Separately, Comdisco also announced that it plans to open a new regional sales headquarters in Munich, Germany, in October of this year. ''We anticipate that our opportunities in Germany will continue to grow,'' Pontikes said. ''The opening of our new facility in Munich, as well as the hiring of additional sales personnel, will allow us to capitalize on these opportunities as they arise.''

In addition, Comdisco announced that by the end of 1990 it plans to relocate its United Kingdom headquarters into a new, larger facility due to its continued growth in that area. The facility's site has yet to be determined, but it will likely be somewhere in or near London. Comdisco's current United Kingdom headquarters is located in Cippenham, just outside of London.

Comdisco is primarily engaged in the buying, selling and leasing of new and used computer, telecommunications and other high-technology equipment. It also arranges related financings. The company, through a wholly owned subsidiary, also provides disaster recovery services to computer users in Europe, the United States and the Pacific Rim.

NEW YORK (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - In-Store Advertising, Inc. (NASDAQ:ISAN) Tuesday reported second quarter and six-month results for the period ended June 30, 1990.

For the second quarter of 1990, advertising revenues reached $5,274,400, a more than five-fold increase over the $994,051 reported for the second quarter of 1989. Income from operations was $863,725 in the 1990 second quarter versus an operating loss of $971,109 in the same period of 1989. The net loss for the second quarter of 1990 declined to $449,099 or $0.07 per share, compared to a net loss of $1,273,382 or $0.20 per share in the same period of 1989.

For the six months ended June 30, 1990, advertising revenues increased to $10,417,600, more than six times ahead of the $1,591,300 reported for the same period of 1989. Income from operations reached $1,927,714 for the first six months of 1990, compared to an operating loss of $1,734,082 in the same period of 1989. The net loss for the 1990 first half declined to $356,511 or $0.06 per share compared to a net loss of $2,258,902 or $0.35 per share for the first half of 1989.

The substantial increase in revenues for both periods reflects the expansion in the number of stores in which the Company's signs are installed from 741 at June 30, 1989 to 2,662 at June 30, 1990, and an increase in the number of product categories participating in the Company's program from 48 during the six months ended June 30, 1989, to 56 during the six months ended June 30, 1990.

Commenting on the results, Robert Polansky, President and Chief Executive Officer, said: ''Our achievements in the first half of the year represent significant progress towards our growth objective of reaching national advertiser status, which we believe is attainable at the penetration level of 8,400 stores. We are on schedule with our rollout into additional stores and are under contract to reach 3,600 stores by the end of 1990, and 6,000 stores by the end of 1991. Despite these achievements, the Company appears to be facing a slowdown in advertisers' commitments for the second half of 1990. Among the factors contributing to this slowdown are 1) delays in both the delivery to, and evaluation by, certain customers of product movement research that is expected to result in their participation in 1991 rather than the second half of 1990; 2) a general softening in the advertising market resulting in a lower level of funding for the Company's programs; and 3) an unexpected reticence on the part of some prospective customers to participate in the Company's program until more stores are installed. As a result, we expect revenues during the second half of 1990, as compared to the same period of 1989, to grow at a substantially lower rate than the five-fold increase in the first half of 1990 as compared to the same period in 1989, and we expect full year 1990 revenues to be substantially below analysts' projections.

Despite this softening in the second half of this year, we are confident that the foundation has been laid for growth in 1991. Strenthened by the receipt of approximately $40 million of net proceeds from our initial public offering, we will continue to implement our strategic plan and thereby increase our national presence and broaden our cutomer base.''

In-Store Advertising, Inc. delivers advertising and promotional messages from national consumer product companies to shoppers.

BEDFORD, England (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - NFC plc (AMEX:NFC), a leading international transport, logistics, property and services group, announced that for the 37 weeks ended June 16, 1990, its revenues rose to 1,102.6 million ($1,880.5 million -(a)), up 11% compared to the first 36 weeks of 1988/89. Despite reduced operating profit, NFC's pre-tax profit rose 4%. Earnings increased by 9% to 41.4 million ($70.6 million) and earnings per share rose 4% to 7.6p per share (13 per ADR, each representing 1 NFC Ordinary share).

Overseas, particularly in the U.S., NFC continued to grow strongly with the combined operating profit from Exel Logistics' and Home Services' overseas operations up 16% to 16.4 million ($28.0 million). Logistics continues to perform well and Home Services, despite depressed housing markets in the U.K. and elsewhere, was only marginally below last year's results.

Notwithstanding substantial reductions in the demand for package tours this year, Pickfords Travel succeeded in reducing its losses and the property business, Hyperion, produced overall profits ahead of last year, but it should be recognized that there is now a slowing down in the U.K. property market.

Transport division's performance continued to be affected by volume and margin pressures. Truck rental, car delivery and freight management were badly affected but this was offset in part by improved profits in contract hire and waste management.

Interest costs continue to be controlled by careful cash management, despite internationally higher interest rates, and at 4.7 million ($8.0 million) are 1.2 million ($2.0 million) lower than last year.

Profit sharing was reduced from 9.4 million to 2.9 million ($4.9 million) as a result of the lower operating profit. With the benefitof the lower charges for interest and profit-sharing, pre-tax profit increased to 55.9 million ($95.3 million) compared to 53.5 million ($91.2 million) in the first 36 weeks of 1988/89.

The directors have declared a fourth interim dividend of 1.15p per share, bringing the total for the year to 4.05p. The increase in dividends paid for the first 37 weeks reflects the special first interim dividend and the steps taken by the directors to even out quarterly dividend payments.

The dividend will be paid on December 17, 1990 to shareholders of record at November 1, 1990. The dollar amount of the dividend paid to ADR holders will depend on the sterling/dollar exchange rate prevailing on the date of payment.

SCHENECTADY, NY (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - General Electric announced Tuesday the receipt of an order of more than $200 million for an additional four MS7001F gas turbines to Korea Electric Power Corp. (KEPCO) of the Republic of Korea.

The new contract calls for the supply of gas and steam turbines for what will now by a 1,886-megawatt combined-cycle power plant to be built on Ildo, an Inchon Bay island west of Seoul.

Based on U.S. usage, a plant of the size would be large enough to power the city of Houston.

GE announced in June that it had signed a first contract worth more than $200 million with KEPCO to supply four STAG 107F combined-cycle units for a 943-megawatt power plant to be built on Ildo. This new contract doubles the size of the project, from four to eight GE STAG 107F combined-cycle units and brings GE's share of the entire project to more than $400 million.

Each GE STAG 107F unit uses one 150-megawatt-class GE MS7001F gas turbine-generator and one GE reheat steam turbine-generator rated at 83 megawatts. All eight gas turbines will be equipped with dry low NOx abatement technology while burning natural gas.

All equipment is to be shipped in 1991, with the plant to begin simple-cycle operation in the summer of 1992 and combined-cycle operation in December 1992.

GE's 7F recently exceeded its 150-megawatt rating during testing to become the most powerful 60-hertz gas turbine and the most extensively tested 150-megawatt-class gas turbine in the world.

The eight 7F gas turbines will be built at GE's Greenville, S.C., manufacturing facilities, while the steam turbines and generators will be manufactured at GE's facilities in Schenectady.

GE is the world's leading manufacturer and supplier of power generation systems and services, including steam turbines, gas turbines, STAG combined-cycle systems, cogeneration power equipment and a variety of uprate, upgrade and power plant maintenance programs.

SANTA CLARA, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - 3Com Corp. (NASDAQ:COMS) Tuesday announced its 3Server family of dedicated network servers will support Novell's NetWare 386 system software, giving customers the flexibility they need to meet the data networking demands of their growing businesses.

3Com already offers the company's 3+Open LAN Manager network operating system on 3Server products. 3Com and Novell's latest partnership will allow the NetWare 386 network operating system to run without alteration on products in either the 3Server/500 or 3Server/600 lines. No changes to 3Server hardware are needed to run the Novell software.

Support for Novell's software on 3Com's server platform is the most recent example of the companies' partnership to forge interoperability between their local area network (LAN) system products. This month 3Com also began shipping 3+Open Connection for NetWare, announced in June, which for the first time allows DOS workstations to communicate simultaneously with NetWare and LAN Manager servers.

The softwaredrivers allowing NetWare to run on 3Server will ship in the first calendar quarter of 1991. 3Com and its worldwide distribution partners will continue to support its servers; Novell and its resellers will support NetWare. Packaging will be announced early next year.

Making its server products still more versatile, 3Com also announced today it is shipping an optional add-in board for its Intel 80386-based 3Server/500 that gives the product Intel 80486 performance, and said it would ship the 3Server/600, with 80486 features already built in, within 45 days.

NEW YORK (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - IBM Tuesday began nationwide marketing of its new Personal System/1TM computer, a powerful, easy-to-use computer for the home that can be set up in minutes.

The move follows a two-month, kick-off in three metropolitan areas that ''exceeded our expectations,'' said James A. Cannavino, IBM vice president and general manager, Personal Systems.

Also announced today are: -- An affordable companion printer for the PS/1 that is very easy to use;

-- Availability of a PS/1 music option; and,

-- September availability of PROMENADESM, an on-line education and entertainment service available to PS/1 owners.

Members of the PS/1 team talked to hundreds of PS/1 buyers in the three metropolitan areas over the last 60 days, and found that the product's features, reliability, support and service are right on target.

In addition, there were some positive surprises: The easy-to-use PS/1 is finding a broader audience than expected among both advanced users and first-time users. And, buyers are showing greater preference than expected for the top-of-the-line PS/1 model. Eight out of 10 buyers chose the model that includes a hard disk drive and a color monitor.

With the national rollout, IBM today announced the IBM Personal System/1 Printer, a versatile companion printer for the PS/1 that offers letter-quality capability and is very easy to use, affordable and compact.

Like the PS/1, the 24-wire companion PS/1 printer and features are all packaged in one box, and setup takes only minutes. It also is supported by the same on-line help service available to PS/1 customers seven days a week, 18 hours a day through the PS/1 Users' Club on PRODIGYR.

The versatile IBM PS/1 Printer offers either letter-quality, draft, or high-resolution graphics modes, with a choice of four typestyles that print in seven sizes or ''pitches.'' Flexible paper handling allows the user to print on letterhead, while keeping the continuous form paper in place. It can easily produce envelopes and labels to go with professional-looking letters and reports. Multiple-page reports are easily handled with an Automatic Sheet Feed Option. The PS/1 Printer is priced at $449; the Automatic Feed Sheet Option is $199.

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - AEGON (NASDAQ:AEGNY), the international insurance group, Tuesday reported higher results for the first six months of 1990.

Despite the approximate Dfl 16 million effect on net income of windstorm damage claims, net income increased by 15.1% from Dfl 216.7 million to Dfl 249.4 million ($131 million (a). Excluding the effect of currency exchange developments the gain in net income would have been 17.1%.

Earnings per common share rose by 4.6% from Dfl 5.62 to Dfl 5.88 ($3.10). The negative effect of the storm damage amounted to Dfl 0.38 ($0.20) per share; without the storm damage claims the increase in net income per share would have been 11.4%. Another restraining factor on earnings per share growth was the 1989 rights issue; the dilutive effect of this will diminish over the course of 1990.

Compared to the first six months of 1989 consolidated revenues rose by 6.3% from Dfl 6,275 million to Dfl 6,673 million ($3,518 million). Excluding currency exchange rate influences, revenues rose by 11.3%. Annuity deposits -- not included in consolidated revenues -- rose by 2% from Dfl 1,292 million to Dfl 1,318 million ($695 million).

In the first six months of 1990 revenues of the Dutch insurance operations showed further growth, benefitting especially from higher life insurance premium and investment income. Revenues from accident & health insurance and general insurance operations remained at the same level as last year. Compared to last year, the contribution of the Dutch insurance operations to net income rose. Net income from life insurance showed further growth but, even excluding the effect of the storm damage claims, the results of general insurance lagged behind, especially in fire and automobile insurance lines.

The Friesch-Groningsche Hypotheekbank's results showed a further increase.

The acquisition of the Home Service Division of Washington National had a positive effect on AEGON USA's performance. Compared to the first six months of 1989, US revenues of both life insurance and accident & health insurance showed further increases. Life insurance net income improved but net income in group accident & health insurance was lower than expected.

AEGON is Holland's second largest insurer and one of the top thirty worldwide. Its extensive US interests are represented by AEGON USA, whose twelve operating divisions now conduct the nationwide activities formerly vested in Life Investors Inc. (Cedar Rapids, IA), Monumental Corp. (Baltimore, MD) and National Old Line (Little Rock, AR). Besides its NASDAQ listing in the US, AEGON shares trade on the Amsterdam, Tokyo, London and Zurich Basel and Geneva stock exchanges. MONROVIA, CA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - STAAR Surgical Co.'s management announced net earnings of $2,817,076, or 15 cents per share, mostly attributable to other income derived from the settlement of litigation concerning its patented ELASTIC LENS (TM) technology with Allergan Medical Optics (AMO) of Irvine; sale of the company's 50 percent ownership in NewLensCo to Cooper Companies of Palo Alto; and revenue from Chiron Ophthalmics Inc. of Irvine, associated with obtaining approvable status of the company's ELASTIC LENS (TM) from the Ophthalmic Panel of the Federal Drug Administration (FDA).

The company's earnings for the first six months of 1990 totaled $8,075,215 or 50 cents per share. ''The first six months of earnings along with a private placement of preferred stock in June 1990 increased the company's net equity from a negative $7,980,641 to a positive $1,541,324 on June 30, 1990,'' stated William C. Huddleston, the company's chief financial officer.

Operationally, revenues for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990, were fairly constant with the second quarter of 1989 at $1,129,916 vs. $1,122,122. Overall cost and expenses decreased 19 percent, primarily due to 57 percent reduction in cost of sales.

The primary reason for the significant decrease in cost of sales was the company reserved a lesser amount for unsold inventory in the second quarter of 1990 compared with the second quarter of 1989, which was made possible by more selective inventory production in 1990.

This decrease in cost was offset by a 26 percent increase in general & administrative expenses which was the result of continued litigation on the management control issues and continued expenses associated with the clean-up of patent infringment and other litigated items.

Research and development expenses were up 21 percent for the three months ended June 30, 1990, compared with the three months ended June 30, 1989, primarily because of additional work being accomplished on ultraviolet materials and continued research in preparation of the company's ELASTIC (TM) and ELASTIMIDE (TM) LENSES final approval by the FDA.

STAAR, a publicly traded company founded in 1982, develops, manufactures and markets products for small-incision surgery, primarily for use in cataract procedures.

CHANTILLY, VA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - VERDIX Corp. (NASDAQ: VRDX) Tuesday announced that its VERDIX Secure Local Area Network (VSLAN) is now certified as a B2 Multi-Level Secure (MLS) Network by the National Computer Security Center.

The VSLAN is the first and only network product to reach this milestone.

Multi-Level Security can mean substantial cost savings for secure systems and substantial convenience for the users of those systems. VSLAN can replace the numerous redundant LANs which were previously required to keep different levels of data separated. VSLAN alleviates the practice of clearing all users to the clearance required for most secure data on the system.

And, VSLAN replaces the ''sneaker net'' -- the practice of transferring data between secure systems by carrying disks back and forth.

VSLAN, a B2 MLS network, interconnects different computers (PCs, workstations, minis) and allows personnel operating a different levels of security clearances to interact with a common database. It supports Ethernet Network Protocol and is compatible with all standard operating systems (Unix, VMS, DOS, etc., and higher level protocols.

The VSLAN is designed to be used by Department of Defense agencies, the intelligence community and government contractors who are building secure computer and communications systems to meet the government mandate for protection of classified and sensitive information. The VSLAN security features are also applicable to the networks in other federal government agencies, financial institutions and Fortune 1000 corporations.

The VSLAN has been installed at several DoD contractors' facilities, at U.S. Air Force and Mitre facilities. It has been accepted as a MLS Network Component for the DoD MLS TEstbed managed by the Defense Communications Agency, DoD and the Joint Staff Office.

The company reported revenue of $15,223,183 for the quarter ended Aug. 3, 1990, compared to revenue of $11,905,261 for the quarter ended Aug. 4, 1989, an increase of approximately 27.9 percent. Income before preferred stock dividends and extraordinary credit was $174,527 compared to $71,437 for the quarter ended Aug. 4, 1989, an increase of approximately 144.3 percent. Both primary and fully diluted income per common share before extraordinary credit was 2 cents for the current period vs. break-even for the prior comparable period.

The San Antonio-based chain of off-price apparel retail stores reported revenue of $30,728,548 for the 26 week period ended Aug. 3, 1990, compared to revenue of $24,665,347 for the comparable prior year period ended Aug. 4, 1989, an increase of approximately 24.6 percent.

Income before preferred stock dividends and extraordinary credit was $747,356 for the current 26 week period compared to $500,849 for the comparable prior year period, an increase of approximately 49.2 percent. Fully diluted income per common share before extraordinary credit was 14 cents per the current period compared to 11 cents for the prior comparable period.

For the quarter and six months ended Aug. 4, 1989, the extraordinary credit-tax benefit resulting from the utilization of operating loss carryforwards was $36,500 and $258,000, respectively. The company no longer has operating loss carryforwards.

Charles Siegel, president and chief executive officer of the 41-store chain, explained that second quarter revenues and income continued to exceed budgeted expectations. Siegel stated that the company's improved performance is largely due to higher sales, primarily as a result of the openings of additional 50-OFF stores and to better sales-per-store performances. Comparable store sales for the quarter were up by 4.7 percent.

Siegel added that the company's newest store, just opened Aug. 23, 1990, in Shreveport, La., and its first store in that state, was the most successful opening in terms of sales performance since the company opened its first 50-OFF store in February 1986. He also reported strong August sales in connection with the back-to-school selling season, significantly exceeding projections for the current season as well as last year.

ASHLAND, KY (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Addington Resources (NASDAQ/NMS:ADDR) Chairman Larry Addington announced Tuesday the construction of a $4 million recycling facility in eastern Kentucky, the first of many which the company intends to build in the U.S.

At the same time, Addington released an offer to settle litigation against its landfill subsidiary, Green Valley Environmental Corp., including an offer to reduce the landfill size and a written guarantee not to accept East Coast garbage.

The recycling facility, which will be constructed and operated by Addington Environmental Inc., is capable of recycling up to 75 percent of municipal solid waste, Addington said. Addington Environmental is a subsidiary of Addington Resources Inc. The system relies primarily on automation, as opposed to hand-sorting, to separate the waste stream into reusable components.

The facility will be the first major recycling operation in Kentucky, Addington said. The state currently generates about 4.6 million tons of solid waste annually.

The recycling facility, which is initially designed to handle 400 tons of solid waste per day but can be expanded to handle up to 1,000 tons per day is located in Boyd County, Ky., about three miles from the Green Valley Landfill.

Green Valley constructed the first phase of its landfill in 1989, but a Circuit Court judge ruled in January 1990 that the landfill could not open until landfill opponents were given the opportunity for additional hearings.

The chief complaint from landfill opponents has been the size of the landfill and their fear that it would be used for disposal of large volumes of garbage from New York, New Jersey and other eastern states, where landfill space is limited.

Addington said he would be willing to limit the source of garbage to Kentucky and a 75-mile radius of the landfill. He said an area of that size would insure that the recycling facility and landfill could be operated profitably and would help keep the cost of disposal for the community low.

In addition to its environmental operations, Addington Resources Inc. mines and markets coal and is engaged in contracting and highway construction operations.

CLEVELAND (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Ameritrust Corporation today announced the election of Craig R. Smith as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer on an interim basis of the $11 billion multi-bank holding company and James D. Rode as Chief Operating Officer of the holding company and Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of its principal banking subsidiary.

At the same time, Ameritrust said that Jerry V. Jarrett has resigned as Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and as Director of both the Corporation and the Bank. Jarrett said, ''I have subscribed to a philosophy for many years that says that when one does not feel good about coming to work every morning, one should quit and move on to something else. That time has come.'' Mr. Smith said, ''Jerry has served the Bank faithfully for many years. We sincerely thank him for his service to Ameritrust.''

Smith, 65, has been an Ameritrust Director since 1980. He has been particularly active in Ameritrust operations over the last several months as Chairman of the special Board committee established to focus on credit quality concerns. He said that becoming Ameritrust's chief executive during this transition period for the Corporation was a logical extension of his role on that committee.

Smith also announced that at his suggestion Ameritrust had retained Thomas R. Williams as a consultant to assist the organization. Williams has spent a quarter-century in banking, and is the retired Chairman of the First Wachovia Corp.

A native Clevelander, Smith has previously served as chairman and chief executive of The Warner & Swasey Company, Cleveland, and more recently, Ransburg Corporation, Indianapolis.

Rode, 42, has been President of both Ameritrust and the Bank and a Director of each since 1983. He first joined Ameritrust in 1969. A lifelong resident of the Cleveland area, Rode is active in a number of civic organizations, including serving on the Boards of Trustees of Case Western Reserve University and University Hospitals.

Williams, 61, began his banking career in Cleveland with National City

Bank in 1965, rising to executive vice president. He left NCB in 1972 to become President and subsequently Chairman of First Atlanta Corporation, which was merged with First Wachovia in 1987.

CHESTNUT HILL, MA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Designs Inc. (NASDAQ:DESI), operator of specialty retail stores that sell exclusively Levi Strauss & Co. clothing and accessories, announced today its financial results for the second quarter ended July 28, 1990.

Sales for the quarter rose to $25.1 million, compared with $15.1 million a year ago, a 66 percent increase. For the first six months of the fiscal year, sales were $44.7 million compared with $27.2 million, representing an increase of 64 percent. Comparable store sales, those 59 stores open a full fiscal year, increased 20 percent for the quarter and 14 percent for the year to date.

Gross margin rate (including the costs of occupancy) for the quarter was 27 percent, the same as a year ago. For the first half of the fiscal year the gross margin rate increased to 26 percent from 25 percent. This increase was made possible by the continued favorable impact the stronger sales have had on our fixed occupancy costs as a percent to sales. In addition, continued attention to both operating and overhead costs has also resulted in a favorable impact on earnings.

Net loss for the quarter was $381,000 or 8 cents per share compared with a net loss of $866,000 or 17 cents per share for the second quarter last year. For the first six months the net loss decreased to $1.4 million or 28 cents per share from $2.0 million or 40 cents per share in the prior year.

In reporting the results, Geoffrey M. Holczer, treasurer and chief financial officer, noted: ''The reduced net loss for the quarter and year to date reflect the continued favorable impact of the merchandising strategy we implemented last fall combined with a number of successful store openings. As we head into our traditionally strong third and fourth quarters, we look for these improvements in sales and earnings to continue.''

Designs Inc.'s 69 traditional stores and 28 outlet stores sell exclusively Levi Strauss & Co. clothing and accessories under the ''Designs exclusively Levi Strauss & Co.'' and ''Specials exclusively Levi Strauss & Co.'' names. The stores are located in enclosed regional shopping malls and outlet parks in 26 states throughout the eastern half of the country.

Total revenues for the twelve months increased 46 percent to $14,690,000, up from $10,051,000 in the twelve months ended June 30, 1989.

Net income for the fourth quarter ended June 30, 1990, increased 10 percent to $529,000, or 12 cents per share, compared with net income of $482,000, or 12 cents per share for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989.

Fourth quarter revenues increased 14 percent to $3,723,000, from $3,268,000 in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989.

LUNAR completed its initial public offering of 1,250,000 shares of common stock at $12 per share on August 21. Of the 1,250,000 shares sold, 1 million were sold by the company and 250,000 by shareholders. $2,800,000 of the company proceeds were used to repay long-term debt and the balance was invested in short term securities to be used for general corporate purposes.

LUNAR develops products for the diagnosis, monitoring, and treatment of osteoporosis and other metabolic bone diseases. The company develops and sells bone densitometers, which are specialized scanning systems used to aid in the diagnosis of bone disease by measuring the density of bone.

The company is developing a drug, one alpha-D2, for the treatment of osteoporosis and is currently conducting Phase I clinical trials on osteoporotic patients.

Dr. Mazess, president, noted that recent six-month results of a clinical trial in osteoporotic patients confirmed earlier short-term findings that patients tolerate one alpha-D2 at levels several times higher than other vitamin D analogues.

Previous studies showed other vitamin D analogues were effective but not well tolerated at higher doses. One such analog, one alpha-D3, is widely used in Japan.

Vitamin D analogues are thought to stimulate new bone formation in contrast to most therapies for osteoporosis (bisphosphonates, estrogens), which inhibit bone loss.

WESTBOROUGH, MA (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - A survey of IBM Business Partners reveals faster growth in sales of Unix systems than some analysts had earlier predicted, as well as widespread acceptance of PC-based Local Area Networks (LANs).

Fully two-thirds of those responding plan to be involved in PC or LAN sales this year, and 53 percent said they intend to sell the RS/6000, IBM's new high-end Unix workstation.

These were among the results of research commissioned by The IBM Business Partner, an independent monthly newsletter from Sentry Publishing Co. The results appear in the current issue, and a complete report will be available in the fourth quarter. The Sentry survey is the first formal research of Business Partner marketing patterns.

The IBM Business Partner is aimed at the approximately 3,500 independent firms which develop software or add-on hardware for IBM's mid-range computer systems.

The apparent success of the RS/6000 Unix system follows an earlier failure the PC/RT, according to Edward J. Bride, vice president and editorial director of Sentry Publishing Co. "This time IBM did its homework far in advance," he said.

"By the time of introduction there were more than 350 software products immediately available or coming shortly. IBM recognizes that it takes software to sell hardware. Its Business Partners program is evidence of that belief; IBM is learning to use the program well."

Bride estimated that IBM Business Partners are involved with sales that account for about 50 percent of IBM's total mid-range system revenues. "Clearly the system is working, both for the Business Partners and for IBM " said Bride.

"Our research indicates that most Business Partners want to expand the number of hardware platforms they support and the number of specific relationship arrangements they have with IBM."

The IBM Business Partner is a monthly newletter available by subscription at $297 per year. Additional information is available from Sentry Publishing Co. Inc., 1900 West Park Dr., Westborough, MA 01581, (508) 366-2031 or fax (508) 366-8104.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. (AUG. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - The U.S. Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday issued an opinion upholding the right of the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) to override Arkansas state bank branching laws in connection with the proposed sale of certain assets and liabilities of Independence Federal Bank, FSB (Independence) to Worthen Bank & Trust Co.,

N.A. (ASE:WOR)

The opinion reverses the ruling of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas entered on July 9, 1990, holding that the RTC did not have authority to override Arkansas state bank branching laws. Worthen expects that the ruling will permit it to acquire Independence from the RTC within the next several weeks.

On June 21, 1990, Worthen Bank submitted a winning bid of $1.5 million for the acquisition of Independence, which includes approximately $324 million in deposits. The acquisition, once consummated, would give Worthen Bank total assets of approximately $942 million and Worthen Banking Corp. total assets off approximately $2.1 billion.

Curt Bradbury, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Worthen Banking Corp., said, ''We are strongly committed to assisting in the resolution of the S&L crisis in Arkansas and consider our opportunity to purchase Independence to be a beneficial stablizing force for the financial services segment of our economy.

''We consider today's ruling to be a significant victory for the taxpayers of the United States. I have spoken repeatedly of the integral relationship of our banks to the economic development of the communities we serve. When any Arkansas financial institution is in an unstable or uncertain position it affects not only their customers, but the entire economic structure of a community or state.

''We are excited that the Eighth Circuit Court has ruled that the RTC does have the authority to override state banking restrictions. We view this decision as a positive step in moving Arkansas' banking industry into the 90's in a way that allows us to keep pace with and be part of the growth as it occurs throughout our state.

The building of productive capacity in banking is as important for the future of the state of Arkansas as is the development of its other industries. We at Worthen are excited about the prospect of working with the RTC toward an orderly transfer of certain assets and deposit liabilities from Independence to Worthen and about the prospect of having the opportunity to serve over 20,000 new individual customers and several new market areas within the State of Arkansas.''
